Strikes Protest Pro-Soviet Stand

Press Gag Crucial —Dubcek

By KARL E. MEYER
The Washington Post

PRAGUE — Czechoslovak Communist leader Alexander Dubcek reportedly told the central committee of his party this week that he was to blame for not taking measures against "excesses" in the Czech press before the Soviet invasion of his country last Aug. 21.

At the same time, Dubcek was understood to have held his ground on the crucial question of party organization, saying that he would not favor reducing the size of the Czechoslovakian party despite Russian criticism that it is too big.

According to reliable sources, Dubcek at one point quoted Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev as bluntly informing Czech leaders last August, "1,200,000 members are too much."

These key points about Dubcek's secret speech were learned Friday as the central committee continued its tense debates in meeting that could determine how much of the Dubcek regime's liberalizing program will survive Russian occupation.

PRESS CONTROL

It appeared that Czech leaders were prepared to make the greatest concessions in the area of press control, while mounting the greatest resistance to demands for reducing liberal-minded representation in the party itself.

This tendency was reflected in the text of a draft resolution which the central committee will vote upon tonight when the meeting ends.

The resolution reportedly repeats that main points of Dubcek's keynote speech with the important difference that seven Czechoslovak publications are explicitly censured for "tolerating" anti-communist articles.

DUBCEK
. . . admits 'failure'.

Tension Mounts In Czech Crisis

PRAGUE (AP)—Protest strikes were reported in suburban Prague and in Olomouc, central Moravia, as Czechoslovakia's Communist leaders waged a power struggle with pro-Soviet hardliners behind closed doors.

It was not immediately learned what action, if any, authorities planned to take. The government has banned demonstrations to try to maintain calm during a crucial party central committee meeting, now in its second day.

Czechoslovak military policemen with sub-machine-guns patrolled Prague streets and informants said the Czechoslovak army's 6,000-man Prague garrison was placed on the alert and all leaves cancelled.

Armored personnel carriers were noticed at one of the small Soviet military command posts in the city, but there was no confirmation of rumors that some Soviet units had returned to Prague from permanent camps in outlying areas.

Student leaders said the reports of army and police alerts made them realize that demonstrations would be suicidal. They announced plans for peaceful sit-ins, starting Sunday—one for a day to protest the ban on demonstrations, and another for up to three days if the central committee decisions are unfavorable.

ADOPT RESOLUTION

Numerous departments of Charles University in Prague also adopted a resolution to join factory workers immediately if the workers decide to demonstrate for political reasons.

Snatches of arguments in the 190-member central committee, released by radio and television, indicated Dubcek's supporters were fighting to defend his reform policies against attacks by hard-liners. Some members angrily demanded to know what leaders had invited the Soviets to invade their country for the purpose of quelling "counter-revolution." Many Czechoslovaks feared they were the dying gasps of free discussion.

Dubcek was reported to have announced new allegiance to "democratic centralism," the orthodox Communist principle that debate stops once the decision is made.

The decision in this case, the final resolution of the central committee, is due Sunday at the earliest.

More than 100 of the 140 members who had asked to speak remained to be heard from in the closed central committee meeting at Prague Castle.

Evzen Erban, head of the National Council, urged Friday "disciplined implementation" of the final central committee decisions.

'MAKES BLOOD BOIL'

Prof. Ivan Malek, director of the Prague Microbiological Institute, said the continued distribution of Soviet propaganda material containing distorted information and lies "makes people's blood boil."

Frantisek Pavlicek, manager of the Vinohrady Theatre in Prague, demanded to know what members of the central committee or government had invited the Soviet Union and other Warsaw pact countries to invade Czechoslovakia in August. The Soviets had said Czechoslovak Communists asked for outside help.

Josef Smrkovsky, National Assembly president, said Czechoslovak reformers had failed to

France Closes Ranks With NATO Allies

BRUSSELS (CP) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization today urged Russia, in the interests of world peace, to refrain from using force and interfering in the affairs of other states, a communique announced.

The communique, issued after a two-day meeting of the NATO ministerial council, added: "Determined to safeguard the freedom and independence of their countries, they (the members of NATO) could not remain indifferent to any development which endangers their security.

"Clearly any Soviet intervention directly or indirectly affecting the situation in Europe or in the Mediterranean would create an international crisis with grave consequences."

The warning to Moscow was endorsed by all members of the alliance including France.

The two-day meeting ended with publication of the communique and a NATO spokesman said it had been approved by all delegations.

This was taken as an indication France had closed ranks with its allies following the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia.

SOLIDARITY NEEDED

The communique said: "So long as the Soviet leaders adhere to a policy of force, these new uncertainties will remain. The allies are convinced that their political solidarity remains indispensable to discourage aggression and other forms of oppression.

"Above all, they stand wholly determined to meet their common responsibilities and in accordance with the North Atlantic treaty, to defend the members of the alliance against any armed attack."

The communique said that the use of force and the stationing in Czechoslovakia of Soviet forces not hitherto deployed there aroused grave uncertainty about the calculations and intentions of the Soviet Union and demanded great vigilance on the part of NATO allies.

It said that the new uncertainties resulting from recent Soviet actions also extended to the Mediterranean basin.

"This situation requires that the Allies continue by every available means their efforts to promote stability and a just and equitable peace, as well as mutual co-operation and understandings, in the area.

"The expansion of Soviet activity in the Mediterranean, including the increased presence of Soviet naval units, requires vigilance to safeguard Allied security."

AIMED AT RUSSIA

The statement apparently was aimed at discouraging the Soviets from pursuing their "socialist commonwealth" doctrine.

Under this concept the Soviets could intervene militarily in a Communist country whenever they feel the interests of world communism are in danger, as they did last August in Czechoslovakia.

Informants said Friday there is evidence the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia caused widespread dismay among French officials.

President de Gaulle said two years ago French troops would no longer participate in the peacetime integration of NATO forces although he has repeatedly reaffirmed France's fidelity to the alliance and said French troops would fight alongside the Allies in a war.

Although de Gaulle withdrew two divisions in West Germany from Allied control in 1966, the troops have remained in West Germany under a special agreement with the Bonn government.

NEW ALERT LINK ORDERED BY NATO

BRUSSELS (Reuters)—A reserve communications system is being built somewhere in England to back up a communications system linking allied capitals with NATO headquarters in Brussels, informed sources said today.

The sources said it will be 12 to 18 months before the backup system is ready for operation. They declined to name the location for security reasons.

Red Feather Fund Exceeds $500,000

New hope that the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal's target might still be reached was voiced Friday by campaign chairman Robert Hutchison.

Following his statement Thursday that the appeal will probably fall $40,000 short of its $655,000 goal, B.C. government employees turned in $19,000, cutting the projected deficit by some $2,000.

Mr. Hutchison said he had expected about $17,000 from the government employees and that he was pleasantly surprised by the $2,000 "bonus."

"If more people begin to respond like this, and I think many will, we will come a lot closer to the goal than we thought."

The goal "is not completely out of reach" if the canvassers and the community can get together during the campaign's final surge, he said.

Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria emphasized this Friday when he urged Victoria citizens to support the appeal.

"If there exists any one test of a community's true character and conscience it will surely be found in its annual response to the United Appeal," he said.

HUMAN VIRTUES

If we fail to meet this test, he added, we would be branded "as a people lacking in those human virtues which respond impulsively and generously to the needs of our less fortunate fellow men and women."

"God forbid we should be found lacking in answering that simple challenge."

To date $517,755 or 79 per cent of the $655,000 objective has been collected.

Weatherman Snow Job?

Up at the Gonzales weather office they're saying there isn't much chance of snow.

On the other hand, there's been a powder of snow on Salt Spring this week above the 700-foot level, also at Crofton, and Friday there was mixed snow and rain at Cassidy.

Just on a hunch we asked the weatherman whether he'd put anti-freeze in his car yet.

"Yep, yesterday . . . snow tires, too."

Bankers Face Money Crisis In Gold Rush

LONDON (AP) — Anxiety about the French franc rubbed off on the United States dollar and the British pound today as the world's top bankers assembled in Basel, Switzerland, to discuss a growing monetary crisis.

Speculators rushed to get rid of francs, dollars and pounds, switching to gold, commodities and the West German mark, currently rated the safest of all paper money.

Financial commentators here said the market activity was the most fevered since the pound sterling was devalued exactly a year ago, despite official assurances that the franc will not be devalued.

SUPPORT SOUGHT

The meeting in Basel was to be a routine monthly session of central European bankers. But there have been persistent rumors that the West German mark will be revalued upward from its present level of about 25 American cents. France is expected to seek massive international support for the franc.

Swiss bankers reported they were inundated with orders for the West German marks. The Financial Times reported the French money market was showing signs of panic, with private banks cleared out of marks and Swiss francs.

One factor acting against the franc was fear that France may bring back exchange control, causing the rush to switch to other freely-convertible currencies or commodities. The French finance ministry denied it is even considering exchange control.

Another factor was the rise in the French cost of living, now running at five per cent a year.

Three Teenage Girls Drown as Car Flips

LANGLEY (CP)—Three teen-age girls were killed Friday night when the car they were riding in spun off the Fraser Highway in Langley and landed upside down in a ditch filled with rain water.

Police said the water measured up to four feet deep.

Three other youths who were in the car were taken to hospital with minor injuries.

The victims were Sandra Ellen Jenkins, 16, of Surrey; Jenny Theresa Koopman, 13, of Langley, and Sandra Marie Schmitke, 20, of Calgary.

Miss Schmitke, driver of the car, was visiting her parents in Surrey.

RC BISHOPS CONDEMN U.S. 'WAR SYSTEM'

By WILLIAM R. MACKAYE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Roman Catholic bishops Friday denounced the nuclear arms race as "irrational," and urged the government to abandon "the present international war system."

They urged the substitution of massive support for worldwide economic development.

Development, the prelates wrote in an echo of Pope Paul VI, is "the modern word for peace."

In a dramatic and skeptical critique of the present assumptions of U.S. national defence policy, comprising the second half of their pastoral letter, the bishops:

● Advocated outright abolition of the peacetime draft in favor of a volunteer army.

● Denounced the administration's decision to build an anti-ballistic system and suggested that efforts to maintain nuclear superiority are no longer "meaningful for security."

● Appealed to the United States and other nations to abandon "the present international war system," in both its hot and cold forms.

Addressing themselves specifically to the war in Vietnam, the bishops said they welcomed the bombing halt and prayed for the success of the peace negotiations.

One moral lesson to be drawn from that conflict, they suggested, is that "military power and technology do not suffice, even with the strongest resolve, to restore order or accomplish peace."

Another lesson, they said, might be that "some evils existing in the world . . . under-nutrition, economic frustration, social stagnation and political injustices, might be more readily . . . corrected through non-military means, rather than by military efforts to counteract the subversive forces bent on their exploitation."

In a second proposal on draft law, the bishops endorsed the principle of selective conscientious objection.

They said U.S. law should permit men "to refuse—without fear of imprisonment or loss of citizenship—to serve in wars which they consider unjust or in branches of service (e.g., the strategic nuclear forces) which would subject them to the performance of actions contrary to deeply held moral convictions about indiscriminate killing."

ULBRICHT

East Germans Delay New Berlin Crisis

By DAN MORGAN
The Washington Post

BONN — The East German regime of Walter Ulbricht, inscrutable and unpredictable as ever, chose Friday against ushering in a new Berlin crisis—at least for the moment.

However, Allied and West German sources here are of the opinion that the delay may have been mainly tactical and almost certainly does not reflect any political demobilization in Ulbricht's 11-month-old pressure campaign against the city.

Confounding fears of the Allied authorities, the East German parliament (Volkskammer) met and adjourned Friday without taking any new actions against the city. Fears that Friday was the day for a new step in the Berlin war of nerves were nourished by public statements of East German officials and by private leaks from East German sources.

But the Volkskammer merely hurried through a routine agenda and heard Premier Willy Stoph routinely belittle the "hostile" government in Bonn and stress East Germany's peaceful policies in Europe.

The attention given to possible actions against West Berlin was proof of the changed climate of opinion in Germany and in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization since the East Germans suddenly imposed controls and levies on the movement of people and goods to and from the isolated city in June. At that time, the tendency both in Washington and Bonn was to give the Communists in East Berlin the benefit of the doubt and submit to the measures in the interest of preserving progress toward detente.

Waring Runs For Saanich Council Seat

Frank Waring, a member of Saanich Planning Commission, today announced he will run for Saanich council a second time.

He was a close runner-up to succeesful candidate William A. (Sandy) Noel in the 1967 election.

"The support I received then encourages me to have another try," Mr. Waring said.

A life-long resident of Saanich, Mr. Waring is Victoria branch manager of E. B. Horsman and Son, wholesale electrical suppliers.

"I'm a busy mand and I'm not looking for something to do," he said. "But I think people in business should be prepared to give their ideas and the benefit of their experience to the community.

"Saanich is in an extremely critical period of its growth, particularly as regards the proper use of land in planning for the future."

Mr. Waring is a past-president of Victoria Electric Club; a former director and vice-president of Victoria Rotary Club, and was for six years a warden of St. George's Anglican Church.

He served throughout the Second World War with the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Trails For Health, Doctor Goal

Development of a trail along the Saanich peninsula "in the interest of public health and recreation" has been proposed by a Sidney doctor.

The proposal made to Central and North Saanich councils is expected to be referred to the regional parks board.

Dr. A. G. Moffoot says:

"Trails should be developed by all communities to encourage people to get out of their cars and walk. Walking is one of the most important but most neglected forms of recreation in this province."

Countries where people walk more suffer less heart trouble. Portugal is an outstanding example, he said.

"I believe, too, that the large increase in back ailments is due to the lack of exercise."

AWAKEN INTEREST

His proposal is backed by Tony Roberts, director of the capital region planning board, and Herb Warren, president of the Victoria Outdoor Club, and Community Planning Association of Canada officials.

John Noble, superintendent of Brannan Lake School, Nanaimo, who has taken a keen interest in the subject, advocates a campaign to awaken the public to the need for trails.

"B.C. has more resources than any other province, but makes no use of them," he said. "young people today suffer from boredom—there is no challenge."

He urged businessmen, community leaders, clubs and recreational groups to get behind a trail development program for the whole province.

"It's going to cost us plenty if we do nothing about this matter," he said. "Other countries have realized the importance of promoting this form of recreation."

First Bid for NDP Reins Won't Hurt Second—Berger

By JOHN MIKA

MLA Tom Berger Friday said he thinks there is still some resentment against his first challenge two years ago but it won't hamper his second bid for NDP leadership.

He told reporters here that he openly said it was time for a change in 1967 and the party disagreed with him but the current contest touched off by Robert Strachan's announced retirement "is a whole new ball game."

"There is still some resentment among the membership that I challenged Bob in 1967 but I don't think this will make any real difference in the result of this campaign," he said.

"The decision will be made on grounds that we must have the best man to lead—not on the basis of old resentments."

The 35-year-old lawyer said he would give up his practice and devote himself full time to the leadership if he is successful at the April convention but he said age should not be the crucial criterion of political service.

LOOK AT BENNETT

"I don't believe that you can argue Mr. Bennett should retire just because he's 68 years old," he said.

"I don't think the NDP should choose a new leader just because he happens to be young.

"I think what's important is a man's capacity for creative politics.

"I think that the people at the next election will opt for creative politics and reject the old politics that Mr. Bennett has stood for."

DESTROY MYTH

He said it was time to destroy the myth that a socialist administration would choke the province with red tape and make people understand that an NDP government is the public's only hope of protecting the individual from the impersonal domination of government apparatus.

He said one of his goals is to introduce an "open file" system into the bureaucracy and abolishing the present system in which the government keeps secret its dossiers on companies and individuals.

Under the open file system, a social welfare applicant or a hotel owner seeking a liquor licence would have the right to examine any document on his case which was being consulted by a government official in arriving at decision.

He said this system was used in Sweden—which he visited last year—and is believed to be even more important than the ombudsman in protecting citizens from unfair decisions.

China Wheat Sale Eases Farm Crisis

WINNIPEG (CP) — The $106,000,000 wheat sale to China adds a bit of sunshine to a cloudy year for Prairie farmers and comes during one of the most critical periods in many years.

Friday's sale will "help Canada keep ahead of last year's performance and in so doing improve the position of both the western producer and the Canadian economy," said G. H. Sellers, president of the Federal Grain Co.

NDP Aspirant Would Scrap UBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dave Barrett, candidate for the provincial NDP leadership, said Friday he advocates decentralization of higher education in British Columbia and abandonment of the University of British Columbia.

Speaking to a group of students at UBC, the 38-year-old social worker and MLA for Coquitlam said:

"Both major universities in Greater Vancouver are overcrowded and yet the government embarks on a program of junior colleges.

"Higher education must be decentralized immediately in this province. I believe this complex you have here must be abandoned now."

RAMBLING OF A HAPPY MAN

How voices vary. Some are quiet, and so pleasant. (Surely on'e character is in the voice, to a degree). Others so loud and dictatorial. I think of one watering a pansy patch with a water-bomber!
Pleasant to see, pleasant to hear, our feathered friends!

War Vets Remember The Day It Was Over

The day the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles marched into Mons with the band playing the Marseilles was recalled at a reunion of 47 Canadian Mounted Rifles veterans from Victoria, Vancouver and Nanaimo.

It was the day after the signing of the Armistice on Nov. 11, 1918.

"We made many friends in Mons and some of us corresponded with them for years after," said Victoria veteran Gus Sivertz, a former writer for the Victoria Daily Times.

Around 11 a.m. on Nov. 11, Mr. Sivertz handed the Armistice telegram to the commander of the unit.

He threw it on the floor and cried: "Bloody fools! They should have let us go on. Now your children and mine will have to fight this war again in about 20 years' time."

Mr. Sivertz said two members of the 2nd Canadian Rifles won Victoria Crosses — Major - Gen. G. R. Pearkes at Passchendale and Major John MacGregor at Cambrai.

Another veteran, Jack Johnson of Nanaimo, was called a "two-war liar" because he dropped his age to get into both the First and Second World Wars.

The CMRs are proud of the fact that, of 4,552 men in the unit, only three were taken prisoner during four years of war.

"outrun the post-January developments in such a way as to permit the party to influence them more systematically."

The result, he said, was that from the outside Prague's reforms appeared "more as a negation of more liberalization than truly revolutionary reshaping and fulfilment of socialism," and this caused great anxiety in the Soviet Communist camp.

Interior Minister Jan Pelnar criticized the Dubcek course for not showing enough "political courage" to root out anti-socialist forces. Another government member attacked the party leadership for attempting to lead a "new social movement" which proved "entirely unrealistic."

Ten Island Schools Get Green Light

Ten Vancouver Island school boards were authorized by a Friday cabinet order to float debentures worth $2.78 million.

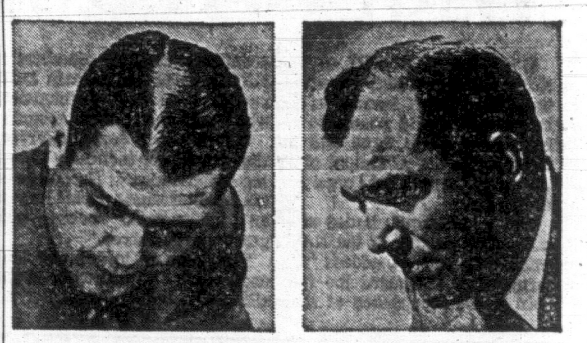

It was part of a cabinet move allowing borrowing of a total $10.1 million by school boards throughout B.C. under various bylaws already approved by ratepayers.

The 20-year bonds must be sold with a ceiling of 6.4 per cent interest.

The Vancouver Island money bylaws released from the government freeze include:

Greater Victoria Bylaw 48 for $1.01 million; Sooke Bylaw 26 for $100,000; Gulf Island Bylaw 12 for $150,000; Cowichan Bylaw 33 for $150,000; Lake Cowichan Bylaw 15 for $250,000; Ladysmith Bylaw 17 for $200,000; Nanaimo Bylaw 36 for $300,000; Alberni Bylaw 26 for $325,000; Courtenay Bylaw 28 for $170,000; and Vancouver Island North Bylaw 7 for $137,000.

How to save and improve your hair demonstrated by expert here Mon. & Tues.

FOR BALDING HEADS LIKE THESE, a "SAVE-YOUR-HAIR DAY" has been announced. As long as you have some hair, you have an excellent chance to grow thicker hair by new methods of home treatment.

SCALP SPECIALIST HERE TO DEMONSTRATE NEW HOME TREATMENT

New home treatment methods for preventing baldness — and growing thicker hair — will be demonstrated in Victoria this Monday and Tuesday, November 18 and 19.

This news was released here today by Harrison Hair and Scalp Specialists.

In their announcement, they named staff trichologist Mr. Ian Edgar to conduct the Victoria clinic. Mr. Edgar will personally examine hair-worried men and women from 1 p.m. to 8 p.m. Monday and Tuesday at the hotel Executive House.

EXAMINE YOU

"I want to make it clear that you incur no obligation by seeing Mr. Edgar."

"Your only obligation is to yourself — to free your mind of worries about hair loss, dandruff, itching, or other scalp disorders, by learning how to take care of your hair. If your trouble is beyond the scope of Harrison Home Treatment, we will frankly tell you so."

"We always make a personal examination before suggesting any treatment. There is no one cure-all that will correct every one of the 18 scalp disorders that cause most baldness."

WHO CAN BE HELPED?

Will this new treatment cure baldness? "No. We cannot help men who are slick-bald after years of gradual hair loss. But where your scalp still grows hair, we can at least save and improve what you have. Usually, we can grow more hair even where you have only 'fuzz' now."

The important thing is: Don't wait until it's too late!

Best evidence of the success of Harrison treatment is the phenomenal growth behind it. Harrison trichologists hold clinics in all major cities across Canada.

"Our biggest problem is not in doing what we claim to do. But to overcome the average man's initial skepticism is sometimes difficult. He's usually quite desparate—and baldish—by the time he nerves himself to see a Harrison trichologist. He's 'tried everything.' So he starts consoling himself with one of the old superstitions about hair:

That baldness is hereditary; that men naturally lose hair as they get along in years; that nothing can be done to stop hair loss—and a lot of other notions that we know are not true today."

SCALP EXAMINATION

See Mr. Edgar in person. Learn how baldness can be corrected, and new hair grown. The new Harrison method permits you to actually correct your baldness and improve your hair in the privacy of your own home.

For an examination and discussion of your hair problems ask the deck clerk at the hotel Executive House, Monday or Tuesday between 1 p.m. and 8 p.m. for Mr. Edgar's suite number.

You don't need an appointment. Examinations are given in private.

URBAN-RENEWAL STUDIES STALLED

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has suspended support for any new urban-renewal studies pending examination of present rebuilding procedures to see if too much wheat is discarded with the chaff.

Transport Minister Hellyer, who is leading a cross-Canada housing inquiry which hopes to complete its work within two months, said today in an interview work on any newly-proposed studies would be postponed.

"We have some pretty fundamental questions about some procedures," he said.

He said it appears that under present renewal policies, a large number of habitable homes and good homes that could be rehabilitated at low cost are being destroyed along with irreparable housing.

At this moment, when there is a desperate housing shortage in many parts of the country . . . we feel we should not embark on studies that would lead to tearing down and bulldozing homes that might be used," Mr. Hellyer said.

"It is not a case of funds — we have the funds," he said. "It is just a breather for a few weeks while we think through our policy and decide where capital funds should be used."

World Issues Badger Trudeau, Sharp

By DAVE McINTOSH

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will probably be as thankful as anyone when the government review of foreign and defence policy is completed, likely in January.

Though his domestic policies have caused little stir, he and External Affairs Mitchell Sharp have been in almost constant hot water with the Commons opposition — and some other governments — over foreign policy.

For instance, Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield charged in the Commons Friday that the government has one policy to suit NATO and another for home consumption.

Mr. Stanfield's assertion was apparently based on Mr. Trudeau's frequent indications that the government wants to reduce its NATO commitments and its statement to the NATO ministerial meeting in Brussels this week that Canadian military strength will not be reduced and, moreover, a planned 20-per-cent cut in the six-squadron air division in West Germany was being deferred.

The prime minister said a week ago in Kingston he was more worried about the possibility of "large rebellions" in the U.S. spilling over into Canada than he was about communism, fascism, atomic bombs or intercontinental rockets.

This got the U.S. embassy here a bit worked up.

Both the U.S. and Britain had been trying to persuade Canada to maintain or even increase its military forces in Europe.

In Brussels Thursday, British Defence Secretary Denis Healey said all NATO members except France and Iceland — the latter has no armed forces — had promised to increase contributions to collective defence.

"Not correct," Mr. Trudeau said crisply when asked about Healey's statement by Mr. Stanfield.

A NATO spokesman said in Brussels Canada had made a new commitment of four still-to-be-built destroyers.

Mr. Trudeau said this was an old commitment made by the Pearson government.

Harold Winch, NDP defence spokesman, wondered out loud how a ship commitment could be made before the ships were built.

CAN WITHDRAW

Mr. Trudeau probably sent a chill around NATO when he replied:

"We can withdraw from NATO during the course of 1969 if we so decide, and the ships which have been committed to NATO, as in the case of the ground troops or the air troops, will follow the policy decision which is then made."

High-ranking officers in the armed forces said this statement, like some others Mr. Trudeau has made, is bound to cause unrest among servicemen.

Informants said Mr. Trudeau is not talking off the top of his head. His statements were carefully thought out beforehand.

They added that Mr. Trudeau has called for public discussion on various issues and that, in effect, he is leading off the debate with some proposals, indications, hints and what have you.

NATO is far from the only foreign issue to spark sharp exchanges here.

Mr. Trudeau told U Thant, United Nations secretary-general, in Edmonton in May that Canada would not "shirk her role" in peacekeeping.

On Oct. 31, Mr. Sharp said Canada stood ready to participate in a peacekeeping force in Vietnam if requested to do so by the combatants.

But the next day Mr. Trudeau said he did not know what the government's decision would be if such a request were made.

LBJ Statement Reproves Nixon

By DON OBERDORFER
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Johnson, revealing his version of the much-discussed arrangements with his successor, declared Friday that until Jan. 20 the Johnson administration will make the decisions.

In an unscheduled news conference in the presidential seat of power, the oval office in the White House, Mr. Johnson appeared determined to squelch any suggestion that he is now sharing power with Richard M. Nixon.

Perched at the edge of his favorite padded rocking chair and within arm's reach of Nixon's emissary Robert D. Murphy, the chief executive declared "the decisions that will be made between now and Jan. 20 will be made by this president and by this secretary of state and by this secretary of defence."

QUICKLY AGREE

For its part, the Nixon camp quickly agreed. Telephone calls to and from the president gave assurance—according to a key Nixon aide—that the president-elect has no wish to try to be "co-president" during the transition period.

The telephone conversations with Bryce N. Harlow, assistant to the president-elect, and a visit in the White House from Murphy, Nixon's emissary to the state department, set the stage for Mr. Johnson's declaration.

Murphy was sitting on a sofa in the oval office when the president summoned reporters.

"Mr. Murphy, not being secretary, not having been confirmed by the Senate, will be (in Washington) as an observer," Mr. Johnson added. Murphy's job will be to observe the decisions of those still in charge, and prepare the new administration for "its obligations beginning Jan. 20," the president said.

RESENTFUL SILENCE

Murphy sat by in respectful silence while the president pledged his availability "any time" to him or to Nixon and urged that partisan differences be submerged in the interest of the nation.

When Mr. Johnson called on him to speak, Murphy—who has been designated by Nixon as his liaison man in the high councils of government—expressed the hope that his "very short temporary helping out" could make a contribution.

There was no mention by Mr. Johnson or by Murphy of any power of approval granted to Nixon or his representative in foreign matters during the transition period.

Thursday, in a New York news conference introducing Murphy as his liaison man, Nixon had spoken of the need for "prior consultation" before major foreign policy decisions are made during the next nine weeks, and suggested that "prior agreement" from the president-elect is also essential in certain cases.

Nixon's statement seemed to be intended to silence critics who felt he had gone too far on Monday at the White House, when he said boldly that on key foreign matters the Johnson administration could speak for "the next administration as well."

While some of these critics may have been soothed by Nixon's amplification on Thursday, Mr. Johnson's reaction was reported to be just the opposite.

First, the Groundwork

IN A RECENT ADDRESS IN Montreal, Prime Minister Trudeau emphasized somewhat ruefully that in the first two months of the present Parliament "we have barely succeeded in securing passage of a half-dozen major items of legislation." At this rate, he said, "Parliament is working at a snail's pace." And he added that the people of Canada would certainly not stand for such slow progress in meeting the problems of the nation.

Mr. Trudeau's comment was made in the context of an explanation of measures which he is taking to speed up that pace and reform the legislative processes of the Canadian government. His program falls into four main categories.

First, he has inaugurated sweeping changes in the office of the prime minister, established regional desks to give close attention to the major geographical divisions of the country and programmed his time so as to make the most efficient use of it. Secondly, he has done somewhat the same sort of job on the cabinet. He has placed more responsibilities on his departmental ministers, delegated more work to committees, freed his ministers from full attendance at parliamentary sittings, ordered them to prepare five-year programs for their departments, and in general emphasized the executive and administrative functions of his cabinet.

Behind these details, however—and his alterations in the governmental machinery will have to overcome generations of precedent and established custom—there is a fundamental change of philosophy. Mr. Trudeau is deliberately restoring to the elected ministers the policy-making function which over the years had been relinquished to Canada's excellent federal civil service. This means the ministers will have to be much more than merely heads of departments; and the prime minister gave clear warning when he named his team: produce or step aside.

Thirdly, Parliament itself will undergo changes in procedure and rules in order to streamline it for more effective law-making in an era when electronic communication and a vastly more complicated maze of problems and responsibilities faces that body. Slowness in operating, as Mr. Trudeau says, can no longer be tolerated if a proper job is to be done. New rules, based on committee recommendations, will be proposed next month, with the intent of obtaining "greater speed and better co-ordination."

In this connection, Mr. Trudeau should have full regard for the dual function of Canada's Parliament. The legislative process may well benefit by closer streamlining of procedures and tightening up discussion. But the second function should not be overlooked in the understandable urge to get things moving. Parliament is the national forum for the elected representatives of the people, and great care should be taken, in trying to avoid duplication and irrelevance in members' speeches, that this important function should not be infringed to the point of harm.

* * *

Parliamentary robots and computers could provide efficiency in the operations of Parliament, but democracy must suffer a little inefficiency in order to provide full scope for expression of opinion. While the operations of Parliament constitute the nation's biggest business, the parallel with industry and commerce is not complete. There is still the factor of the public voice, of the essential need to win the public's approval for policies, of criticism by the opposition and public defence of actions by the government. This vital process, even if it takes a little more time, must be preserved.

The fourth project in Mr. Trudeau's program of clearing the decks ties in with this concept and involves communication. This includes the government's communication with the people as well as the reverse process, and in giving it high priority Mr. Trudeau fulfils a campaign promise and at the same time tries to avoid the pitfall of detachment from the public into which some previous governments have fallen. We shall see many manifestations of this in the days to come, and they will include greater exposure of Mr. Trudeau in appearances throughout the country, encouragement of local party activities and involvement of young and old, and a highly developed system to channel information from every community into the Prime Minister's office.

With an unassailable majority and four years of office ahead of him, Mr. Trudeau can afford to take time now for his structural changes. Their benefits—and they should be considerable—will show up later in his tenure.

Controlling Credit Cards

DEMOCRATIC SENATOR WILliam R. Proxmire from Wisconsin is reportedly intensifying a campaign which should spread beyond the United States borders. He wants legislation in his country to establish firmer control over the credit card. In part, the Senator objects to the way the cards encourage irresponsible people to spend more than they can afford, but his concern is also centred on the indiscriminate manner in which they are distributed. Evidence before a Senate banking subcommittee has revealed that some have been sent to one-year-olds and that a teenager possessed seven.

The senator wants the federal government to establish the power to restrict indiscriminate distribution of unsolicited cards and, as a measure of responsibility, to insist that credit-card issuers assume most or all of the liability for unauthorized use of a credit card either lost or stolen.

His points make sense to those in this community who receive cards they did not seek and do not want and who wonder who is responsible if they fall into wrong hands.

Two-Way Street

WHEN A 34-YEAR EMPLOYEE retired recently from Crown Zellerbach's Elk Falls workings, he received gifts from friends, expressions of appreciation for his pleasant association with the company and a retirement plaque. The procedure was usual for such instances. Less usual was the employee's presentation of a plaque to the company "In Appreciation of 34 Years' Employment."

The conventional "best years of his life" in this case apparently were a gift not only to, but from the company — a point seldom appreciated.

Developing B.C.

It seems to some that British Columbia begins and ends at the coast. Complaints are made about what Social Credit has not accomplished, but let us give credit where credit is due.

What would have happened to the ends if ferries had not been built to commute between them and the mainland? They made jobs for so many.

Up until 1952 the road to Prince George was narrow and precarious. It's now a pleasure to travel on. This can be said of most of B.C. highways.

The praise now is loud and clear. At last the road has been opened up between Prince George and Jasper. This road had been promised for years by Liberals and Conservatives when they were in power.

The PGE railway is being extended opening up new country. And we cannot do without the Peace Dam and the power that was so badly needed to cope with new developments and things in general. — Mrs. L. King, 2225 Harbor.

Missing Point

You recently had a column on the Trent Affair, in which a U.S. warship took two men off a British ship on the high seas. One fact was not mentioned; that President Lincoln, to his credit, ordered that the two men be released. — Interested.

LAW OF INEVITABLE CONTRADICTION

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Unpredictability of It All in Canada

THOMAS HUXLEY, a British scientist, once said that if enough monkeys were given enough typewriters and worked at them long enough they would eventually write down all the plays of Shakespeare by mere accident and the law of averages. The same thing may be said about the journalists who are now explaining the character, the purposes and the future of President-elect Nixon. Like the monkeys, the writers may hit on the truth but the chance is remote and unlikely. For in politics the law of averages collides with the even stronger law of inevitable contradiction which forbids any president, or any head of state, to do what he sets out to do.

Hutchison

Thus Woodrow Wilson is elected to maintain American neutrality and six months later plunges the United States into world war. Franklin Roosevelt is elected to cut Herbert Hoover's reckless spending with a balanced budget and immediately becomes the largest spender ever known. Harry Truman arrives in the White House as a pathetic haberdasher certain to be a weak president and makes himself one of the strongest. Lyndon Johnson dedicates his life to domestic reform as a man of peace and ends in the morass of an Asiatic war.

Looking at the record, it is a bold prophet who dares to forecast Mr. Nixon's prospects. Still, monkeys and journalists (including this one) will continue to write if you give them a typewriter. But the fact is that the world knows little and has much to find out about the new president. So has he.

One thing, and one only is sure in advance — Mr. Nixon as president will be very different from Mr. Nixon as a private person. The presidency always changes the man, making or breaking him. Even the man himself cannot foresee what sort of president he will make because he cannot foresee the conditions in which he must operate, the events that will ride him.

All the learned articles about the various Nixons, old, new, present and future, doubtless have some truth in them, since every man contains several men at war with one another. But the endless prophecies of Mr. Nixon's success or failure come out of the monkey's typewriters.

Flood of Speculation

The self-evident fact is mentioned here because we happen to be witnessing a similar mystery in Canada, and a similar flood of speculation about another unknown man. Pierre Trudeau took office some six months ago with an aura of candor, a genius of communication and a hatred of secrecy in government. Yet he is more mysterious today than ever and his government more secret than any predecessor.

Personally, I admire his unusual method of thinking before he speaks and studying before he acts, but he is not doing what was expected of him. How could he when the actual conditions facing him are not what he expected, either? Like Mr. Nixon, he is encountering the law of inevitable contradiction, the eternal cussedness of things. And clearly things have suddenly become more cussed and incalculable as a result of the American election.

A man as literate as Mr. Trudeau can easily read the writing on the wall next door. What does it say? If it says anything at all, it says that the American Republic is moving in one direction and Canada in another. Or, as we put it in a gross over-simplification the United States is moving rightwards and Canada leftwards with a conservative president and a liberal prime minister.

This contrary motion will have profound effects on Mr. Trudeau. He cannot escape the obvious risks of Republican trade policy, above all, of foreign policy, Canada being peculiarly vulnerable to both. On the other hand, he can benefit from Republican economic policy if it curbs the inflation which automatically spills across the border. Far less obvious than specific policy and, in the end, more decisive, is the vague, visceral mood of the American people and it, too, will flow northward.

The American people, as I have seen them this year and as their votes seem to show, are tired of experiment, disenchanted with foreign adventure, angry with government and eager for a quiet life. They are not going to get what they want from Mr. Nixon, of course, or from anyone else, but their mood, for the moment, is unmistakable. They seek a pause for breath in a furious march begun under Roosevelt. While I venture to think that the pause will not last long, that Mr. Nixon cannot dam the tide of history but must move with it, a pause was definitely ordered at the polls.

Champing at the Bit

In Canada, however, an advance was ordered by Mr. Trudeau's victory last June. A nation which had not felt the almost unbearable strains endured by its neighbor apparently was eager for new experiments and what the experimenter-in-chief called a Just Society. Canada was not tired. It was champing at the bit.

Now, even before the first dim outlines of the Just Society appear, the bills for the existing society of injustice have been presented and they are high. That is the real meaning of the Benson budget, the latest federal-provincial confrontation, the alarm of the taxpayer and the anger of the housewife who pays the price of inflation. Mr. Trudeau begins to sense the first faint but undeniable whiff of public doubt, the skepticism that gave two conservatives, Messrs. Nixon and Wallace, a substantial majority vote.

Capacity Clarified

This does not mean, as I see it, that the public is yet turning against Mr. Trudeau, that he is turning back from his original plans, whatever they may have been, or that history has stopped moving. It only means that the area of practical possibility, the maximum speed of movement, the actual capacity of the economic machine and the tolerance of the taxpayers are being reclarified, here as in the United States.

From the little I know of him, I doubt that Mr. Trudeau ever underestimated these factors in his own mind but assuredly some of his worshippers and colleagues did. Now the deepening quarrel of politics at home and the writing on the American wall should tell them that the social experiment, though hopeful and unavoidable, will be more difficult than it looked in the sunny days of June.

Anyhow, Mr. Trudeau must live with the hard facts of human nature, not with theories of his brilliant pre-election books. He must also live in symbiosis with Mr. Nixon because that is the nature of the continent. The continental paradox — a liberal in Canada and a conservative in the United States — will be interesting to watch, quite unpredictable and, one imagines, pretty grim.

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y.

Brighter Christmas Prospects for Peace and Goodwill

THREE important circumstances combine to make unusually promising the period between now and inauguration day. As President-elect Richard M. Nixon remarked this past week, "We might (during this period) have some very significant action and progress toward peace."

Frye

The elements which serve to encourage this hope are:

1. Willingness, and quite possibly eagerness, in Moscow to establish a pattern of improved East-West relations before Nixon takes office.

The Kremlin may fear what the new President would do if such a pattern is not set; at any rate, it is obvious the Russians would like to influence the conditions in which Nixon's initial policy decisions will be made.

2. An understandable and entirely laudable ambition on the part of President Johnson to leave office on a constructive note, erasing some of the more somber impressions of his stewardship. This is one occasion on which personal and national interest coincide.

3. Preparedness by Nixon to assist in the process by submerging his own wish to have a heroic "first 100 days."

Self-Effacement Striking

Of the three—Russia's forthcoming posture, Johnson's receptivity, and Nixon's self-effacement — the Nixon stand is the most striking. Not all Presidents-elect have been willing to make such a contribution to the national well-being.

A much more usual stance, especially when a change of party has been involved, has been an aloof refusal to share responsibility for decisions taken before inauguration day.

Nixon's statement, this past week, that in dealings on Vietnam, the Mideast and East-West relations, Johnson is "setting forth policies that will be carried forward by the next administration" is of great importance.

It means that if Moscow and Hanoi continue to be forthcoming in the next 60 days, and a new East-West detente emerges, it will not be scrapped or reversed after Jan. 20.

Any concessions which the Communists may make in the process will not have been squandered to purchase an ephemeral commodity.

This modifies, but still does not remove, the opposite possibility: that if the Reds are not forthcoming enough, they may have the Nixon of cold-war days and hard-line inclinations to deal with. That, too, contributes to Johnson's bargaining leverage.

The President-elect could easily have played it the other way, attempting to reserve for himself the opportunity to end the Vietnam war and to launch Soviet-American relations on a smoother course.

Such behavior would have been consistent with the partisan political image Nixon has often projected in the past. His readiness to abandon that posture will encourage skeptics to see in him a much bigger man.

In a sense, what the United States will have in the next 60-odd days is a coalition regime, with Johnson the active partner and Nixon providing important supplemental help. If the experiment succeeds, there should be plenty of glory for everyone.

Of the principal areas in which Nixon said there might be a chance for progress toward peace — the Mideast, Vietnam, and Soviet-American relations — the least promising is the Mideast.

A major breakthrough there in the next 60 days seems highly unlikely.

It has taken all the ingenuity and enterprise diplomats could muster in recent weeks to keep alive the sparks of an Arab-Israeli negotiation. At times, the embers seemed to be dying out.

Only if Russia were to give higher priority to long-range stability in the Mediterranean area than to enhancement of her influence there would early peace become feasible. Of this there is no visible sign.

Agree on Summit Meeting?

However, it now seems possible that Johnson will agree to a summit meeting with Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin and Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev some time in the next few weeks, provided the Soviet withdrawal from Czechoslovakia goes smoothly.

At such a meeting, there could be a measure of agreement to work more nearly in tandem for a Middle East settlement. American willingness to disengage from Vietnam gradually, over a period of years, could be a reciprocal element in the bargain.

A cease-fire in Vietnam in the vicinity of Christmas might well be the first tangible step. Together with it, there could be a start in Soviet-American negotiations on limitation and reduction of offensive and defensive ballistic missiles.

This in not an entirely speculative prospect. Efforts are being made in just these directions.

Whether it will all come off remains to be seen. What is recordable fact today is that, to an unprecedented degree, both the outgoing and incoming administrations are working to bring it about.

There could be even more on our Christmas trees this year than a rocket trip by American astronauts around the moon.

Nature Rambles

By FREEMAN KING

If you are going over the Malahat Drive, stop at the Dutch Latch and look across to the high ridge of Jocelyn Mountain. The land folds look like gigantic steps running in a northwest to southeast slope.

Growing along each of these steps or ridges, notice how the Douglas firs have established themselves. They are sparse but have heavy foliage. This is no doubt because there is not much soil and moisture available throughout the year, so it is the survival of the fittest. Because they have plenty of sunlight the lower limbs are able to live.

There are a number of gullies running up the slope. These no doubt were caused by the heavy run-off during the last ice age. The gullies have accumulated over the eons of time a considerable amount of soil so they are now able to support a number of trees. Here you can see that many maples have taken hold.

The slopes are covered with mosses and lichens which no doubt give support to some of the sun-loving plants.

There are many places where you can spot jumbles of broken boulders. These were broken away from the cliffside by the action of ice and water seepage. Where there was a fault in the rock water could seep in and the ice would expand it until it fell away.

The minerals in the rocks are continually leaching away and running down to the inlet. Perhaps this is what makes the water look so dark when you look down into it from the height.

The inlet always seems to be so still and mysterious. The water here is very deep and perhaps the mixing of the water from the river adds to the dark, varying color.

Look to the north up the inlet. Where the bay widens out you can see the flat top of Mt. Newton. From this vantage point it has a different contour from that seen from the east side.

As you look you possibly will see a boat that looks like a toy moving along, and a gull will fly over the water. It looks almost like a drifting snowflake.

New Politics Poses Problem for Reporters

By ANTHONY WESTELL
The Globe and Mail

OTTAWA — Standing in the rain in Halifax, jammed in a noisy crowd while trying to hear the rapid flow of argument between Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau and 25 Biafra pickets, struggling for enough elbow room to make notes on a wet pad, confirmed the suspicion that the politics of participation and confrontation creates problems for newsmen.

The next day, Mr. Trudeau was up before a meeting of Nova Scotia Liberals taking questions from the floor and replying off the cuff with such a stream of facts, ideas and hints at government policy that he had to hold a press conference later to fill in the gaps for interested reporters.

A couple of days earlier, it had been External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp sitting on a bedroll on the Parliament Hill lawn to argue about foreign policy with a Biafra protest group, while newsmen craned to hear what was said before the breeze blew the words away.

Question-and-Answer

The physical problems of reporting informal events are not of course new, although it is an alarming thought that they may become the rule of political journalism, rather than the exception. Mr. Trudeau said last week after his question-and-answer session that he preferred it to making a speech and, time permitting, would have gone on for several hours.

To overcome the practical difficulties presented by chaotic confrontations, and by the outpouring of ideas and information sparked by participation, the writing press will have to modernize its techniques. Tape recorders will replace notebooks.

More serious are the abstract problems created by the new politics. There are difficult questions about how to regard and interpret remarks made by politicians in informal encounters.

When a prime minister, for example, makes a formal speech in controlled circumstances, it is fair to assume he has considered exactly what he wants to say and how to phrase and qualify his ideas. A reporter can comb the text for the most attention-grabbing quotation and feature it at the top of his story without much fear that he is distorting reality.

Speaking Informally

The situation is quite different when a prime minister is speaking informally in unstructured circumstances — as, for example, in the rain outside the Lord Nelson Hotel in Halifax.

He is not making a considered speech, but confronting, communicating, arguing, debating, trading ideas backward and forward. He says things he might not say on second thoughts, and, like most of us, he uses outlandish examples to try to prove quite simple points.

Is it good reporting in such circumstances to assume that a prime minister means literally every word he says? Is it possible in fact to extract one idea from a dialogue and to give it prominence without giving that idea an undue weight and importance?

There is no suggestion, of course, that the press has any right or responsibility to protect a prime minister from his own indiscretions.

But the reporter does have a responsibility to his reader. He has to make a judgment about the relative importance of facts to decide which should be given prominence.

He has to decide when statements are made seriously and when with tongue in cheek. He has to put facts in a correct perspective.

PM Confronts Demonstrators

This is going to become harder and harder in the age of confrontation, participation and communication. Prime Ministers in the past have lived their public lives in a cocoon of protocol, limiting their contacts with the public.

Mr. Trudeau, Mr. Sharp and, no doubt, other political leaders, now believe that it is important to break down the barriers.

It is doubtful if Mr. Trudeau in Halifax or Mr. Sharp in Ottawa changed the minds of a single one of the Biafra pickets they debated last week. But at least the pickets could go home in the knowledge that they had made their case directly to the powers that count, in personal confrontation.

The significance of these events, in other words, was not so much of what was said, but in the happening itself. But the element of the events that got prominence in some newspapers, that stirred up questions in the House of Commons, and that the critics have concentrated upon analysing, was a chance remark made by Mr. Trudeau in the middle of an argument.

There is no complete transcript available of the Prime Minister's heated argument with the Halifax pickets. Notes are incomplete and tape recorders pick up questions without answers, and answers without questions.

Unfortunate Allusion

But in arguing about the limitations on Canada's ability to aid the rebels in Biafra, Mr. Trudeau asked sarcastically if the pickets would have wanted to aid Nazis beleagured in Stalingrad.

It was an unfortunate allusion, and the uncomfortable truth is that it was probably put in the Prime Minister's mind an hour or so before the encounter by this reporter.

In a private conversation in the plane on the way to Halifax, Mr. Trudeau was discussing the difficulty of separating humanitarian concerns from political involvement.

He illustrated the argument—as he did later in public—by pointing out the objections there would have been if Canada had announced, when the Vietminh were besieging the French at Dien Bien Phu, that while it was not taking sides in the civil war, it was moved by humanitarian concerns to aid the French.

This reporter, following the argument, added his two cents worth of agreement by commenting: "Or aiding the Nazis in Stalingrad."

Forceful and Dramatic

The point of the examples, of course, is not to compare the Biafrans with the French in Dien Bien Phu or the Nazis in Stalingrad: it is to underline in a forceful and dramatic way that humanitarian actions can have political connotations.

Such methods of argument and exposition are unexceptional in private conversation. Examples may not be accepted, or may be refuted by others, but misunderstandings can be quickly corrected. The words sound different in public.

The politics of confrontation and participation consist in part of acting in public as if it were a private occasion. The politician stands in the rain or sits on the grass to argue in public as, formerly, he argued in the privacy of his office or the cabinet room.

He treats the members of the public whom he is confronting as adults with arguments worth hearing and with the intelligence to listen to his case.

In other words, communication between the governed and those who govern is changing, becoming more of a two-way exchange, more direct and more lively. This implies the need for change and new methods by the newsmen who record, audit and interpret the communications.

THE GALLUP POLL

Spending Limit Favored For Political Candidates

By The Canadian Institute of Public Opinion

More than seven in ten Canadian adults favor a law to control the amount of money that may be spent for or by a candidate in election to public office.

This ratio is similar in the United States (68%) where final costs of the presidential election is projected at an all-time high of nearly $50 million.

In both countries, Canada and the U.S., the parties in office express less approval of controlled election expenses (Liberals 69%; Democrats 65%) than do the parties in opposition (Conservatives 78%; Republicans 72%).

In Britain a law controls the total amount that candidates for Parliament can spend.

The question: "Would you favor or oppose a law which would put a limit on the amount of money which can be spent for or by a candidate in his campaign for public office?"

The results nationally, in the U.S. and Canada:

	U.S.	Canada
Favor	68%	73%
Oppose	24	18
No opinion	8	9

In Canada the survey shows the following political preference results:

	Conservatives	Liberal	Other
Favor	78%	69%	75%
Oppose	14	23	21
No opinion	8	8	4

Psychical Research: The Evidence Can't Be Ignored

By JOHN DAVY

LONDON — Fuel from two sources has suddenly been thrown onto the uneasily flickering flames of psychical research.

Reports of card-guessing experiments with an apparently psychic Czech, Pavel Stepanek, have been published in the sober pages of the British magazine Nature (although one of the anonymous "referees" who read the report recommended that it shouldn't be published).

And the institute of Psychophysical Research at Oxford, which includes among its consultants a number of eminent scientists recently published, dead-pan, a collection of accounts of "out-of-the-body experiences."

Both reports, one experimental, the other anecdotal, share the elusive and inconclusive character of most psychical research; but they also illustrate the persistent refusal of these phenomena either to go away or to yield to any simple, conventional explanations.

The Oxford report is the result of an appeal two years ago for first-hand accounts of what Miss Celia Green, the institute's director, calls "ectosomatic" experiences. The appeal yielded some 400 replies. Two questionnaires were sent to these people; 326 replied to the first and 251 to the second.

According to Miss Green, the replies were lucid and gave every evidence of coming from stable and normal people. The most striking feature of the reports is their overall consistency.

●

Thus, whatever the explanation, out-of-the-body experience seems to be a fairly coherent phenomenon, and possibly not all that uncommon. Some of Miss Green's subjects report repeated experiences, and she now has a dossier of over 1,000 ectosomatic anecdotes.

A third of the episodes occurred when the subject was anesthetized or unconscious for some reason, but other subjects reported episodes while walking, gardening, sitting in buses, etc. A proportion of the episodes were associated with some kind of crisis — a road accident or a fall while climbing.

Common to many of the reports is the matter-of-fact way in which the subjects accepted their experience. They mostly reported feeling calm and clear-headed (even while they were looking down at their physical heads and bodies from "outside"). "The experience seemed perfectly natural to me at the time," said one.

●

The subjects commonly felt themselves to be located some way above their bodies, often near the ceiling if in a room, and able to look around and study their environment, including their own bodies, in distinct detail.

Many subjects reported that they could move around, and some claimed to "travel" considerable distances.

The most remarkable cases were those where there seems to have been some confirmation that the subject, while in this state, perceived things which he could not have seen in the ordinary way.

For example, a patient in the hospital with peritonitis suddenly felt herself floating upwards and looked into a part of the ward normally invisible to her. She saw the nurses hurrying to her bedside, and when she returned to normal consciousness she described in detail a patient around the corner whom she apparently had not set eyes on.

●

This kind of report suggests the possibility of some fairly simple experiments, if subjects are found who can go ectosomatic at will. None of Miss Green's subjects apparently has this under conscious control, but some claimed a degree of control through relaxation or other practices.

Miss Green is hoping to organize some experiments to study the physiological state of subjects while ectosomatic, and perhaps to test claims of extra-sensory perception. Sir Cyril Burt, one of the institute's consultants, said that some subjects may have been suffering from a disorder of the inner ear, which can produce disorientation in space, and might be coupled with hallucinations.

But he is also prepared to entertain the possibility that the "mind" (whatever it is) does not necessarily occupy the "Newtonian" space assumed by physicists.

Meanwhile, Stepanek, of Prague, has been guessing cards inside sealed packages in experiments in Czechoslovakia and of the University of Virginia. Taking all the data together, which have been analyzed by computer, the results are "overwhelmingly significant," according to Dr. J. G. Pratt, one of the most active experimenters.

The cards, green on one side, white on the other, were given to Stepanek in stacks of covers, and he had to guess which face was upwards. In many experiments, the covers were themselves inside various kinds of cardboard, jackets, often padded with cotton wool to prevent tactile clues.

Curiously, after some time, Stepanek became "attached" to a particular inner cover and would give the same response to it time after time, irrespective of which way up the card inside was, or of variations in the outer jacket.

According to Dr. John Beloff, of Edinburgh University, who describes these experiments in detail in New Scientist, this "focusing" effect is something of a novelty in psychical research.

The Czech researcher who discovered Stepanek, Dr. Milan Ryzl, defected to the West over a year ago. So it is not clear whether Stepanek himself, who is still in Prague, will be accessible to western investigators again, or allowed out to participate in work at Dr. Pratt's laboratory in Virginia.

The elusive (and in the past sometimes fraudulent) nature of "psychic" phenomena means that they tend to be ignored by most scientists, who, if not downright hostile, usually claim to be too busy on more promising lines of research.

Which Is Justice, Which Tradition?

By ART STOTT

Mr. Kenneth Robinson, who lives in Toronto and is the Liberal member for Lakeshore, had little opportunity to expand his argument for abolition of part of the vagrancy section of Canada's Criminal Code when he introduced his private member's bill in the House of Commons last week.

Stott

He cited a portion of Section 164 of the code, which reads:

"Every one commits vagrancy who

"(a) not having any apparent means of support is found wandering abroad or trespassing and does not, when required, justify his presence in the place where he is found:

"(b) begs from door to door or in a public place."

Mr. Robinson's covering comment was brief: "The purpose of the bill is to remove from the Criminal Code the offence of vagrancy where no moral turpitude is involved, in order to restrict it to the field of social justice, its rightful place."

Mr. Robinson has company in his objection to the vagrancy section. Criticism has been raised against it time and again, mainly because it appears to make destitution an inseparable element of the offence. The person of means is not a vagrant under that section of the code. Therefore, runs the argument, there is one law for the poor, another for the rich.

★ ★ ★

This is old ground, frequently spaded. The private member's bill assumes more than ordinary significance, however, because the government is now involved in a general overhaul of the Criminal Code and the phrase "just society" enjoys wide currency for the time being. The atmosphere is somewhat different from that of earlier times when criticism of the law on "vags" very frequently was dismissed as pollyanna solicitude for individuals who deserved little consideration. And the dismissal was supported by the belief that a man, broke and wandering where his presence aroused suspicion, most probably was up to no good.

A man of means, found wandering in areas and under conditions which aroused suspicion might be charged under some other clause, but he wasn't booked as a "vag."

As far as sub-section (b) of the clause is concerned, it could be argued, admittedly with pure sophistry, that some of our most socially conscious citizens are now engaged in a campaign whose active workers "beg from door to door or in a public place." And it would be a sad day for our community if they didn't.

In the present climate of our country, though, it is valuable to have people questioning inequalities in the application of some of our laws and also in challenging some of the concepts we have come to accept. Can our society make poverty, complete poverty, a crime, or even relative poverty a disability in the processes of justice?

When judgment is delivered against a convicted person, assessing a fine or ordering imprisonment in default of payment, does justice fall in equal measure on the rich and the poor? If one person can pay the fine almost without noticing the dent it makes in his wallet, while another goes to jail because he has no money, is this equality?

The same issue has been raised on the question of bail. Those who can raise it are released from custody pending appearance in court. Those who cannot are locked up.

★ ★ ★

In this country, with few exceptions, our principle of law says that an individual is innocent until proved guilty. So why does an accused person find it desirable to have counsel to maintain that status if, in fact, he has not committed a crime? The purpose of the court we are assured, is to receive the evidence, weigh it and determine if, on the evidence, the charge is proved. By corollary, evidence should be collected, presented and weighed to rebut the case made against an accused who is innocent.

If, on the other hand, an accused is guilty, is justice done when a highly competent lawyer, either through his knowledge of the law, the employment of technicalities or the persuasiveness of his argument, manages to effect an acquittal?

Over the years we have largely come to accept the familiar statement that it is better for nine guilty men to go free than one innocent person to be convicted. Certainly the innocent should not be convicted, but how do we arrive at the arithmetic conclusion covering the acquittal of nine guilty persons? It seems to me the question acquires new relevance in Canada's progress toward total elimination of the death penalty, from the execution of which there could be no meaningful appeal.

Not all these issues are suitable matters for review during the overhaul of the Criminal Code — though where that overhaul involves the correction of bad laws it should earn general approval. But when we talk of a just society — most frequently in an economic and racial context — it might be desirable to consider the general question of formal justice and to separate from its practice some of the concepts which seem more firmly based on tradition than on absolute honesty.

WEEK ON MARKET

Weakness Sets in After Big Gain

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The Canadian stock market [illegible] this week, although weakness developed on Thursday and Friday.

The Toronto industrial index was up 1.61 to 183.60 after touching a record at 184.77 early Thursday morning. The composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges gained 2.75 to 179.55.

The general advance matched the trend in New York where prices picked up in a post-election rally. There was no major economic or foreign news to cause the rise, although Wall Street continues to watch hopefully for signs of a Vietnam settlement.

The strongest groups were utilities, beverages, food processors, golds and base metals. Western Oils, real estate and construction stocks were lower.

Among the largest gains, A.G.F. Management was up 11 to 62, Nabors Drilling 4⅝ to 16⅝, CPR 2¾ to 74¾, Thomson Newspapers 2⅝ to 64 and Bell 1⅞ to 47⅜.

OMINOUS LOSSES

However, a number of high-flying speculative stocks in the junior industrial and real estate group posted ominous losses. An apparent break in the speculative side of the market appeared Tuesday when many of the leaders took a sharp plunge.

J. H. Crang and Co.'s "go-go stock" index of 78 junior industrials declined 3½ per cent on the day, while the Toronto index of seven real estate stocks dropped 9.39 per cent.

On Wednesday, however, there was a reasonably firm trend, although there was still a list of casualites when the market closed Friday.

Dylex Diversified dropped 12⅛ to 68⅛, Peel Elder 3¾ to 51, Revenue Properties 2⅝ to 18, Seaway Hotels 2⅝ to 34⅞, Shully's Industries 2⅝ to 19⅞ and James United Steel 2½ to 10½.

Several low-priced speculative stocks managed to defy the slump.

Fleet Manufacturing jumped 95 cents to $4.40, Consolidated Building 25 cents to $4.75 and Hardee Farms 21 cents to $1.15.

Revived interest in gold stocks was stimulated by active bullion trading on the London and Continental free markets where fears of a French franc devaluation boosted the price of gold.

Dome Mines advanced 7½ to 75, Campbell Red Lake 2¾ to 32 and Camflo 50 cents to $5.65.

Brokers note that Canadian gold shares always move up when there is uncertainty over the future of exchange rates between major currencies.

Although the volume of trading was relatively light, the Toronto gold stock index gained 16.35 points to 220.11.

On index at Toronto, base metals rose .64 to 115.24. Western oils fell 3.83 to 228.92. Volume was 22,187,000 shares compared with 21,141,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses by 430 to 366.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, combined volume was 9,073,000 shares compared with 10,666,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses by 195 to 159.

U.S. MARKET

Blue Chip Stocks Lag Behind Surge

By PHILIP GREER
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — Blue chip stocks, especially in the auto group, fell somewhat out of whack late this week, but the rest of the list held to its post-election upswing.

Anticipation of the new administration still held the number one spot in Wall Street's attention and the business news background produced little to give it any competition.

The troubles of the British pound, the French franc and the dollar, all of which softened sharply in European money markets — especially in relation to the German mark — had little effect on the list, except to push gold mining stocks higher.

The Dow Jones industrial average worked its way to within a small fraction of its 1968 high before backing off, but closed the week with a gain of 6.90 points at 965.88. Auto stocks were the prime culprits in keeping the average from breaking through to a new high.

VOLUME JUMPS

Standard and Poor's 500-stock composite was ahead 1.83 points to a new high at 105.78 and the New York Stock Exchange index rose 1.18 points to 59.65. Both those indexes posted gains in all of the week's four sessions.

Trading volume for the week jumped to 62.87 million shares from the 49.5 million turned over a week earlier.

The overall box score showed a wide margin in favor of the winners. There were 1,183 issues up and 437 down, compared with 914 gainers and 644 losers in the previous week. There were 288 new 1968 highs, up from 148, and 27 new lows, down from 34.

Rio Tinto Zinc

Rio Tinto Zinc Corp., Ltd., is applying, through a subsidiary, for government approval of plans to establish a Yorkshire potash mine which, the company says, could help slash Britain's import bill and boost exports.

BA Shareholders Okay Amalgamation

TORONTO (CP) — By a nearly unanimous vote, British American Oil Co. Ltd. shareholders Friday approved a name change and amalgamation with Royalite Oil Co. Ltd. and Shawinigan Chemicals.

The new name, effective Jan. 1, 1969, will be Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. The merger must await patent and tax rulings. Royalite shareholders approved the move earlier this week.

At Friday's BA meeting, less than one per cent of the shareholders present opposed the two changes. A total of 20,023,273 shares, 88½ per cent, were represented.

EXPLORATION COSTS

Charles Hay, BA president, told the shareholders the firm's capital and exploration expenditures amounted to $84 million in 1967 and the figure will probably exceed $123 million.

He said the increase involved development of 8 million acres in the Arctic regions, the service station color change project, expansion of an oil refinery at Port Moody, B.C., and construction of a refinery, scheduled for completion in 1970, at Point Tupper, N.S.

Alta. Oil Sale

Three companies paid a total of $436,342.40 Thursday for a 45,280-acre parcel of land in an Alberta government sale of petroleum and natural gas reserves.

Montreal Trust Co. paid $382,716.80 for 31,840 acres near Valleyview, 60 miles east of Grande Prairie, while Hudson's Bay Oil & Gas Co., Ltd., and Union Oil Company of Canada, Ltd., made a successful joint bid of $53,625.60 for the remaining 13,440 acres.

Home Oil Head Dies

CALGARY (CP) — John W. Moyer, chairman of the board and president of Home Oil Ltd., died Friday at 79. Mr. Moyer was a former director of the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede and a past-president of the Stampeders' hockey club.

NYSE List Tops 13B

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Stock Exchange said Friday the growth of total shares listed this year was double that of any year in its history. The exchange made the statement as it listed what it said was its 13 billionth share for trading.

It said a 2-for-1 stock split by J. C. Penney Co. added nearly 25 million shares to the list and a listing of more than 1.7 million shares by Industrial Bancorp, Inc., boosted the number of shares listed to about 13.02 billion.

"A 39-year high in listings of new companies on the exchange contributed to the sharp increase in shares in 1968," the exchange said.

"More than 80 companies have joined the exchange list so far this year. In 1967, a total of 49 companies joined the list."

It said that at the end of October the value of listed shares was $676 billion.

COMPANIES UNITE

Consolidation of Peterson Electrical Construction Co. Ltd. into Wyder Electric Co. is taking place in Victoria and three other western cities.

Wyder—headed by 29-year-old Fred Wyder of Vancouver—is a commercial-industrial wiring and equipment installing firm which last month took over the Peterson company for an undisclosed cash sum spread over five years.

Peterson, which concentrates on heavier industrial work such as power transmission and local distribution lines, had been in business 47 years in Victoria, Vancouver and Edmonton.

Wyder closed the Edmonton branch and concentrated its Alberta operation in Calgary. Besides the main Vancouver branch, Wyder also is located in Prince George.

A spokesman for Wyder said both firm names would be perpetuated as a means of separating the types of work done.

Tryco Installations Co. Ltd., of Vancouver, is a second subsidiary of Wyder, specializing in mechanical contract work such as heating and air conditioning.

STARTED SMALL

Fred Wyder set up his company in 1960 with $20 capital as a source of money to support his family and put himself through University of B.C. in electrical engineering. He estimates the business to be worth $3 million today and volume on hand to have a value of $6 million.

The Peterson acquisition added $3.5 million in orders on jobsites between Whitehorse and Saskatchewan.

Wyder has a young mena ment team—the oldest being 37—and concentrates on computerized methods including labor-saving prefabrication and standardization.

Bond Sales Soar

By G. S. KENT
Business Editor

Sale of Canada savings bonds this year should exceed all previous issues, according to comment from bankers and investment men of Victoria.

There has been steady demand all along, accelerating these last few days as Friday's full-interest deadline approached.

Unfortunately, figures to back up any noticeable trend are not available and are difficult to estimate. However when it comes to Canada savings bonds it is not so much the gross sale which is significant, but the proportion of new money compared with the total subscription, since so much of the conventional volume represents refinancing.

•

One indicator of this new money is the payroll deduction plan for buying bonds, but even this has its weakness because many people merely use the payroll system as a means of forced saving for 12 months, at the end of which the bonds are cashed.

It would be a far more telling factor to know the amount of cash purchases by individuals and organizations over and above the sum of their rollover or exchange of previous years' issues for the current one.

But these statistics are not kept and estimates locally are based on dealer-salesman observations with a pinch of guesswork. A full accounting will not be available until all sales are registered and cash-ins subtracted at Ottawa.

In the interim, it is estimated by some local dealers that for each $1,000 worth of rollover, $300-$500 of new money is being spent.

A man closely involved with the campaign is Bill Munro, of Hagar Investments, who has handled the Vancouver Island CSB payroll deduction campaign for more than 20 years.

His experience leads him to predict the 1968 bond campaign will demolish all records for total sales volume, a good part due to better payroll response and—agreeing with a number of other dealers—more new cash sales.

•

This trend has been growing in the past few years, but it accelerated in the current campaign because of the attractive 6¾ per cent yield that will increase each bond by 2½ times in its 14-year life.

Mr. Munro predicts between $600 and $700 million will be toted up for new bond sales across Canada, and estimates payroll plans worth about $275 million, up $12 million.

Under the payroll plan, he said, the actual amounts per plan have declined slightly from last year, but the total amount on the Island has increased by about 2.5 per cent to $2.234 million representing 5,515 applications.

This was good, he said, considering the loss of about $114,000 from shipyard and pulp mill shutdowns, which was made up by other payroll units and topped by $54,000.

But, and this is significant, it has been noted the amounts being cashed in on a national average are getting smaller while the amounts purchased grow larger.

•

Ten years ago the average payroll deduction plan was worth $200, which had reached $392 by 1967 and was expected to hit $400 this year.

The Vancouver Island average topped $400 by $5 this year.

Before the campaign began, Mr. Munro and other local organizers were told by Prime Minister Trudeau and Finance Minister Benson, in effect: "We have to try to balance our budget and have a sound financial policy. The more money we can drain off from the average guy's spending in the next 12 months, the better."

The message has taken on meaning since the deficit situation was revealed, especailly considering the unabated pace of consumer spending.

Dosco Sale Consented To

By BORIS MISKEW

MONTREAL (CP) — Minority shareholders of Dominion Steel and Coal Corp. Ltd. voted Friday in favor of selling the company to Sidbec, a Crown corporation set up by the Quebec government to establish a steel industry in the province.

The action followed a meeting in Toronto Thursday at which shareholders of Hawker Siddeley Canada Ltd., which has a 77-per-cent interest in Dosco, decided to back a purchase proposal by Sidbec.

All that is required now is approval of the proposed deal by holders of about $38 million in Dosco debentures. The debenture holders will meet here Monday.

T. J. Emmert, chairman and president of Dosco, said following Friday's meeting he is hopeful Sidbec will make a formal offer to Dosco shareholders "before the end of the month."

The Sidbec proposal involves the purchase at $11 a share of 2.96 million Dosco shares.

The Quebec corporation, set up in 1964 to launch a provincial steel industry, would have to pay $28 million in cash as soon as the deal goes through, plus the balance after a four-year period.

It also would have to absorb a loss of about $5.9 million suffered by Dosco since Jan. 1, 1968, because the proposal calls for the agreement to be retroactive to the beginning of this year.

The proposal, to be acceptable to Sidbec, must have the backing of at least 90 per cent of Dosco shareholders.

Under the plan Sidbec would take over Dosco's steel rolling mill at Contrecoeur, Que., Dosco's Montreal works, its steel fabricating facilities at LaSalle, Que., and a wire plant in Etobicoke, Ont.

To be bought back from Sidbec, at $5 a share, are the Halifax Shipyards, Canadian Bridge Works in Montreal and a Dosco rail car plant at Trenton, N.S.

This purchase will be made by Hawker Industries Ltd., a new subsidiary to be born at the time the Sidbec deal goes through, and will bring Dosco about $15 million.

Dosco shareholders will be able to accept either the $11 a share offered by Sidbec, or $6 a share plus a $5 share in Hawker Industries.

Hawker Siddeley has committed itself to purchase a 77-per-cent interest in Hawker Industries as well as any other Dosco shares that would not be sold to Sidbec.

Mr. Emmert said this year's losses by Dosco were considerably lower than the 1967 loss of about $9 million, adding that much of the losses can be attributed to start-up costs of new facilities in such places as the Contrecoeur mill.

Sask. Mineral Output Drops

REGINA (CP) — Total value of mineral production in Saskatchewan during the first seven months of 1968 was $207 million down from the total $209 million for the same period in 1967, the provincial department of mineral resources said Wednesday.

Crude oil accounted for $118 million of the revenue, down $5.22 million from the 1967 figure. Potash also was down, to $48 million from $49.86 million. Copper and zinc rose to $18 million from $16.44 million to the end of July 1, 1967.

Crude oil production for the first seven months of 1968 was a total of 52.14 million barrels, compared with 53.73 million for the same period last year. Production averaged 43.7 barrels per day in July from 5,834 wells, down from the average 45.6 barrels from 5,721 wells in July last year.

Natural gas production to the end of July was a total 43 billion cubic feet, up from 37.5 billion for the first seven months of 1967. Potash production was down, with a seven-month total of 1.7 million tons, compared with 1.3 million for the same period in 1967.

CAE to Build Simulator For Airliner

MONTREAL (CP) — CAE Industries Ltd. has made its first successful entry into the commercial simulator market in the U.S. by being awarded a contract to build a flight simulator for the new L-1011 tri-jet airliner, the company has announced.

C. Douglas Reekie, president of CAE, said the simulator—to be built for Lockheed-California C. of Burbank—will be delivered to Lockheed in September, 1970.

"Lockheed's choice of CAE to build the first L-1011 simulator in Canada provides us with an excellent opportunity to win additional simulator contracts from many of the airlines which will fly the L-1011," said Mr. Reekie.

"We are optimistic that the U.S. airlines choosing the Lockheed L-1011 will consider CAE for their simulator requirements, as will airlines operators in other parts of the world."

Under terms of the contract, CAE will bring the simulator up to date as the aircraft is developed and tested in flight. Although the value of the contract was not announced, simulators of the type involved cost nearly $3,000,000.

Railway Freight Loadings Increase

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 353,749 railway freight cars were loaded during October, an increase of 9.6 per cent from October last year, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics has reported.

There was increased activity in shipments of wheat, lumber, timber and plywood, pulpwood, other forest products, and automobiles, auto trucks and parts.

Iron ore shipments required fewer cars, though carloadings of other mine products were higher.

As Power Source, Coal Future Black

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal energy department officials forecast a bleak future for Canadian coal as a fuel, but are optimistic about its use in chemical processes.

Members of the mines, minerals, energy and geosciences branch gave their opinions before the Commons resources committee which is studying revised budget estimates.

G. M. MacNabb, assistant deputy of the energy sector, said there appeared to be "quite a future for coal"—not as a fuel but for metallurgical and other chemical uses.

As a fuel it would not be able to compete with offshore oil in the Atlantic provinces, but if upgraded it could be used in Sydney, N.S., as coke in the production of steel.

R. B. Toombs, oil and gas adviser for the energy sector, estimated that Sydney coal markets could be stabilized at two-to-three million tons per year, which would be a cutback, but a solid core of production.

Mr. MacNabb felt the western U.S. would provide a good market for metallurgical coal produced in Western Canada but there were currently transportation problems.

COAL FOR PLASTICS

Outside the meeting he said other chemical possibilities for coal were in the production of plastics and proteins from its carbon base, but that this was probably from 15 to 20 years away.

Mr. McNabb told the committee that thermal energy was rapidly replacing hydro-electric energy, which has provided up to 80 per cent of Canada's energy resources. Thermal fuels—including oil, gas, coal, and nuclear energy—now were accounting for the greatest percentage of new energy being consumed.

New Coal Town Gets Nod After Four-Year Talk

SPARWOOD, B.C. (CP) — Kaiser Coal has approved the transfer of land for the townsite of Sparwood, Siro Cimolini, mayor of the District of Sparwood, said this week.

He said he was informed of the decision by the company to transfer the land to the district in a letter that culminated four years of negotiations.

He said work will begin on the townsite in this Kootenay community as soon as first-stage plans for 175 houses are approved by the provincial government.

Theatre Fans Could Learn From Seattle

By AUDREY JOHNSON

A certain question is often put to me, but after 25 years of close communion with the entertainment scene in this city the answer is still far from clear.

Why, of all the major cities in this area, is Victoria the only one where live theatre has failed to win any substantial dependable support from the general public?

Johnson

Vancouver's Playhouse Theatre Company is boasting a more than 400 per cent increase in subscription series ticket holders over the past two years.

The Seattle Repertory Theatre is booming, up to its eyeballs in advance sell-outs, with season-ticket holders coming from all parts of the State of Washington.

As I found out last weekend, it is quite average to overhear people in stores and hotel dining rooms discussing a Rep show with the confident, familiar manner of the habitue.

But more of that presently.

So far as Victoria is concerned, even when something in the way of a well-reputed import is offered — remember Seattle Rep in the new McPherson playing two attractive productions to near-empty houses? — our people in bulk seem to prefer the comfy comedy and minced-up movies of television to live downtown theatre.

On the whole though, I believe that vacillating standards, insufficient long-range planning and of course, undercapitalization have a great bearing on the subject.

That is something I will hope to discuss at greater length next week.

Rewarding Visit to Seattle

But first, a few words about a highly rewarding three days I spent across the water on a visit with the Seattle Rep.

STARRING in Seattle production of Mourning Becomes Electra is Jacqueline Coslow as Lavinia.

The magnus opus of the season's first half, O'Neill's trilogy, Mourning Becomes Electra, was an Off Centre Theatre production, premiered on my first night there.

In its second season, the Off Center Theatre is operated by the company in the Lyric Theatre on Fifth Avenue. It has a small, open proceniumtype stage at ground level with the seating rising above it in the manner of University of Victoria's Phoenix.

Plays are staged there on Thursday, Friday and Saturday each week through the season. All seats are one price and unreserved.

Quality of the productions so far seen there can be fairly calculated from the fact that Norway's famous Bergen International Festival — one of the world's most highly regarded — has officially invited the Seattle Rep to send one of its Off Center productions to the festival in the spring of 1969.

Concurrently with the Off Center productions the company sustains its repertory program in the 795-seat Seattle Center Playhouse, the attractive luxury theatre developed as part of the Seattle Worlds Fair.

Eight performances are staged at the Playhouse each week, Tuesday through Sunday evenings with matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays.

The plays being staged in repertory this season are Our Town, O'Casey's Juno and the Paycock, A Midsummer Night's Dream, Lysistrata John Arden's Serjeant Musgrave's Dance and Miller's A View From the Bridge.

I saw Our Town and Juno and both were admirable productions.

But it is going to cost the Repertory Theatre a mighty effort to surmount its own challenge in Mourning Becomes Electra.

Even though the third part of the trilogy in itself becomes turgid in its emotionalism and dramatically top-heavy.

Descent From the Heights

And even though — and perhaps caused by the playwright's descent from the heights — the quality of the acting declined in the finale.

Still, the impression it leaves is overwhelming and unforgettable.

Dark and brooding it certainly is; laden with tragedy and incestuous implication, the bitter love-hate saga of a New England family played out in the Oresteian image of Aeschylus.

But I, in common with an apparent majority of the opening night capacity audience, did not find it depressing.

Due to the finely tuned and balanced direction of Allen Fletcher and some powerful performances by major cast members, it was challenging, vivid, chilling and compelling.

Jacqueline Coslow as Lavinia Mannon, provides an Electra that could have been primitively hewn from crystal rock, it is so unyeilding, so savage. There is light within but it is a cold, consuming yet unquenchable flame.

The terrifying power of her performance and the twisting torment of her beleaguered mother, threatened with lifelong bondage as a result of her uncovered adultery, dominates the first and second parts of the trilogy.

Eve Roberts who plays the mother, Christine Mannon, is an actress of great responsiveness and variety. In the hands of these two exceptional artists the pitched struggle between mother and daughter is terrifying, swaying backward and forward, unrelenting in tension to the final appalling victory and defeat.

A ruggedly emotional, entirely convincing protrayal by Josef Sommer, of the father returning home from the Civil War to another kind of war. dominates the male aspect of the cast.

I was less happy with the profoundly difficult role of the mother-dominated son, but this I believe to be more the fault of author than actor.

General Mannon is murdered at the end of part one — Homecoming — and is thereby saved from his son Orin's fate (Theodore Sorel) of being centre stage for the heavily melodramatic part three of The Haunted.

The strength of the company shows up in many smaller parts skilfully handled — for example, Archie Smith as Seth, the rustic family retainer.

And it is further underscored with one discovers Mr. Smith again playing brilliantly in a matinee performance of Our Town along with several of the Electra principals in relatively minor roles.

Impact in No Way Reduced

The mammoth production was staged in a very spare manner but this was inevitable in the restricted circumstances of the Lyric theatre. And it in no way diminished the impact of the production.

It is my impression that this cast and director could achieve thrilling theatre under almost any circumstance.

There was a door at stage left, some shallow steps and a shallow level that extended across the back area. Director Fletcher had used the simple trappings so brilliantly that one was never in doubt as to the exterior or interior function of the door.

In fact the action was so graphically blocked that the use of slides at the beginning of each scene to depict the exterior and interior views of a New England house, seemed to me not only redundent but a belittling of the audience's common intelligence.

The fact is that Mourning Becomes Electra is actually three complete plays in 13 scenes, dictates a curtain time of 5:45 p.m. and a 90-minute pause for dinner at 7:30 p.m. with the play ending around midnight.

I wonder what Victoria audiences would have to say to that. Rather a lot, I imagine. But Seattle takes it in its stride and loves it. Funny how cosmopolitan one can become a few miles across the water.

More on this next week.

Desert Song Production Features Giant Chorus

One of the largest choruses ever used in a Victoria Operatic Society production will occupy the stage of McPherson Playhouse during the week of Nov. 26-30.

Lead roles in The Desert Song will be sung by Harry Elsdon in the dual part of Pierre and the Red Shadow; Ruth Champion, Barry Grimshaw, Janet Senior and Cliff Clark.

Stage director is Richard Litt and musical director and conductor is Dr. Dinah Hendrie.

An unusual performer for a VOS show is Sprite, a mule owned by S. Walt of Cordova Bay, who guarantees his pet's arrival at the theatre every evening just before curtain time.

Tht presence of Sprite on stage (he'll be ridden by Cliff Clark) recalls, but let us hope will not repeat, the first performance of Desert Song on Broadway in 1926.

On that occasion a mule got panicky and brayed loudly and continuously, disrupting the proceedings.

The musical—then called My Fair Lady—was nevertheless an unqualified success as it has continued to be in motion picture and updated stage versions since.

Curtain time for Desert Song will be 8 p.m. and tickets are now on sale at the McPherson box office.

Getting a Volkswagen means giving up a few extras.

Here's some of the optional equipment you'll miss out on if you buy a Volkswagen: Tire chains. A snow shovel. Anti-freeze. Cement blocks. A radiator. A bucket of sand. And a bag or two of salt.

The reason you won't get stuck with a lot of extras like that when you get a VW, is because a VW won't get stuck.

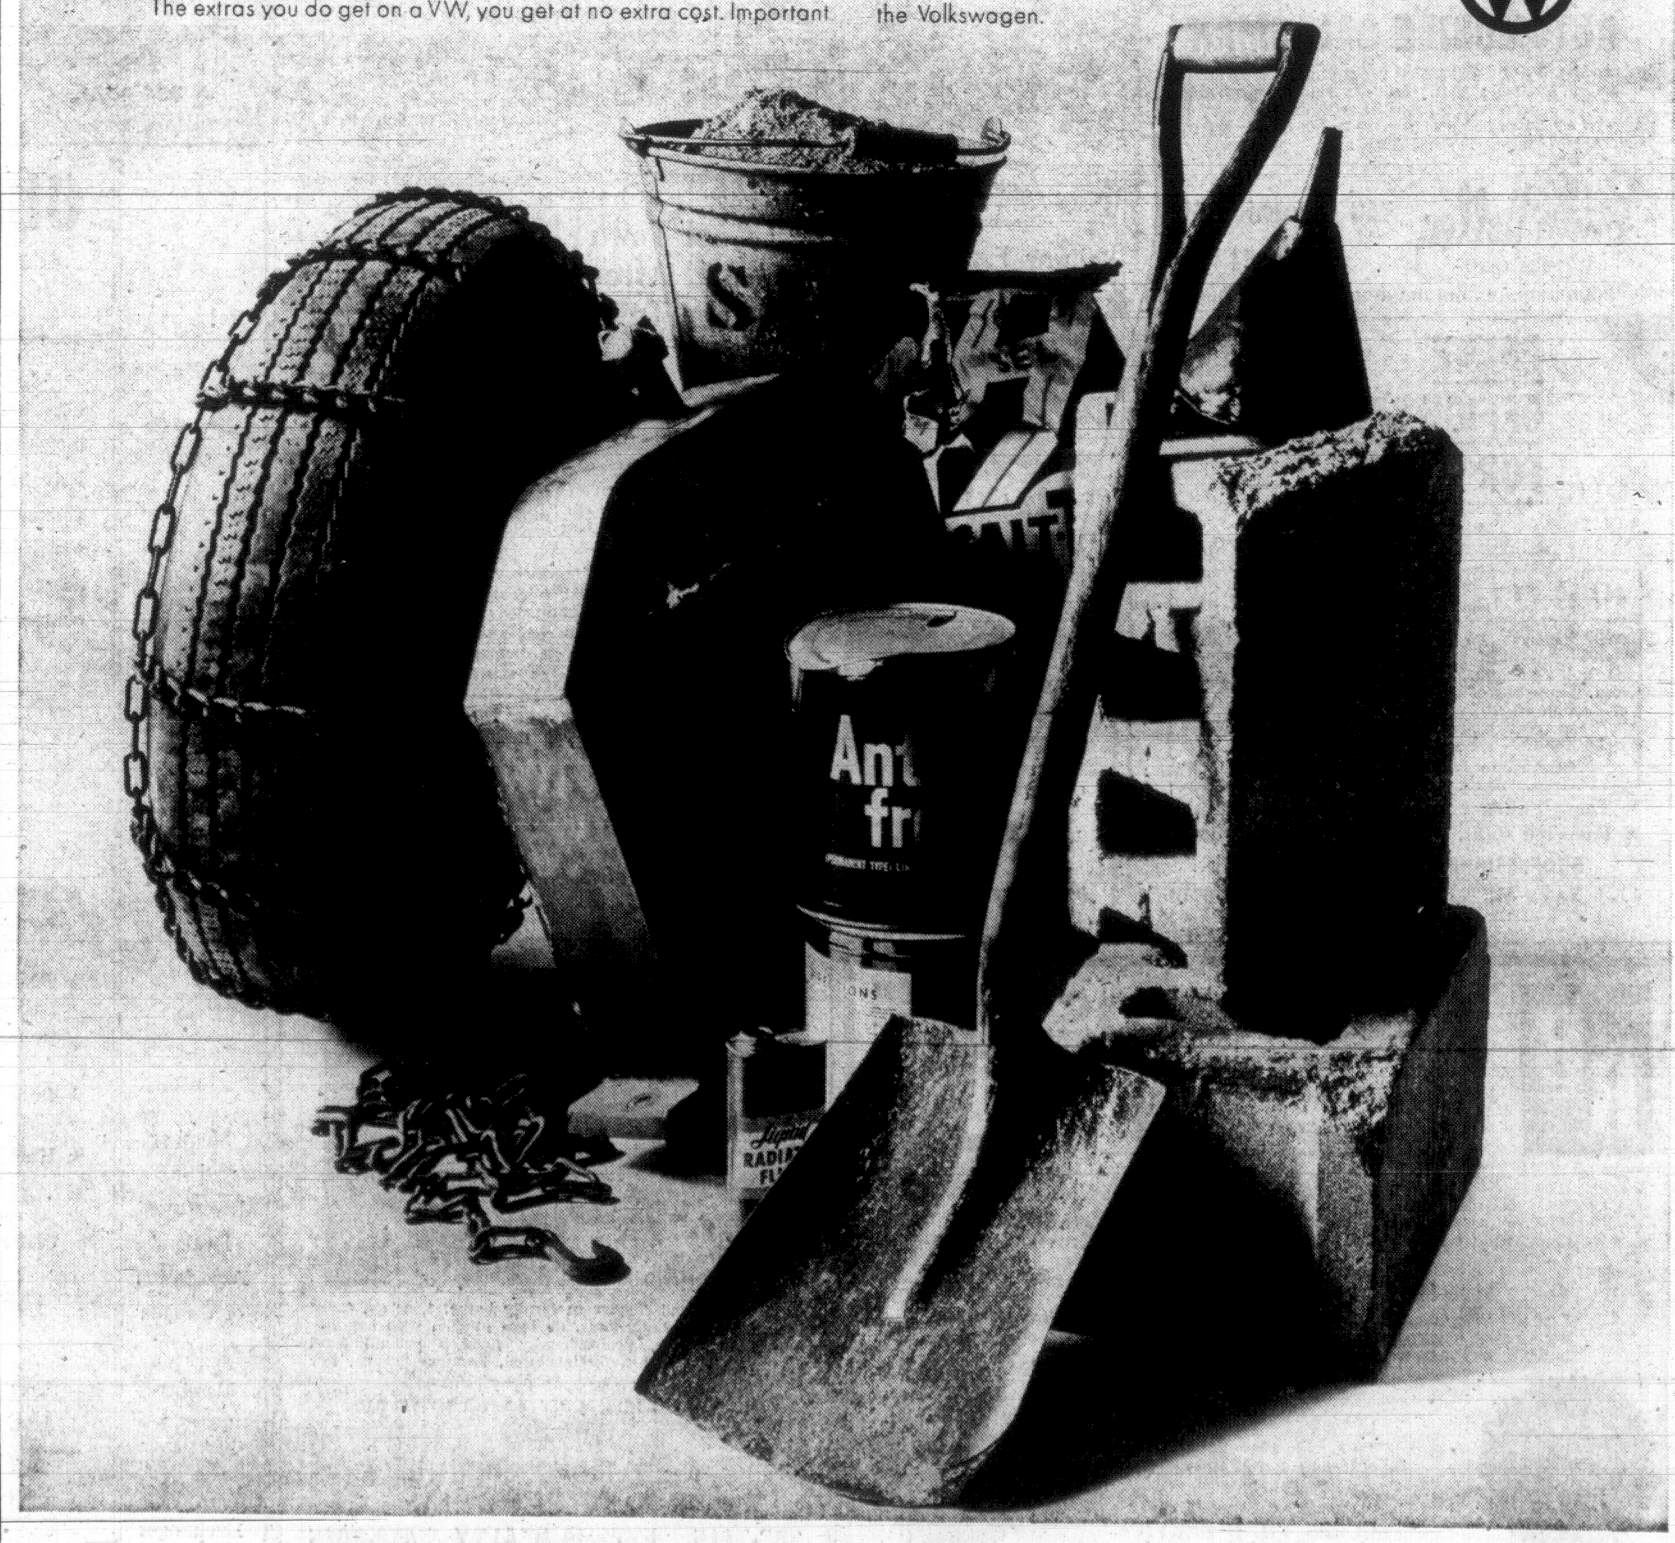

It has an air-cooled engine in the rear mounted right over the back wheels (the ones that drive the car) so you can drive the car in snow, mud, slush or ice, and get somewhere.

And because it's cooled by air, not water, it doesn't have a radiator to freeze up. (So it goes without saying that it goes without anti-freeze, hoses, rad flush or rust inhibitors.)

The extras you do get on a VW, you get at no extra cost. Important things like a carburetor de-icer to make sure it won't stall in cold weather. A specially coated, solid sheet of steel that seals the bottom against dirt, salt, sticks and stones. And four coats of paint everywhere to fight rust everywhere. (Which is why a Volkswagen looks as good in the Spring as it did in the Fall.)

Finally, in all honesty, we must admit that there are a few more extras you can't get on a VW. Pushbutton windows, pushbutton antennas or pushbutton seats.

But when you think about it, not having all those gadgets in a Volkswagen to push isn't all that bad. Not when you consider that you won't have to push the Volkswagen.

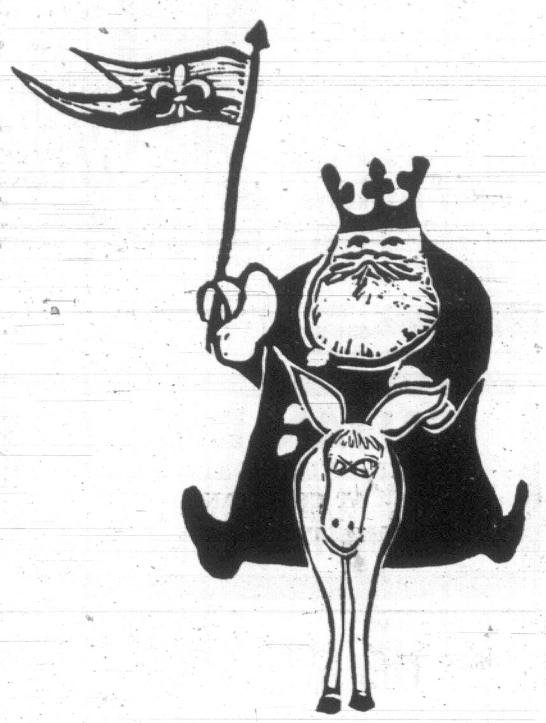

YOUNG CANADA'S BOOK WEEK

Instead of Smug Bits of Fluff, Lots of KAHAHBOOM

By KAREN SMITH

Ribboned canopies at the [illegible] Victoria Public Library this week invite Victorians to browse among the several hundred books on display for Young Canada's Book Week. The books, plus the annotated lists available, constitute the best of the past year's crop for children and young people.

One particularly outstanding feature is a superior new addition to children's Canadiana, The Wind Has Wings; Poems from Canada, compiled by Mary Alice Downie and Barbara Robertson, illustrated by Elizabeth Cleaver (Oxford, $5.95). These are not the condescending bits of fluff often fed to children causing them to grow up hating poetry, but the best of all styles of poetry written in Canada.

'. . . Here comes John with his three months' pay' riding on a donkey? (From The Wind Has Wings)

The starkness of Eskimo chants, the chuckle of Y. Y. Segal, the quiet integrity of Archibald Lampman, the terseness of George Johnston, the warmth of French Canadian folk songs and the rollicking fun of the ubiquitous Dan McGrew are included in the 77 poems which will charm children and adults as well. The strikingly colored linoleum cuts alternating with well-spaced plain or black and white illustrated pages give it an elegant format.

Brilliant Hues

Among the other books on display from those for preschool to high school, Drummer Hoff, adapted by Barbara Emberley, illustrated by Ed Emberley (Prentice-Hall, $4.75), must lead the list. Stylized and militarily precise woodcuts in brilliant hues earned it the American Library Association's 1968 Caldecott Medal for the best illustrated book; and the folk rhyme describing the firing of a cannon, "General Border gave the order, Major Scott brought the shot, Captain Bammer brought the rammer . . . Drummer Hoff fired it off," repeated with each new character, will have the little ones chanting with the reader right down to the KAHAHBOOM.

Books for middle grade children are often the mildest and dullest in the juvenile field, but William Pene du Bois' books have added a distinct air of the offbeat and appealing. The Horse in the Camel Suit (Fitzhenry and Whiteside, $4.95), his second book about a super-intelligent boy detective, combines spoof, melodrama and action in just the right proportion for marvellously fresh, lively reading.

Beverly Cleary, whose Henry Huggins books for grade threes and fours have hooked so many children on reading, has another slapstick story peopled with rambunctious children. This time, Ramona the Pest (McLeod, $4.75), Henry's little sister, becomes a kindergarten dropout when she can't ignore the prissy little girl with the boing-boing curls.

Several fine contributions to fantasy for older children have been published this year. The final book in the magnificent Chronicles of Prydain by Lloyd Alexander, The High King (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $5.50), unifies the series of five books begun by The Book of Three.

In the kingdom based, like Tolkien's Hobbit series, on Welsh folklore, the battles against the forces of evil are on an epic scale, yet the individuals are genuinely human; the values are universal, yet not abstracted to absurdity; the basic reality of fantasy is always apparent, yet humor is never lost for long. A fitting finale to a series which is already being read by a great many children, it should not be limited to the so-called "special reader," but suggested when children want "an exciting story."

The excellent British science fiction writer John Christopher has begun a thoughtful and involving trilogy for young teen-agers. The White Mountains and The City of Gold and Lead (Collins, $3.50 each) follow three boys in a future earth as they seek to escape the control of the monstrous ruling Tripods which implant steel caps in the skulls of all 14-year-olds, rendering them docile, obedient and helpless.

Fleeing first to the mountains of what used to be Switzerland, they go in the second book to the control city to overthrow the Tripods. Written with the penetrating imagination and skill of the best fiction, these two books have very little in common with many of the flat-characteredspace travel stories.

Vicious War

In keeping with the intense concern of most young adults for problems of the city and teen-age gangs are three of the books displayed in the young people's department. The most startling is written by a teen-aged girl, S. E. Hinton, about the vicious war between the Socs (right side of the tracks) and her friends the Greasers, (wrong side) in The Outsiders (Macmillan, $3.95).

Ponyboy, the 14-year-old narrator, describes the mutual hatred of the two groups and the savage baiting that leads his meek best friend to kill one of the Mustang - driving group. Although the plot is manipulated too obviously toward the end where the boys rescue some children from a fire, the intensity of feeling which permeates the whole overcomes this weakness. In a book which demands such involvement teen-agers will find much to discuss.

Madeleine L'Engle of Wrinkle in Time fame has given only peripheral treatment to city teen-age gangs in The Young Unicorns (Ambassador, $3.50), but her theme is broader. The Austins have moved to New York City and become inadvertently involved in the plot of a madman to "purify" people in the city by destroying aggressive centres of their brains with Dr. Austin's laser micro-ray.

Guinea Pigs

Members of the Alphabat gang are used as guinea pigs, and one of their former members tries to help the Austins and a child prodigy who has been blinded by the micro-ray. Although the philosophy and theology become too overt and heavy-handed at times, the characters are fascinating and the suspense undeniable as the gang kidnaps the young Austin boy.

A non-fiction treatment of a subject related to city problems is Robert Goldston's The Negro Revolution (Macmillan, $4.95). An excellent though brief introduction to American Negro history and protest, it dispels such popular myths as the first slaves being "rescued from savagery", by describing the complex heritage and society of pre-white Africa. It offers no solutions, but gives a basic understanding of the causes and present conduct of the civil rights movement.

Mrs. Peter Kahn Reads One of Her Books to Pam Cairney, 5, and Elizabeth Kahn, 5.

Most Amazing Of Eccentrics

THE SHORT HAPPY WALKS OF MAX MACPHERSON, by Harry Bruce; Macmillan of Canada, $4.95.

Reviewed by R. G. Lawrence.

Old Torontonians will enjoy this book. Perhaps some readers of this review will take offence at the adjective old, but it is apt because this book is an anthology of nostalgia, ". . . in an old and fragrant summer, that had longer and greener months and longer and greener hours than any of these wheeling summers of the sixties . . ."

The author is that most remarkable of eccentrics, a man who enjoys walking. "I march along the pavement in the face of the oncoming traffic. The cars are splashing through lakes of black water and, as I leap gracelessly off the road and into the wet snow . . . the drivers give me astonished and offended looks. What right have I on the Rosedale Valley road? I'm not on wheels."

SMELLING MONEY

Some of Mr. Bruce's responses to Toronto are intensely personal, as his visit to his old high school, with remembrances of unhappy things past. Mostly, however, the author is a semi-dispassionate observer of the variety of the city:

"Way off to the south, I hear a lot of sirens getting together to correct something sad . . . I like to wander around down there at the Colonnade) to smell the money in action . . . Yorkdale is a cavernous and monumental tribute to the power of the family dollar on wheels . . ."

Surely it is the variety of Toronto that will make these "love letters to the city" stick in the mind: pubs, churches, factories, skyscrapers, the zoo, pawnshops, Farmers' Market the Royal Ontario Museum, cemeteries, the CNE, the airport, Little Italy, Union Station . . .

'DIRTY BUS JOKES'

Mr. Bruce does not offer merely vast generalizations about each of these aspects of Toronto, but applies his imagination to whatever he writes about. He thinks about missing a bus after a long, cold wait. Several buses will, of course, come at once and "they'll all slam their doors shut and pull away together, giggling and chuckling among themselves, telling dirty bus jokes, pretending they don't notice that I've fallen on the icy sidewalk and that I'm weeping."

Beneath the sad, the amusing, and the colorful characteristics of the metropolis, Mr. Bruce can catch the pulse or spirit:

"This whole neighborhood (Queen Street) testifies with peculiar force to the ceaseless changing, the trading, the moving around, the shuffling of dreams, the stirring that goes on and on like a great current in an ocean and, among hundreds of thousands of people, becomes the blood and romance and forever undocumented history of Toronto."

Elmer Elevator Must Be Heavy

Rescuing a baby dragon from the fearsome animals on Wild Island may seem an odd thing to do, but a new resident of Victoria has made this bit of fantasy very much a part of the real world.

Mrs. Peter Kahn, who writes under the name Ruth Stiles Gannett, has created three charming books for primary-aged children about Elmer Elevator and a baby dragon, Boris: My Father's Dragon, Elmer and the Dragon, and The Dragons of Blueland, all published by Random House.

The stories, which are perfectly expressed and complemented by the illustrations of her stepmother, Ruth Chrisman Gannett, combine realistic details with original and imaginative events, so that the total effect is convincing. So convincing, in fact, that Mrs. Kahm recently received three letters from a 7-year-old boy in Japan, where the books have been translated. One letter was addressed to her as author, one to Elmer Elevator, and one to Boris, the dragon.

TRUE BELIEVER

Since the boy permitted her to read the other two letters, she knows that he is a true believer, who thinks Elmer must be very heavy to carry, and would like to have Boris come to his house next time. He concluded his letter to the dragon: "I and my family are waiting for you." Mrs. Kahn responded sensitively by sending the boy a copy of E. B. White's Charlotte's Web, which deals so beautifully with questions of fantasy and reality.

There have been many more true believers, to judge from the continued success of the books. In the twenty years since My Father's Dragon was published, it and its sequels have sold about 10,000 copies each year in North America, in addition to a special printing of 800,000 copies for the Children's Weekly Reader Book Club. And besides the Japanese translations, the first book has recently been translated into Swedish and Danish.

QUIET REBELLION

Coming from Cornell University in Ithaca, New York, Mrs. Kahn moved to Victoria in August with her husband, who is professor of graphics in the art department at the University of Victoria, and their seven daughters, aged 5 to 20. The two oldest daughters are studying in New York now, but the others manage to fill their stately white house overlooking the sea with what their mother describes as quiet rebellion.

Several years ago Mrs. Kahn published a book very different from her dragon series, Katie and the Sad Noise, which has met with moderate success. A realistic story with a Christmas setting, it is written entirely in conversation, because she originally conceived the idea as a children's easy-reading comic strip. She plans to write more children's books when time allows, but she is not a compulsive writer.

"I was educated to think of writing as something to do for fun," she said. "I write to please myself." And, incidentally, many others.

Captain Gallant—Is He Real?

BOWMANVILLE BREAK, by Sidney Shelley; Fitzhenry and Whiteside; $6.25.

Reviewed by Timothy Evans

Bowmanville Break is a straightforward Second World War adventure story: it is thoroughly competent and thoroughly typical.

Many of our familiar friends appear — incredible Germans talking about the Fatherland; a prison camp commander with too much indulgence and too little shrewdness; an Allied intelligence officer bearing the comic strip name of Captain Gallant.

All the characters believe in the significance of their contribution to the war effort with great earnestness and complete lack of humor; the world they inhabit is altogether unappealing and unreal.

LACKS SUBTLETY

The story concerns a carefully planned breakout of U-boat captains who are being held as prisoners of war in Ontario. When Canadian intelligence discovers that the escapees are to be met off the mouth of the St. Lawrence by two U-boats, the temptation to trap the U-boats is so great that the escape is allowed to go ahead in order to reveal the site of the rendezvous.

The opportunity for novelty presented by the Canadian setting is unfortunately wasted because Mr. Shelley gives us no description of the country and thus creates no sense of place. The book is adequately written but the story lacks subtlety and the novel is one in a long line of tales about a war which is becoming increasingly remote for most of us.

With Chaos Inescapable The Pope 'Hovered Above'

THE CATHOLIC REVOLUTION, by Douglas J. Roche, Musson, 325 pages, $7.95.

Reviewed by Bryan McGill

If a non-Catholic managed to read this book he would probably find it bizarre.

He would read about priests, nuns and laymen heroically fighting for permission to think for themselves, to swallow birth control pills, to marry, and even to choose the colors of one's own clothes.

But these are real dilemmas to many Catholics and upon them the "timeless" Church of Peter may fall.

Mr. Roche begins his book with a bad admission. He acknowledges the help of several priests and bishops, including Archbishop Anthony Jordan of Edmonton, in whose diocese Mr. Roche is editor of the Western Catholic, a weekly, lively-looking but tame in content.

He should have listened more closely to the words of one girl student he quotes. "Many theologians have a valid point to make, but they ensconce it in verbal compromise so that it won't be too offensive to the powers that be."

DOUBLE-TALK

Mr. Roche's account of The Revolution (or counter-revolution) is frequently tempered to the point of double-talk, especially when he talks about the hierarchy.

When he comes to interpreting the actions of Pope Paul, Mr. Roche says in one instance: "Chaos . . . has proved inescapable as the reformers press forward more boldly only to encounter the stiffening theological conservatism of Pope Paul."

The next instance, "the church has been saved from being torn asunder by the acrobatic skill of Pope Paul."

POPE PAUL
. . . 'acrobatic skill'

With thousands of Catholics either rebelling or dropping out of the church because of a reactionary hierarchy, and with disaster around the corner, Mr. Roche comes up with this vision:

"And as the 261st successor of St. Peter hovered above them (astronaut James McDivitt and a member of the Swiss Guard), the organ at a crescendo, a multitude of tongues singing our Praise to the Lord Almighty the King of Creation, the red light glowing on a television camera, the religious pilgrimage of twenty centuries came into focus and the Catholic Church shone as a Church for all people for all time."

BOOKISH JARGON

Mr. Roche draws heavily on the bookish jargon of experts and the new post-Vatican II cliches spewing from church seminars and conferences. Little is concrete except for one passage in which an ex-priest describes the "small minds, small acts" he encountered when attempting to leave the priesthood.

Surprisingly enough, Mr. Roche, who has been working as a journalist the past six years in Canada, neglects to draw on any of his close-to-home experience.

Completed just before Pope Paul's anti-contraception bombshell, Mr. Roche's book was outdated before it hit the presses. And he seems to realize this in a hastily inserted two-page afterword in which he finally drops his over-the-shoulder tone.

"The crisis of authority within the Church has now reached an intensity that no one thought possible when Vatican II ended . . . The Catholic Revolution has taken a critical turn."

Massey Bequest Defines Early Canadian Outlook

By TED LINDBERG

Vincent Massey, statesman, cultural leader and patron, was not only during his life a prime mover and benefactor to countless educational and fine arts institutions, but bequeathed to the National Gallery what is thought to be one of the finest and most complete private collections of Canadian painting ever gathered.

The collection, now known as the Massey Bequest, has been brought to the Art Gallery of Greater Victoria, the first exhibition of a tour that will also stop in other principle art centres across the nation.

Lindberg

The Art Gallery is fairly brimming with these works, fore and aft, and if you haven't seen them already, tomorrow afternoon, November 17, is the last day they will be on view.

The artists represented comprise most of the heart and soul of Canadian painting through the early decades of the century, including most of the Group of Seven, and an especially fine cross section of the work of David Milne, as well as others who came into eminence in the thirties.

It is a beautiful and instructive show, which tells much of Canadian character and mood, from the turn of the century (and a few before), to the portals of the Second World War, even including the expatriate efforts of self-exiled young artists, seeking the sun and varied experience, like James Wilson Morrice, who painted in France, Tunisia and Trinidad.

●

Like their American cousins, Canadian artists of this period were mainly affected by the innovations of the French precursors of Art Nouveau, Impressionism and Post-impressionism. Several in this exhibition came under the influence of Americans like Maurice Prendergast and exponents of the so-called "Ash Can School," a form of intimate and romantic realism that shook them loose from a Victorian academic lethargy.

The Canadian mood, even experimenting with these new techniques, carried strains of the English landscape tradition, which is perhaps less sensual, less scrutinizing, less social, (indeed, almost devoid of human content).

This painting is significant for its preoccupation with distinctly Canadian subject matter, and Mr. Massey, as a fervent nationalist, must have much prefered work of this genre, though it speaks little of actual Canadian identity.

●

The nation, in its adolescence, made little effort to look at itself, save through a telescopic, wide-angle lens which could manage best the endless vistas of the north country.

It took another 30 years and the advent of the National Film Board, the Canada Council, (for which Mr. Massey was also largely responsible), and Expo '67, to apply the X-ray and microscope, examining the psycho-social-genetic make-up of society in this great hunk of continent.

For the most part, it was the vastness and power, the illimitable stark beauty and cruelty of this land that captured these early artists' attention, the pervasiveness of the beclouded atmosphere, the hard, long winters, the precious little color of autumn for a few weeks (compared to the local color of the south of France). It was a world of blues, greens, greys, mauves and ochres of an unpeopled outdoors.

There is a constant sense of loneliness in this painting — loneliness and silence. Perhaps only Emily Carr, living on the periphery of our own great rain forest (and prompted by the Indian art), properly intuited to the fullest the animism of the virgin landscape.

●

Her rich, green painting, "Indian Hut, Queen Charlotte Islands," is a veritable superseance of spiritual revelation, compared to a painting by Cornelius Krieghoff, titled "Owl's Head, Memphremagog" (dated 1859), which depicts in an unintentionally comic way, the frenetic efforts of two men in a precariously low-riding boat to reach shore through a choppy, storm-riled sea.

Mr. Krieghoff's land is uninviting, impenetrable wilderness, which holds nothing but hardship and alienation for those who try to come to terms with it.

This is what the early pioneers saw: it was something to be subdued and put to use, seldom loved for its beauty.

The Group of Seven, and their contemporaries at least took a kindlier attitude about nature. They found beauty as it came, and through their abilities, transformed it into strong, vibrant designs.

●

Their subjects were representational, but the design was formalistic and sometimes quite abstract. They were capable of poetic economy, probably gleaned as much as anywhere, from their experience as commercial designers and artists.

Tom Thomson, in particular, based his entire competence on this experience, and eventually struck a happy balance between an Art Nouveau commercial design and expressionistic liberty.

Both Thomson and J. E. H. MacDonald seem to have been powerfully affected by Scandinavians like Edvard Munch, for whom they must have had a considerable spiritual affinity.

It is interesting (though I suppose obvious), that none of these artists could entirely bring themselves to think and feel like the French painters, the English, or even the Americans.

In theory, this country is more attuned to life as the Scandinavians or the Russians know it, though it will take a few more centuries of northern development and human evolution to establish the fact.

The greatest collective frustration is that Canadians, pressing against their southern frontier, like to think they are primarily Anglo-Americans, while they are inheritors of a land-mass which is more likely to evolve them spiritually into Finns, Lapps and space-age Russian Siberians.

●

This accounts for much of this identity crisis, which is so apparent in these paintings. Most of these artists were equipped to tell us of their physical surroundings in this under-populated wilderness, but few had a clue as to how, exactly, they fitted into it; or what, exactly, they were.

These painters suffered public indifference, the depression, were called upon to record the ravages of war (the only way governments used to be able to think of employing artists . . .) and never could really afford the luxury of pure experimentation.

They knew mostly lean times, and some, untimely death, as a result of unattended physical needs, but they painted as long as they had the strength, and in the best way they could.

I think the Milne paintings, at proximity with the others, maintain an individuality, a kind of imagination and subtle taste, an enviable restraint that enforces his superiority, however slight, though the Thomsons, MacDonalds and Lismers contain a brilliant virtuoso brushwork.

There are two close-valued little compositions by Lionel Fitzgerald which evidence a spirit of deep, quiet contemplation, and show how ordinary things are discerned by a very sensitive eye.

Lawren Harris' style tends toward the greatest simplification, bordering on actual abstraction (to which he actually moved after 1940), and "In The Ward," a little painting of the early twenties, we see the beginning of an affinity for a strength and flatness of pattern, which is later refined in "Lake Superior III," which in tingling cold-light colors suggests the barren immensity of a wintry, wind-swept inland sea.

●

The strongly-defined contours of an A. Y. Jackson composition constantly emphasized the rolling topography of land and a leaden sky, usually with an aura of light in an untroubled stratosphere. Like Emily Carr, he grasps the sculptural implications of the landscape.

F. H. Varley and Pegi Nicol Macleod seem to be among the few who were really interested in painting people, and much of their best work was with this subject matter.

Varley ranged between actual protraiture and more general, figurative painting, but was also moved by the mystical quality of the landscape as contrasted to the people who lived in its enveloping atmosphere.

His portrait study titled "Vera" (dated circa 1930) exploits the purely romantic, pictorial possibilities in a human figure, but there is also no doubt that his model was a smashing beauty.

●

Another Varley protrait of Alice Vincent Massey, the wife of his benefactor, is a touching and evocative, prudently planned contemporary painting which betrays no one: neither Mrs. Massey, a noble and gracious but obviously middle-aged lady of prosaic countenance; nor the artist, who is less than enraptured with this task, as is true in his study of "Vera."

Somewhere between the approaches of these two portraits, we see F. H. Holgate's "Ludovine" (1930), another rare glimpse of actual human encounter. It is perhaps best among the portraits, because it is not perfunctory, nor as romantically idealized as with Varley.

We see a girl, humanly palpable, self-conscious and slightly uncomfortable in a bright flood-light, enduring the piercing scrutiny of an intense, analytical eye.

●

In all of this exhibition, here is perhaps the beginning of a kind of introspection which was just to begin in Canadian arts and letters of the thirties, which eventually permitted a new generation to wrest away from the Group a new and expanded interpretation of the human condition.

TURNING POINT in arts and letters in Canada showing emphasis on introspection is Ludovine, a 1930s portrait by Edwin Holgate. Canadian painting before this was largely concerned with landscape.

Appian Way Marvel Of World

Most tourists to Italy are familiar with the Appian Way — at least with that stretch of the ancient Roman highway that leads from the Eternal City itself to the Catacombs and the Appian Hills beyond. The road here still retains its original paving of basalt blocks and is marked by ancient mausoleums on either side, the best preserved of which is the well-known tomb of Cecilia Metella.

Thia is the Via Appia of the guide books, ending some 30 miles from Rome, and the relics that mark its way belong mainly to the Christian era, to the days of Imperial Rome.

With Norman Cribbens

I LOVE YOU, ALICE B. TOKLAS!

Peter Sellers

Royal Theatre

Is it for the hippies or the squares?

You'll never know.

This serio-comic film vacillates widly between two conflicting schools of thought without saying anything conclusive about either.

And that could be part of its rather tedious charm. Peter Sellers is a young Jewish lawyer on the eve of a fashionable wedding to a nice fashionable girl. But at heart he is searching for "identity" and a reasonable, logical rewarding way of life.

Along come the hippies and soon he is deserting a fashionable Jewish wedding for a pretty half-clad girl, a barefooted guru and a proselytizing band of nomads.

It all begins when Sellers' hippie-styled brother (David Arkin) attends a family funeral dressed in the traditional burial outfit of a Hopi Indian.

Arkin's girl friend (Leigh Taylor-Young) comes along because she has never been to a funeral before and wants to experience "everything that is beautiful."

★ ★ ★

Because of a strike of hearse drivers, Sellers transports the coffin to the cemetery in a psychedelic station wagon, loaned to him while his own car is being repaired.

On the way home, the hippie girl asks for a lift and winds up spending the night in Sellers' apartment — he in the bedroom, she on the couch in the living room with a marijuana cigarette.

Next morning she makes him a batch of brownies, prepared according to the Alice B. Toklas recipe, with a generous sprinkling of marijuana.

Sellers plunges into the hippie way of life, lets his hair grow, makes love to the girl and overflows with love for everyone — even the cops who harass them. Yet, while he goes along with the general philosophy, his Jewish heart is basically monogamous and his legal soul orderly.

There are some deft touches, as when Sellers walks with the guru along the seashore, drinking in his wisdom while his newly-bared feet flinch from the sharp stones beneath.

The guru likens him to the "flower in the crannied wall."

"Beautiful," says the disciple, "is that Ginsberg?"

"No, Tennyson," the guru replies.

Sellers welcomes the flower people to his flat but later rebels at the general disorder. When the hippie girl tells him he isn't hip, he replies:

"I'm so hip it hurts."

He tries to return to the fashionable life, but the hippie spell lingers. His future is uncertain.

NOW . . . Group Takes Rock Where It Should Go

By RUSSELL FREETHY

Vancouver's Collectors are probably the most refined progressive rock group in Canada. Usually, this sort of statement concerning a Canadian group falls on deaf ears across the border and the same in Canada.

With the Collectors, it is different.

In Vancouver, their fans once waited for hours, when the group was unavoidably late for an engagement at the Circus. There is also a large following in Southern California, speaking literally. They follow the group everywhere they play.

Freethy

Bill Graham, of Filmore fame, said, "The Collectors, as a group are taking rock music where it should have gone long ago."

And so they should; between them they have over thirty years of experience in studying, teaching, and television work with rock and jazz.

Claire Lawrence is an accomplished musician. He studied theory and composition at UBC, and has been playing professionally for eleven years. Equally proficient with saxophone, organ, flute and harmonica, Claire is considered to be one of the best saxophonists in Canada.

Bill Henderson is the lead guitarist. Artistic and inventive, his able playing has brought praise from Albert King and Mike Bloomfield.

Bill and Claire write most of the material used by the group.

Everybody kids him about his name, but Glenn Miller is a heavy on bass. Glenn also studied at UBC and under some of Canada's best teachers. He also has taught guitar for six years.

Ross Turny is the percussionist. For the most part, he is inconspicuous during a performance, but his drumming leaves little to be desired.

Former radio and television personality, Howie Vickers has been singing for eight years as a professional. His rough, sturdy voice is ideal for the group.

His high-strung emotions let him get into the music—screaming and shaking until he can hardly stand, in a painful exploration of an emotion that has become buried and meaningless amid today's inhumanities and self-produced anxieties.

What Love, one of their big numbers, builds the listener's frustrations into driving moments of passionate feeling that exhaust him and then release him into gentle emotional probings on the nature of love.

Good for about half an hour live, What Love is a serious work.

It is a suite that employs classical formulas, developed and used by composers through the ages, to serve up a poetic musical vision.

The Collectors carefully control the creation, intensity and length of their songs. Climaxes and the use of distortion and volume form an integral part of the emotional revolution which is evident in most of their works.

More Theatre Stories on Pages 26, 30, 31

The choice of material on their first Warner Brothers album is rock at its finest. There is a second album due for release soon. Included in it will be some more uncommon numbers such as Old Man, Look at a Baby, and No Name Ballad.

If you haven't as yet been collected by the Collectors, it is high time you were.

The Collectors have also been contracted to compose and perform the score for a stage production of the Vancouver Playhouse Theatre Company. It is called Grass and Wild Strawberries and is set for the end of April at the Queen Elizabeth.

Congratulations are in order for the AMS's efforts in bringing Casey Anderson to the Uvic campus two weeks ago.

Mr. Anderson is a very good folk singer and entertainer. He did a bit of Bob Dylan and a little of Lightfoot, some Ma Cotton and one Tiny Tim number. Within all this, he interspersed some of his own material and a little humor.

It looks as if he might just have a hit record on CKLG. There are three albums by Casey Anderson, and all are available from your favorite record store.

Might I personally recommend the latest album by the Small Faces. Called Ogden's Nut Gone Flake, it is one of the better recent albums.

NOTED for her artistry in the field of ballet, Celia Franca, director of the National Ballet Guild of Canada since 1951, announced Friday her intention to resign.

Canada Not Grateful Says Montreal Star

By GAIL SCOTT

MONTREAL (CP) — Pert and pretty Genevieve Bujold, star of the Canadian film Isabel which had a successful opening in New York recently, says Canadians throw their artists out on their ears.

"They are mean like children," Miss Bujold said in an interview. "Always negative about their artists. Always looking for the black beast in anything Canadian."

The 26-year-old French-Canadian who got international acclaim for her part in La Guerre est Finie by the French producer Alain Renais, said Toronto is the only city in the world in which that film was panned.

"I won a prize in Paris for my performance, and received good reviews from respected critics all over the world, but in Toronto they said I didn't have the right legs for the part."

The young Montrealer is married to Paul Almond, who directed Isabel, the mysterious tale of a young Gaspesienne who returns to her childhood home and finds herself enveloped by superstition and fear.

"Canadians should join elbows to push their art up, but instead they hurt, annoy and finally bore artists with their niggling little criticisms."

LIMITS FILM ROLES

With wide-set brown eyes and a slightly turned-up nose, Miss Bujold could still almost pass for a schoolgirl in the convent where she spent 12 years.

For the interview, she sat in the sunroom of her mountainside stucco home in a green knit mini-dress and a freshly-scrubbed face.

"You must see my baby," she said, leading the way to the adjoining nursery where three-week-old James Matthew slept. "It's wonderful to have a baby," she added, beaming over the crib.

Would James Matthew inhibit her film career?

"Oh no," she replied. "But I only shoot the films I really want to do. It all depends who the director is."

Would she rather work in French or English?

"I love English," smiled Miss Bujold. "It's like me. Direct. Precise. To the point.

"But I would never do Shakespeare," she added, after praising two of her French-Canadian colleagues who ventured onto the stage for the Shakespearean festival at Stratford, Ont., this year.

"I think it's impossible for a French-speaking person to do a really good job of Shakespeare, just as it's impossible for an English-speaking person to do Moliere properly."

SPORTS DIARY

By SHIRLEY POVICH
(The Washington Post)

WASHINGTON — Sonny Liston is being guided back into the mainstream of heavyweight title contenders, it is feared. Concerned citizens for a better boxing society are viewing with alarm the 11 straight knockouts compiled by Liston since it was decided, by somebody, that he still had a future in the prize fight business.

Three years ago it was presumed, if not safely, that Liston was eradicated from the heavyweight scene when he stretched his knockout streak at the hands of Cassius Clay to two straight. To keep the streak going, he failed to last out the first round against Clay in Lewiston, Maine, on May 25, 1965.

Nothing much was heard from Liston for more than a year thereafter, except that he was enjoying the leisure world of Las Vegas, where he lived. And then came the first disconcerting reports that Sonny Boy was preparing to fight again. He popped up in Sewden and knocked out a German heavyweight named Gerhard Zech in seven rounds, only mildly threatening the record of somebody named Dave Dailey, who had knocked out Zech in two.

●

There was no stopping Liston after that. Immediately, he knocked out Amos Johnson, stopped Dave Bailey in one, savaged Elmer Rush in six, and had his feet firmly planted on the comeback trail. And the other night in Pittsburgh he made it 11 straight by knocking out Roger Rischer. Roger who?

Roger Rischer is from Texas, the dispatches said. Where else Roger has been and what the circumstances of his steady climb to a fight with Sonny Liston might have been are largely unrecorded. The Ring, the authentic boxing encyclopedia, in listing the names of all boxers active in America, Continental Europe, Africa, Asia and Australia in 1967, omits all mention of Roger Rischer.

It seems that Rischer, perhaps understandably, did not have his full confidence when the referee called them to midring. "Rischer's apprehension was noticeable as Liston scowled while the boxers received their pre-fight instructions from referee Buck McTiernam," the United Press International reported.

●

Liston scowled, too, at Cassius Clay in both their fights, but he couldn't make it stick. In the first fight, Clay changed Liston's expression from scowl to surrender and took his title in the seventh round, and in the second fight Clay simply left Liston expressionless, on the floor at Lewiston in round one.

There must have been something odd about the Liston-Rischer fight in Pittsburgh. Liston dropped his man for an eight-count with a right uppercut and bombed him into a knockout in the third. Yet the dispatches said it was a dull fight and that the fans were bored, and that they hooted. A clue, perhaps, was the notation that "Rischer, bewildered and extremely cautious, backpedalled throughout the second round."

The trouble now is that Liston is ranked fourth by the World Boxing Association in the heavyweight division. This is pretty ominous for those who applauded Cassius Clay's "help stamp out Sonny Liston" campaign. It means that pretty soon he could be fighting either Jimmy Ellis, the WBA champion, or Joe Frazier, who reigns as champ in a five-state segment of the United States.

Liston as a heavyweight contender does not quite represent progress. He was discredited that night in Miami Beach in 1964 when he elected to sit it out on his corner stool when the bell sounded for the seventh round. Liston claimed he was suffering from a torn shoulder muscle. He was know to be suffering from too much Cassius Clay.

At Lewiston, exactly 15 months later to the day, Liston was completely healthy but even more collapsible. Clay said he struck Liston with a short right hand punch, but at ringside it was widely unseen. There was no question that Liston went down and stayed down, however. The official timekeeper said he had been knocked out in one minute flat.

Liston's latest conquest is expected to lead him into a bout with Jerry Quarry, a Californian who likes to fight only on his own terms. He does not relish opponents who do not step forward to meet him. A fight with Quarry could lead Liston to a title shot, he hopes. "I'll just have to keep knocking them out to go up the ladder," Liston said.

It is still a matter of debate as to how far Liston climbed the ladder by knocking out Roger Rischer. That dejected boxer who had been laboring in obscurity said, "I don't know how hard Liston could hit." Asked where he is headed next, Rischer said, "Home, I guess."

THE REASON HORNETS STING

Cutting Wings Add Sharpness To Cats' Claws

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars put into practice Friday what coach Doug Anderson preached for two hours in a workout earlier this week. It paid off in an 8-1 exhibition victory over Butler Brothers of the Vancouver Island Hockey League.

It also put a new sharpness into the Cougar attack. In time, one might add, for their return to regular B.C. Junior League activity.

Cougars entertain Kamloops Rockets at Memorial Arena tonight, starting at 8:30.

Playing well as a unit, Cougars had little difficulty in defeating Butlers in the second of three exhibition games the junior team has scheduled at Esquimalt's Sports Centre.

Although nonsensical brawling in the "it-doesn't-matter" late stages marred the game, Cougars showed new nip on attack. Most of it stemmed from slick passing and cutting wingers.

The wingers made it so. They cut in sharply towards the goal after picking up the pass and invariably found themselves open for a good shot. The sharp cut is in marked contrast to the long glide along the boards, followed by an often-useless skate behind the rivals' net.

Five of Victoria's eight goals came off the cut-in plays. This is what the Cougars practised for two hours earlier this week.

PICTURE PLAY

The effectiveness was never better emphasized than by the goal scored by Cougar winger Bob Merluk. He had a half-step advantage on a Butler defenceman when Merluk took a pass from centre Adrian Blais. In making a bee-line for the goal, Merluk picked up another step and a half on the defender and coasted in home-free to rifle the puck past an over-worked and frustrated Ed Hastings.

It was a picture effort.

Slick Grant Evans scored three other goals for the juniors while Blais collected two. Lonnie Miles and Scott Munro aded the others.

Cougars ran up an 8-0 lead before Orv Coulter scored late in the second period. Coulter's shot was deflected off the stick of Victoria defenceman Laurie Moore.

Cougars played without John Van Horlick, nursing a slight touch of the 'flu. As well, rookie Bruce Cowick suffered a head injury when charged into the boards by two Butler players.

The melee was touched off in the final minute of play when Hastings swung his stick at Merluk during a scramble in front of Butlers' goal.

Cowick, who had suffered a head injury in a Wednesday game at New Westminster, was rushed to hospital to check up on a possible concussion.

In regular Island League action, North American Stockers took over first place by defeating Queen's Own Rifles 4-1 on goals by Dave McCluskey, Les Bergman, Don Lancaster and Brian Whitten. Reg Gurr scored for Rifles.

	P	W	L	F	A	Pts
Stockers	6	3	2	1	14	12	7

Butler Bros.	5	2	2	1	13	14	5

VERNON ESSOS PROTEST LOSS TO KELOWNA

VERNON (CP) — Vernon Essos of the British Columbia Junior Hockey League are protesting a Wednesday defeat.

Kelowna Buckaroos won the contest here 7-3, but Vernon is protesting on grounds that the visitors had too many players listed on the scoresheet.

Broncos Defuse Rockets

By The Canadian Press

A lacklustre performance by Kamloops Rockets and outstanding skating of the Penticton Broncos' Ted Hays combined to give Penticton an 8-4 edge in British Columbia Junior Hockey League action in Kamloops Friday.

In Kelowna, Buckaroos tied visiting Vernon 5-5.

Hays scored twice for Broncos in the opening minutes of the Kamloops match before Gord Redding replied for Rockets at 9:30 of the first period.

Broncos kicked back with singles by Jim Whitlam and Ken Conner before the period ended leaving Kamloops behind 4-1 going into the second.

Hays counted another tally at 11:50 of the second period and Reg Cherenko and Ken Conner boosted Bronco's margin to six goals.

Finally stung to action in the third period, Rockets scored twice in the opening minutes on goals by Don Stanley and Bruce Johnson only to have Hays return with another tally.

Rockets got the last word in with Larry Simon's goal at 19:23.

Pearce, Armstrong Spark Viking Squad

TACOMA, Wash. — University of Victoria Vikings downed University of Puget Sound 7-5 in an exhibition water polo match Friday. Brian Pearce scored four goals for winners while Dave Armstrong provided the balance.

UVic plays University of Washington in another exhibition tonight.

RACE SCRATCH AVERTS MALE RIDERS' BOYCOTT

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (UPI) — A threatened riders' boycott over Kentucky's first woman jockey was averted early today when her scheduled mount, Bo Tree, was scratched from the first race at Churchill Downs.

Penny Ann Early of Chicago, who received a temporary jockey's licence this week, had planned to ride Bo Tree in the six-furlong claiming race. But with a probable muddy track in the offing, Bo Tree was among five thoroughbreds scratched, reducing the 12-horse field to seven.

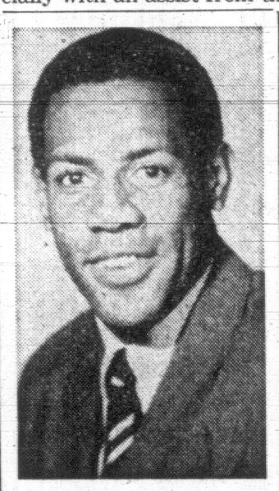

Bo Tree had been listed as having "no boy" in the official overnight entries.

Miss Early said trainer Hal Steele, who was one of the signees of her jockey application papers, had notified her late Friday she could ride Bo Tree.

Today's action brought sighs of relief from male jockeys who had threatened to boycott the first race if Miss Early saddled up. Downs president Wathen Knebelkamp said: "This just means that it will come up again Monday, or Tuesday, or Wednesday."

Argos Eye Skies For Hopeful Sign

TORONTO (CP)—Toronto Argonauts believe they can defeat Ottawa Rough Riders in the two-game total-point Eastern Football Conference final, especially with an assist from the weather.

TALENTED basketball veteran Chuck Pruiet is scheduled to appear with Vancouver Senior "A" All-Stars in pair of weekend exhibition games against junior Victoria Chinooks at Central Junior High School. Teams are slated to clash at 8:45 Saturday and 2:15 Sunday. Each game will be preceeded by mini-league preliminary.

The first game of the series is scheduled for 11 a.m. PST Sunday and the Argos, who haven't beaten Ottawa in two years, contend they can function better than the Riders in cold, snow or sleet.

"A cold day would hurt Ottawa more than it would us," says linebacker Mike Blum, a former Rider. "It's not just the receivers and their cold hands. The ball freezes too. It's like trying to catch a cement ball.

"We have a better short passing game and the weather won't hurt that.

"We're going to win it anyway. I don't mind saying so, because I think we're a better team."

The Argonauts have not proven they are a better team during their three regular-season meetings with Ottawa this year. The Riders have outscored them 100-33 while winning all three encounters.

FRANK ISN'T IMPRESSED

But tackle Bill Frank says that the Riders just aren't impressive physically.

"Put any Ottawa player in a room with a Toronto player and the Argo would be the one to come out," says the 250-pound Frank.

Some of the Argos, especially defensive end Ed Harrington, say they would play the game for nothing just to prove their superiority.

Sunday's game will be televised nationally by the CTV, with the Toronto area blacked out. The second game is scheduled for Ottawa Saturday, Nov. 23.

The field at Canadian National Exhibition Stadium is expected to be in top shape for the first game. It has been covered with tarpaulins most of the week.

FIGHT FANS RIOT

New Garden 'Christened'

NEW YORK (AP) — The new Madison Square Garden got its baptism of whisky and wine bottles and stray chairs Friday night in a wild demonstration after the main event of a fight show.

When Ismael Laguna of Panama, former lightweight champion, was given a majority decision over Roman Blanco of Venezuela by way of Puerto Rico, the trouble started.

Ringside spectators scattered for the exits and reporters and referees crawled under the ring while pieces of glass bounced off chairs.

Several seats were ripped with knives. One small fire was reported to have started. The hockey press box was damaged and a small refrigerator was torn from its moorings.

IT HAPPENED BEFORE

It was a scene reminiscent of riots in the old Garden in recent years. Trouble started there after the Flash Elorde-Frank Narvaez match March 10, 1967, and the Dick Tiger-Jose Torres bout May 16, 1967.

Three spectators were reported to have been slightly injured Friday night.

Laguna, 138, is a fancy dancer type with quick hands and agile moves. Blanco, 136, called in Wednesday as a sub for the ailing Bunny Grant of Jamaica, is a sturdy little man who gave away height and reach, but almost made up for it in punching power.

A crowd of 8,500 fans paying $40,000 saw the show.

Victoria High Volleyballers Enter Semis

VANCOUVER — Victoria High School emerged as a semi-finalist in the "B" division following Friday's opening rounds of play for the B.C. Senior Girls' Volleyball Championship at Templeton High School.

A total of 16 zone teams are in the round-robin event.

Division "A" winners and points include John Oliver (14), Vancouver Templeton (12), Revelstoke (10) and Mission (8). Division "B" winners are Britannia (14), Kitsilano Vancouver (12), Vancouver Winfield (10) and Victoria (8).

Play was slated to finish today.

Tim Reiger paced the winners with 12 points with Bob Rimmer adding six.

Roadrunners Humble Front-Running Gulls

By The Canadian Press

Phoenix Roadrunners upset San Diego Gulls 8-2 in Western Hockey League play Friday night, allowing Portland Buckaroos and Vancouver Canucks to close on the league-leading Gulls.

Vancouver nipped Seattle Totems 3-2 in Vancouver to move into third place, two points behind Portland. Buckaroos defeated Denver Spurs 6-3 in Denver and have 20 points, three behind Gulls.

Len Lunde's second goal of the contest gave Canucks their win before 9,303 spectators in Vancouver. Ted Taylor added the other Canuck marker. Bill Dineen and Marc Boileau tallied for Seattle.

Lunde scored the winner with a fine play, moving through three Seattle players to beat Seattle goaltender Jim Armstrong with a 10-foot shot to the left-hand corner of the net.

Armstrong faced 37 shots, 18 in the second period. Gardener, who robbed Bob Courcy of a point-blank shot that could have tied the game, turned aside 26 shots for Canucks.

In Denver, Portland and Denver were tied 3-3 early in the third period but Buckaroos came up with goals by Norm Johnston Art Jones and Roger Bellerive for the victory.

Larry Leach, Doug Messier and Bill Saunders also scored for Portland before 2,510 fans. Centre Wilf Martin scored twice for Spurs and Gord Redahl scored in the third frame.

In Phoenix, Roadrunners put on their best attack of the season to upset Gulls, handing the league leaders their first defeat in eight games. Gulls were down 5-0 before scoring.

Andre Pronovost and Bob Charlebois each scored twice for Phoenix and other goals were contributed by Leo Thiffault, Ted Snell, Don Erickson and Gary Mehan.

Warren Hynes and Willie O'Ree replied for San Diego before 5,441 spectators.

Joan Pitre won the "A" division award in a women's competition at Royal Colwood Golf and Country Club. Eileen Ewing captured the "B" laurels while Agnes Dawson topped the "C" division.

HOT BEARS . . . SEEK FIFTH STRAIGHT

Piccolo Hopes to Match Sayers' Tune

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Brian Piccolo gets a long-awaited chance as Chicago's starting running back in the Bears' National Football League game against Atlanta Falcons Sunday.

Piccolo is replacing Gale Sayers, out for the season with torn ligaments and cartilage in his right knee.

In other NFL action Sunday, Cleveland is at Pittsburgh, St. Louis at Baltimore, Minnesota at Detroit, Los Angeles at San Francisco, New Orleans vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee, Philadelphia at New York and Dallas at Washington.

Piccolo picked up 67 yards in 18 carries after replacing Sayers last Sunday. Gale had 32 yards in 11 carries and 856 for the season—second best in the league—before the accident.

The Bears have won four straight with rookie Virgil Carter at quarterback and share the NFL's Central Division lead with Minnesota Vikings.

Meanwhile, New York Jets, already a cinch winner in the Eastern Division, Sunday launch Pbase One of their role to help determine the team they will face in the American League's championship showdown.

The Jets, with a 3½-game lead in their division, step into the Western Division chase—tightest in AFL history—for a two-game West Coast swing.

They take on Oakland Raiders Sunday, then meet San Diego Chargers the following week. The Raiders and Chargers currently are locked in second place with 7-2 records, just one half game behind Kansas City Chiefs 8-2.

A pair of Jet victories would not only assure them of their first Eastern title ever, but also could help set up Kansas City as the Jets' opponent for the right to move on to the Sugar Bowl playoff final.

New York's magic number is only two for clinching the title—any combination of Jet victories and losses by Boston Patriots or Houston Oilers totalling two gives the Jets the crown.

Kansas City plays host to Boston, 3-6, while San Diego goes to Buffalo Bills, 1-8-1. Denver Broncs, 4-5, are at Houston Oilers and Cincinnati Benkals, 2-8, at Miami Dolphins, 3-5-1, in other league games.

Lady's View Logical

By The Canadian Press

A red-haired secretary in Maple Leaf's front office has come up with a suggestion designed to fortify her National Hockey League heroes in back-to-back games with Chicago Black Hawks this weekend.

If either team takes both games it would be near the top in the closely-bunched Eastern Division.

"Can't we ask the fans to cheer the Black Hawks and boo the Leafs?" asked Maureen Garth. "The Leafs might get the idea they're on the road."

The Leafs' home record is two victories, three losses and two ties. They have five wins in six starts on the road.

"Were in trouble," moaned executive vice-president Harold Ballard Friday. "We've got to play three of our next four games on home ice. This could kill us."

RELAXED ON ROAD

Montreal leads the division with 20 points, New York Rangers and Boston Bruins are tied for second with 18 and Toronto and Chicago are tied for fourth with 16. Detroit Red Wings haul 14.

"On the road they're a little more relaxed," said Leafs coach Punch Imlach. "In fact, to date this has got to be the greatest road team I've ever been associated with. Five out of six in this league is damn good."

Tonight the Leafs will be without defenceman Pierre Pilote while the Hawks lack centre Stan Mikita.

Pilote suffered strained knee ligaments during a 1-1 tie with Boston Wednesday. On the same night in Chicago Mikita suffered a badly bruised ankle.

With Mikita out, coach Billy Reay has done some line shuffling. Bobby Hull, who has hit for four goals and seven assists in his last four games, is with centre Bob Schmautz and Ken Wharram. Chico Maki is at centre between Jim Pappin and Doug Mohns. Bill Orban is the extra forward.

In other games tonight Oakland Seals play at Montreal; New York is at Pittsburgh, Detroit at St. Louis Blues and Los Angeles Kings at Minnesota Twins.

Sunday action besides Leafs at Chicago includes Montreal at New York, Oakland at Boston, Los Angeles at Philadelphia and Minnesota at St. Louis.

Canadians Leading Winter Fair Event

TORONTO (CP)—Raynoso Fernandez of Brazil beat four riders in a jump-off and took first place in the International Stakes at the Royal Agricultural Winter Fair horse show Friday night, but Canada's team holds the overall team lead.

Riding Cantal, he completed the course in 36.8 seconds. His nearest U.S. rival, Carol Hofmann of North Branch, N.J., on Salem, also jumped without a fault in 43.3 seconds.

Frank Chapot of Wallpack, N.J., on San Lucas, placed third in 51.1 seconds with a one-half time fault. Mary Chapot was fourth on White Lightning in 33.4 seconds, the fastest time in the event, but she had one knockdown for four faults.

Fernandez advanced to the jump-off from the preliminary round which he covered in 57.2 seconds without a miss.

The contest was limited to four horses from each nation.

DAY FINISHES FIFTH

Only one Canadian horse, Canadian Club with Jim Day of King City, Ont., riding, reached the jump-off. He finished fifth, touring the course in 34.9 seconds with four faults from one knockdown.

British captain David Broome on Mr. Softie qualified for the jump-off when he finished the preliminary round clean in 48.4 seconds. However, he withdrew because of a back injury suffered in the practice ring when Mr. Softie stumbled on a jump and threw him head-over-heels into the dirt.

Horse and rider were reported well and expected to compete in today's jumping.

Team standings after two international contests: Canada 17, U.S. 15 and Brazil 10. Australia and Britain are scoreless.

Canada gained 17 points Friday afternoon in the International Welcome Stake when Day placed first and Jim Elder of Aurora, Ont., second and fourth.

Liske Remains As Lone Holdout

CALGARY (CP) — Signing of flanker Bob McCarthy has left Calgary Stampeders of the Western Football Conference with only one player who is playing out his option.

McCarthy, who caught 58 passes and scored seven touchdowns this season, came to terms just before Stampeders left for Regina and the first game of the WFC final.

Still unsigned and apparently planning to play in one of the U.S. leagues next season is quarterback Pete Liske.

Snubbed Vikings Tackle All-Stars

Uvic Vikings were left in the cold when Vancouver Ex-Grocers cancelled tonight's exhibition basketball game. An all-star team from the Victoria Senior Men's League was elected to fill in and meets the scholarly squad at 6:45 in the UVic gymnasium.

Knudson's Woes Drop Canada to Eighth Spot

ROME (AP)—Now that Julius Boros has recovered his putting form, the chances look better than ever for the United States to take an undisputable lead today in the 72-hole World Cup golf championship.

The Canadian team of Al Balding and George Knudson, both of Toronto, slumped to eighth place from fourth Friday and were eight strokes behind the United States and Nationalist China, leaders at the halfway mark of the 42-nation tournament.

Boros, 48, contributed to the U.S. total of 283, five under par, by fashioning a 70—most of it on the greens Friday. Teammate Lee Trevino, the U.S. Open champion, had a 71.

Nationalist China, represented by Lu Liang-huan and Hsieh Yung-yo also had a 283. Lu was the individual leader at 138. He shot his second straight 69 Friday.

Balding, who has been suffering from a sore shoulder, shot a par-72 and was tied with Trevino for third place among the individuals with 140. Eric Brown of Scotland was second with 70-69—139.

WAS TOPS THURSDAY

Balding fired an opening-day 68 for the best individual round in Thursday's competition.

But Knudson soared to a 77 Friday for a total of 151. He went one stroke over par 36 on the first nine. He came home in 40, taking a six on the par-four 14th hole.

Balding started the round with a 35 on the first nine but slipped to a one-over-par 37 on the second nine.

Knudson has been an individual winner in the past when these championships were known as the Canada Cup matches.

The United States, 4-to-1 favorites to win the tournament, and Nationalist China were five shots ahead of the field.

CANADIENS DEAL SMITH TO GET LARRY HILLMAN

MONTREAL (UPI)—The National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens Friday traded left-winger Brian Smith for Larry Hillman, a defenceman with the Minnesota North Stars.

General manager Sam Pollock said Hillman would be dressed for tonight's game against Oakland.

A native of Kirkland Lake, Ont., Hillman started his pro career in 1954 with Chicago Black Hawks. He also played for Detroit Red Wings, Boston Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs before being drafted last year by the North Stars.

Smith played 58 games with Los Angeles last year and scored 10 goals and nine assists for a total of 19 points.

Mt. Doug, Totems Ramble to Victory

Victoria Totems bounded into a first-place tie with Oak Bay for the Inter-High School Senior Boys' Basketball League lead after drubbing Esquimalt 61-36 Friday.

Mt. Douglas connected for a 54-26 victory over Claremont in the only other league game.

Dave Mulcahy paced Victoria with 18 points while Cec Ferguson counted 12 for losers.

Wayne Hatch's 17 points, plus 15 from Garfield Linford, set up the Mt. Doug win at Lansdowne Junior High.

ROUGHNECKS . . . . . STIR VIOLENCE

Grid Fans Not Wanted

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The time and place of a high school championship football game was kept secret Friday until five hours before the kickoff in order to avoid violence.

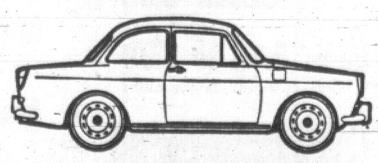

"We don't want a crowd," said Hardy Pearce, district of Columbia public schools athletic director. "We've had trouble in previous games this year and we're just trying to cut down on the chances of the roughnecks coming."

The two high schools, Cardozo and Coolidge, played a week ago and two fans from the winning Coolidge high school were shot and wounded as they left the game. The teams ended in a tie for the western division lead in the so-called Interhigh League, necessitating the championship playoff.

In 1962 several dozen persons were injured in a riot following a high school championship game attended by 55,000 at D. C. Stadium. Incidents of violence also led to cancelation five years ago of high school basketball doubleheaders at night. Single games are now played in the afternoon, with only students from participating schools allowed to attend.

VICTORIA, B.C., SATURDAY, NOV. 16, 1968—PAGE 15

Arthur Mayse

To any number of children, heaven is a saddle with a horse under it. Our daughter was one of these. When she was four years old, we yielded to her persuasions and drove to Victoria Riding Academy where it sprawls by Cedar Hill Crossroad.

A couple of girl riders were working their horses in the ring. We stood by the fence, Win and I dubious, Sue yearning.

Behind us, hoofs clopped lightly on rain-drenched earth.

A woman in riding kit sat straight-backed on a beast that looked big and dark as a thundercloud. We edged away, Sue forward.

The woman was Aileen Carley, who with her husband, Don was and still is in charge of the Academy. Her mount was Omar, the fine gelding she rode in those years.

Win said, "We promised our daughter riding lessons when she's old enough. When do you think she should start?"

Mrs. Carley looked down at Sue. She said, to our dismay, "Right now."

Minutes later, twittering with worry, we watched the two of them pace into a bridle trail. Mrs. Carley had Gamelin on the lead — wise old Gamelin who would tolerate anything but rain — and our darling was perched small as a peanut on his saddle.

★

There are a few people whom a community can never begin to repay for the good they have worked among its children. The Carleys, now in their mid-sixties and grimly worried, are two of that number.

Some of the boys and girls who turn up faithfully at the long Quonset barn are the children and grandchildren of men and women whom this couple taught a discipline of which riding is but a part.

Not many such schools will give young ones the freedom of their stables. But the Carleys do, and any weekend or after-school, you'll find teen-agers tending horses that have become their friends. They shrink from no job. Pushing a stable broom is to them a labor of love.

The horses change. Omar, Gamelin, big Timber Topper and little Tango are long gone.

These stalls are occupied now by Chickerin, Eastern Clipper, Grey Lady, The Flea, and others.

But you'll still find the Carleys in their tiny, tack-littered office when they aren't out teaching some American horseman the fine points of competition jumping, or introducing an eager hometown kid to what for them has been a way of life for 43 years.

★

When I looked in on them one morning this week, the coffee pot was still handy on the stove. A couple of guest-pups drowsed on the battered couch. Horse pictures crowded the walls — Dan Patch, the greatest of the trotters — a hunt streaming across an English meadow — Major Turley, whom Don trained, and who won races from the coast to Toronto.

A couple of hundred yards away, men and machines were widening a Cedar Hill Crossroad stretch that is to be flanked by a subdivision.

Three years ago, Oak Bay bought the 10 acres occupied by and surrounding Victoria Riding Academy from Victoria Hunt Club, in which the Carleys are major shareholders. The sum would pay for a 34-acre tract off Blenkinsop Road, also cover removal of buildings and preparation of the new site.

But, say the Carleys, too many shareholders cashed their shares, and the Victoria Training and Breeding Company which has replaced the now-defunct Victoria Hunt Company may come under-subscribed to its removal deadline. That's March 31, 1969.

"We started with the horses," says Academy manager Don "and we hope to finish up with them."

There are any number of Victorians who share that hope.

But hope alone isn't going to save an institution that has been a power for good in this city.

FLEXIBLE FINGERS, the joints still swollen, but usable again, mean happiness to Mrs. Dash. Nine knuckles were removed and replaced with plastic hinges to work the "miracle". The operation was first of its kind in Canada and has since been repeated for four others.

ANOTHER 'FIRST' FOR JUBILEE

Plastic Hinges Used To Replace Knuckles

By PETE LOUDON

A new surgical technique—a first for Canada—is being successfully used at Royal Jubilee Hospital to restore the use of hands crippled by rheumatoid arthritis.

The hospital confirmed today that the operation, which sees diseased joints replaced with hinged plastic devices, has now been undergone by five patients.

Believed by the hospital to be first patient in all of Canada to undergo the operation was Mrs. Helen Dash, 60, of 1206 Tattersall.

She has had nine artificial joints installed in her hands and "they all work wonderfully," she states.

The hospital and the surgeon have both requested his name be kept confidential. But it is known that at least two additional operations are slated for the near future.

Dr. A. C. Pickles, executive director at Jubilee, disclosed that the operations have been carried out under a North American "Clinical Research" program sponsored by the American College of Physicians and Surgeons.

"It was a great honor for Victoria to be asked to participate," said Dr. Pickles.

It is too early to assess the results of the operations, he said. (Results must be correlated with those of several other hospitals on the continent which are also involved in the program.)

★

However, the first patient, Mrs. Dash, was less reluctant to outline the "wonderful" results she has experienced.

"I wasn't even able to cut my meat . . . my hands were curled like claws. It's a Godsend. I can put on gloves I haven't been able to wear for three years."

"I was at the stage where I would stand and look at things and wonder how I was ever going to handle them."

Now she finds no difficulty in carrying out normal housekeeping chores.

She pointed out that rheumatoid arthritis is a crippler which affects young people as well as old and she believes the new procedure will bring untold happiness to many young people now being treated at the Canadian Arthritis and Rheumatism Society clinic here at 63 Gorge.

Mrs. Dash said she had been bothered by the disease for 12 years to varying degrees and her knuckles were absolutely decayed. She entered hospital last August to have a tendon cut to ease her pain then discovered this meant a permanent loss of movement.

She decided she didn't want it done. But at that point she was introduced to the surgeon who had just received the new prosthetic devices.

"They looked like the things you put on cupboard doors" to make them latch.

The first operation involved replacing four left-hand knuckles and the second replaced five knuckles in her right hand. Each operation was 3½ hours long, she said.

Mrs. Dash said while in hospital she was examined by a panel of doctors and was told by one, "It won't be long before all of us are doing it."

★

She said she signed papers and posed for numerous pictures for medical journals and medical educational purposes.

By a coincidence Mrs. Dash underwent her operation at the same time approximately as another surgeon conducted another bone operation which also was a first for Canada.

This was the replacement of a section of the spine of William S. Hamilton with a stainless steel vertebra, by Dr. F. A. Hamdi, a local neurosurgeon.

Mr. Hamilton, 65, went back to work today. Earlier it had been accepted that he would never walk again. A second patient subsequently also received the operation.

Dr. Hamdi, who was named in an eastern medical publication, has since been a centre of attention throughout the continent for his work.

The successful use of rubberized plastic joints (trade name for the material is Silastic) was reported earlier in New Jersey by Dr. Alfred B. Swanson, who said the implants are well tolerated by the tissues.

He said the operations would be continued in 40 selected hospitals around the world before being generally used. He did not expect the procedure to work well on large weight-bearing joints such as knees.

City Contract Disqualifies One Candidate

By JIM HUME

Candidates for aldermanic seats on Victoria city council were reduced from five to four Friday—at least temporarily.

Joseph Richards, a stockman with the provincial government, said he was informed Friday that a business contract with the city disqualified him from being elected to office in December.

"I'm not blaming anyone," he said. "The Municipal Act says that anyone with a business contract with the municipality is disqualified from holding office.

"I bought some property from the city some time ago paying half the cost down and the balance on payments. As I still owe some money on the transaction I'm barred from holding office until the property is fully paid for."

STILL HAS HOPE

Mr. Richards said he hadn't given up hope of seeking a council seat on Dec. 7.

There's a good chance that I can raise the money sometime next week to get the matter cleared away," he said. "If I can I'll still be running. But in the meantime I just have to wait.

"It's just a technical matter and I think I can solve it."

Mr. Richards' temporary withdrawal from the race leaves four contestants for the four available seats.

They are Harold Olafson, Ove Witt and incumbents Ald. Cecil Parrott and Ald. Percy Frampton.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay and Ald. Lloyd Clarkson will not seek re-election.

WILD CHASE ENDS UP IN GULLY

Magistrate J. A. Byers today refused to grant bail to Leonard B. Hanstke, 605 Wilson, who drove over 90 miles an hour Friday night trying to elude police.

He pleaded guilty to criminal negligence and was remanded until Monday for sentence.

Hanstke was chased north on Douglas and McKenzie Avenue.

COULDN'T GAIN

"I was unable to gain on him on Douglas," said Sgt. Fred Brodersen who clocked himself at 80 miles an hour. "When he turned on to McKenzie another police car took up the chase. He was travelling in excess of 90 miles an hour."

Motorists pulled over to the curb when they saw Hanstke's car hurtling north on Douglas, he told the court.

SKIDDED

At McKenzie and Glanford the car skidded when Hanstke applied his brakes, crashed through a wooden fence, skidded backwards down a slope and fell into a deep gulley. It came to rest on the bed of a creek.

Hanstke's pregnant wife was in the car, but the couple suffered no injuries, the police officer said.

Sgt. Brodersen said the driver told him he had a disagreement with his wife. He had been drinking but was not impaired.

Farmer Low Bidder For Uvic College

Farmer Construction Ltd. of Victoria was low bidder Friday on a contract for a new residence college for the University of Victoria.

The bid — for $1,719,500 — will be formally considered by the university's board of governors next week. It is expected the Farmer tender will be accepted.

'Forget Outside Glitter; Good Yule Dinner Better'

Glittering lights contribute less to the Christmas spirit than a good Christmas dinner.

That's the philosophy of at least two Victoria aldermen who want to take a closer look at Christmas welfare bonus payments before increasing a city grant for street decorations.

"It seems to me that if doesn't matter how much the city glitters on the outside at Christmas if the people in some of the houses are cold and hungry," said Ald. Ian Stewart.

He was commenting on a proposal made by Ald. Robert Baird that the city increase a $1,500 grant for Christmas decorations to $2,000.

The Chamber of Commerce has stated that it will not decorate downtown Victoria this year because of lack of funds and lack of support from downtown merchants.

ALD. STEWART

ANNUAL GRANT

The city already makes an annual grant of $2,500 to the chamber plus $51,000 to the Visitor's Bureau and $7,150 to the Vancouver Island Publicity Bureau.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay said he couldn't see the thinking behind the proposal that the city increase its Christmas decoration grant if downtown merchants were already apathetic.

"If the merchants won't show the initiative, I don't think the city should be providing the initial drive," he said. "And anyway, I don't think the spirit of Christmas lies so much in Christmas lights.

"There are so many places to spend our money to better advantage — and to a better promotion of the true spirit of the season."

REVIEW BONUSES

At Thursday's regular meeting of city council Ald. Ramsay called for a review of Christmas bonuses paid to welfare families.

The bonus at present is $4 for a single person on welfare and $10 for a family on welfare. He described the $10 per family a "ridiculous pittance" and asked for the cost to the city of providing a bonus based on a $4 a head cost.

Both aldermen said they were not against Christmas lights and decorations but insisted that they be placed in a proper order of priority.

"It doesn't make sense to sprinkle tinsel and pretty lights throughout the city if many of our citizens are going hungry," said Ald. Stewart. "We have to keep things in proportion. If we have any extra money at all I'd rather see it go to the needy than into Christmas lights."

'GOOD TO GET UNDER WAY AGAIN'

Ship to Make Third Try Saturday

Re-loading of the storm-hit Continental Shipper will begin Tuesday following repairs to railings, funnels and valves.

The Shipper was damaged Nov. 5 in a raging storm that tore loose tons of rough lumber on her deck.

The remainder of the cargo was offloaded Friday and workmen are repairing the damaged structures.

A shipping agency spokesman said today the repairs, being done by McKay-Cormack Ltd., are expected to be completed Monday.

About 1,000 feet of railing was damaged and a considerable amount of paint scraped off the ships sides by swinging chains.

Officials hope the ship will sail Saturday for Japan, her third try.

The Shipper's master, Capt. Kurt Koester, said: "It will be good to get under way again.

"The crew find Victoria a cold place and want to get back to where they will feel more at home."

He added Victoria longshoremen are the fastest workers on the Pacific Coast.

"There is every possibility we will be under way again by Saturday," he said.

The accident was the second to hit the Shipper on her maiden voyage.

Late in September, as she headed out to sea, heavy waves shifted a large section of her deck cargo, bending a length of railing and creating a two-degree list to port.

She returned to have the lumber unloaded and restowed.

While in port a large section of her starboard load suddenly gave way and plunged off into the harbor.

Several workmen standing on the section narrowly escaped serious injury.

Then, two days out to sea on her second attempt to reach Japan, the third accident occurred.

New Reading Techniques Just a Fad, Says Expert

Reading programs used in classrooms all have limitations and failings, a noted educational psychologist told 250 Vancouver Island school teachers here today.

Dr. Stan Thalberg, director of the regional reading centre of Washington state, was speaking at a meeting of the Island branch of the International Reading Association, at the University of Victoria.

He told the group most reading programs cause a rigid classroom atmosphere that forces the child to adapt, rather than following his strengths and abilities.

'NOT BEST WAY'

Controlled studies of instruction techniques have shown no proof that one is any better than another, and have indicated that such programs used exclusively are not the best way to teach children to read, he said.

Using techniques such as phonics, symbolic alphabets or "motor-sensory" action in learning does not improve reading ability, he said. Many of them are merely fads which are dropped as soon as another technique is thought up.

The best way to teach children is to consider their individual strengths and abilities and use a variety of methods as aids to instruction.

More "love" and more "relevance" are needed in the classroom, Dr. Thalberg said. A child should not be forced to follow a program that does not consider his interests.

"Let's make learning a pleasant experience," he said. "Let's make it a relevant experience for the future."

Learning should be something that is loved by children —not something "that is forced on them."

They are now told to read because it is good for them and forced to learn through programs set up in schools. They should be encouraged to read for pleasure and enjoyment and will learn as a consequence of their reading, Dr. Thalberg said.

"How much of what you were taught in your primary grades do you remember now?" he asked the teachers, and said they forgot because they did not want to learn it in the first place.

Couple Face Theft Charge; Bail at $350

Charged with theft of four cases of home-made beer, Gordon Lawrence Charles and Josephine Charles, No. 7 Cooper Road, were remanded in magistrate's court today until Monday for plea.

Gordon Charles also faces a charge of assaulting Hazel Ward, 203 Henry Street, owner of the beer.

Bail was set at $350 for the couple.

Q. What is the full extension of a submarine's periscope?—K.L.

A. There is no set length since designs and sizes of submarines vary. A sample length, however, are the two scopes aboard HMCS Grilse, the Pacific Maritime Command's submarine. The radar scope when fully extended measures 37 feet 2¼ inches. The attack scope is 41 feet, 6½ inches.

Many Meanings Taken From That Word 'Retarded'

By W. RALPH THOMAS

The words "retarded child" mean everything but what they say.

Ask for a definition and you'll probably hear a dozen descriptions of what a retarded child is not.

●

Retarded children are slow children. They don't learn as quickly as normal children and they'll likely go through life being a little behind everyone else.

Except for their slowness and the resulting developmental hang-ups, they are not different.

Take four-year-old Janice for example.

She's the darling of the Elford Street Centre for the retarded. She's vivacious and outgoing, bright - eyed and lovable.

After spending a few moments watching her, no one would believe she is a little slower than other four year olds. Nothing about her fits common conceptions — or misconceptions — of retarded children.

In two more years Janice will leave the day care program at the Elford Street centre to attend a special school.

●

If, by the time she is 18, she cannot yet make it as an independent citizen, she will likely return to the centre and work in the sheltered workshop there for the rest of her life.

Janice is just one of the 27 children in the day care centre operated by the Greater Victoria Association for the retarded who will need care throughout their lives.

They will never quite be able to make it as independent members of society and will always need guidance, supervision and assistance.

●

But these children will become productive people, working at one of the many jobs available in the centre's sheltered workshop, and their needs will be taken care of by people who understand.

This year the United Appeal will pay $22,097 of the centre's estimated $30,000 budget.

Every dollar you contribute to the Appeal's $655,000 objective will help the 27 children and the 42 young adults at the Elford Street centre who can't quite make it on their own.

Sales at Miss Frith's are events . . .

Miss Frith's started a fall clearance sale on Friday . . . and just in case you're thinking this is "just one of those sales" stores put on periodically to lure people in . . . we want to tell you something about Miss Frith's sales: No matter how carefully merchandise is selected . . . (and all Miss Frith's merchandise is personally selected by Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Nash) . . . there are always some things which don't sell too well for one reason or another . . . and so they must be reduced to make room for constantly arriving new merchandise . . . Hence, they have their price tags slashed with ruthless abandon! . . . Miss Frith's never buy for specials . . . everything on sale is from regular merchandise . . . and pretty fresh merchandise, at that! . . . Main features in this present sale are better hats, Christian Dior, Mr. Charles, Andre, etc. . . . in velvets, velours, moufflon, feathers, beaver . . . going for one-third less than their regular prices . . . And fall and winter coats in exotic imported wool fabrics . . . waffle weaves, diagonals . . . some tweeds . . . Many of these coats are luxuriously fur trimmed . . . with mink, fox, racoon, muskrat or beaver . . . and if you've been looking at Miss Frith's coats recently, you'll know without us telling you how very smart and up-to-the-minute in style they are . . . One-third off the regular price of these, too . . . A visit to Miss Frith's will be well worth your while this coming week . . . Lots of parking, including their own lot off Fisgard St. . . . Miss Frith Millinery & Fashions, 1617 Douglas St., 383-7181.

If you're going job hunting, make sure you wear a hat . . . Your chances of success will be increased immeasurably.

Lovely books for "Young Canada" . . .

This being Young Canada's Book Week, we thought it timely to do a bit of browsing among the new children's books at the Book Nook . . . with a view to making selections for young nephews' and nieces' Christmas gifts . . . We suggest you do likewise . . . and if you can tear yourself away from these perfectly delightful children's books, you're a stronger character than we are! . . . For the 3-to-6 year olds there's a charming 3-dimensional book . . . a pop-up entitled "The Night Before Christmas" . . . Clement C. Moore's immortal "A Visit from St. Nicholas" . . . The bright colored illustrations and intriguing pop-up pictures will enchant any small child . . . "Patrick", written and illustrated by Quentin Blake, with marvellous pictures, is slanted to the same age group . . . A child of any age will adore "The Three Sparrows" . . . poems by Christiam Mogenstern, a witty successor to Lewis Carroll . . . Charming illustrations . . . For 5 to 7, there's "The Adventure of Sultan" . . . the madcap capers and adventures of a big, lollopy, loveable Afgan hound, with exciting color plates . . . and "King of the Castle", by Carol Vaughan, is a really good story about a girl who has a special gift for handling horses and humans . . . suitable for 8 to 11's . . . New Victoria author Jean MacKenzie has written "Storm Island" . . . whose locale is B.C. Great for the 11 to 13 group . . . (autographed copies available) . . . And the 8 to 12's . . . The hostess with the mostest . . .

We saw some really beautiful hostess suits at the Madam and Eve Shop this week . . . and it struck us that Madam . . . as much, or even more than her younger counterpart Eve . . . would find one of these elegant pant suits just the thing for at home entertaining during the coming festive season . . . Most of the suits have wide-legged pants, so they actually look more like skirts when worn . . . Tunic tops are long and tailored . . . and in the case of several of the styles, could be worn by themselves without the pants (serving a double purpose, so to speak) . . . One suit has wide off-white crepe pants and a tailored jumper top of embossed gold and white brocade . . . A tasselled gold cord cinches in the waist . . . Size 11 . . . and a couple of the same in silver with black pants are sizes 9 and 13 . . . Another outfit has sleeveless tunic (dress length) and crepe pants . . . Nehru type jacket with long flared sleeves and matching bell bottom pants comprise another hostess suit in shimmering silver or black lame . . . Sizes 5, 9 and 13 . . . Black lame is also used for another sleeveless tunic with V neck, buttoned down the front, and matching pants . . . size 11 . . . Another delightful black and gold brocade has fairly narrow pants flaring at the bottom, to match the wrist flare of the long-sleeved tunic . . . Ontario Cousin Likes Birds Best

By PENNY SAVER

This summer my younger son visited his cousin Jason who lives quite a bit off the beaten track in Ontario. Jason and my son are almost exactly the same age and quickly became firm friends, as shown by the steady stream of letters they have exchanged since my son returned to Victoria. Now, almost half a year later, we are concerned with buying Christmas gifts for Jason and all the rest of our relatives in the eastern provinces. When the children puzzled over what to buy Jason, I suggested that they ask their brother since he knows Jason's tastes better than any of us. Finally I took my own advice and asked what Jason would like best of all from his aunt and uncle.

"Well, the other kids and I are trying to get enough money together to buy him a book of pictures of birds," my son replied. "I've ordered it even though I don't have the $17.50 to pay for it yet." "Goodness, what book is it?" "The new Fenwick Lansdowne book," my son replied. "Jason loves birds and I can't think of anything he could want more than that book." Naturally I contributed to the fund on behalf of my husband and myself. This new Lansdowne book is called "Birds of the Eastern Forest" and it includes 52 beautiful full-page color plates of Mr. Lansdowne's paintings; a full page descriptive text of each bird by John A. Livington, a noted ornithologist and pencil sketches that show some of the artist's steps toward the final accurate portrayal of the birds. The birds are those that inhabit the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence River area — right where Jason lives. I was also pleased to learn that my son got a bargain by buying this book when he did. The price of these books will be $17.50 until Christmas after which it is expected to rise.

Red China Observed

What is China and why? To me it is a vague association of second-hand information: the I Ching, Confucius, Ming vases. It is also over-population, the great leap forward, the cultural revolution, the Red Guard and, of course, Mao in airbrushed photographs and bright, unreal colors, always with a mole on his chin. But what is China? I have bought myself a book that may give me the answers I seek. The book is called "Two Innocents in Red China." The two innocents, as almost everyone knows by now, are Jacques Herbert and a somewhat famous fellow called Pierre Elliot Trudeau. It has been translated into English by I. M. Owen, and those who recommended it to me all say that the translation is excellent. The book, which was written about a journey taken in 1960, gives a different slant on what is happening in China than most articles we see here in North America. A soft-cover edition costs $2.50 while the hard-cover book is $5.50.

A group of university professors, most of whom are from the University of British Columbia, have put their minds to a question a lot of adults and young people are asking today: Why do students protest? The result is a book, "Student Protest", compiled by G. F. McGuigan. This soft-cover book sells for $2.50 and is well worth it for anyone who would rather consider the issues before either supporting or condemning the protestors.

Please call 382-3131 if you would like to know where to shop for these books.

YALE COLLEGE

Ivy-League Cloisters Destined for Assault

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Yale College has approved a proposal to admit women beginning September, 1969.

Student objections to housing arrangements proposed for women, however, may postpone implementation of the plan.

The proposal was given final and overwhelming approval this week by some 200 faculty members of the college. Only one vote was cast against the proposal, made by university president Kingman Brewster Jr.

The Yale Corp., the university's governing board of trustees, approved the plan Saturday.

GIRLS SEGREGATED

The proposal calls for 500 young women to be admitted next fall, half as freshmen and half as upperclass transfer students. The freshmen girls would be housed together in one of Yale's 12 residential colleges. The other 250 girls would live off campus.

At a meeting Thursday night students said the plan would mean "segregation" of the sexes. They demanded alternatives that would mix the women into the university community on a more "equitable" basis.

Boutique Gifts Can Be Made Now

By EUNICE FARMER

It's not too early to start thinking about Christmas gifts especially if you are one who enjoys sewing for those you wish to remember during the holidays. I have collected some boutique gifts you can make quickly and many of these items can be made from sewing scraps.

My new booklet "Boutique Gifts" has complete directions for making a variety of gifts. Included in my booklet are directions on how to make smoke rings, a cover-up poncho, wall hangings, and a glamorous caftan. These are just a few of the gifts to make. If you would like a copy, send 25 cents and a long stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request to Eunice Farmer in care of this newspaper.

TAILOR TRIX WINNER

Mrs. Charles E. Bailey, Altoona, Iowa, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her following suggestion.

"I am rather new in the craft of sewing and am experimenting with new kinds of fabrics all of the time. My latest venture was the new leather-like material. After several hours of trying to get a correct stitch, my husband got into the dilemma and suggested that I place a piece of waxed paper between the material and the pressure foot. It works beautifully. The stitches are even because the material is not sliding under the pressure foot.

"Just cut several strips of the regular kitchen waxed paper 2 inches wide and place them under your material with the edges even; works great!"

Series on Teen-Agers' Problems Raises Varied Reactions in City

Are the women's pages of a daily newspaper the place for a frank discussion of the boy-girl relationship, changing attitudes toward sex, and sex itself?

Definitely not, say the the dozen mothers who have telephoned and written condemning the series of articles, "Guidelines for the Teen-Age Girl" by psychotherapist Dr. Tom McGinnis, which appeared in the Times during the past two weeks.

Emphatically yes, say a psychiatrist, a teacher, a social worker and a psychologist. A group of teen-agers agreed.

"Do you feel the information presented in the series of articles might be harmful?", a local teacher was asked.

"I don't think it could be harmful at all. I believe it is an excellent thing, and if there were any way of getting copies of the whole series printed, I could use 100 of them for my grade seven class.

"I teach a course called guidance in which questions are written out and presented to me anonymously. The points covered in the series are exactly what these children are asking about.

"They are, in fact, asking questions which I daren't answer because I'd have their parents down my neck.

FEW READ PAPER

"My only question would be, how many of these children are reading it? A few years ago I attended a conference at which we discussed the newspaper as a teaching tool, and I found that very few of the young children read the paper. I hope they have read these articles.

"As a teacher, and as a parent of three children, including a 13-year-old daughter, I'm all for it. The children are not too young. In fact, when I first taught a course in family life 20 years ago to grade eight boys, the response was overwhelming, except that it was felt the information should have been presented earlier.

A local psychiatrist agreed:

"I should think the difficulty might be mostly in parental attitudes, which are still emotionally loaded. The old taboos spring partly from fear of illegal pregnancy and the resulting social disorganization; and partly from the fear of venereal disease.

"In both cases, there is far less reason to be fearful. But the older generation will have difficulty accepting the fact that their children can now make an intellectual choice. There will still be a wide range of reactions to sex, from guilt and terror, to 'what is all the fuss about?', to 'this is the greatest'.

"But, as the public becomes less puritanical, as the generations change and ignore emotional hand-me-down attitudes, open discussion of sex will make far less of an impression.

"In short, I am in favor of frank discussion in the newspaper or anywhere else, as long as it is an honest attempt to deal with the subject, and not just an excuse for sensationalism."

A psychologist who has done pre-marital counselling:

"I feel McGinnis did a fine job. He was frank, but necessarily and helpfully so. I don't think he has said anything out of line. His final article ended on a very strong note.

"I have a feeling that the mothers who suggest putting off a frank discussion of sex are not only showing too little faith in their daughters, but are also fostering views that are 50 years out of date.

FLEETING INTEREST

"My observation is that if children are too young, they read this sort of thing with fleeting interest only. They pay more attention when it becomes important to them. Parents can leave the talk with Junior until it's too late."

A doctor who sees a great deal of children felt that the articles were "more detailed than is appropriate for a newspaper."

She pointed out that there is still some reticence in discussing anything so intimate and personal.

"A newspaper can't choose who is to read it and who isn't. You can't tell if it will stimulate someone to go off and experiment, or what the reaction will be."

A social worker felt that as long as the articles were not erotically based they wouldn't do any farm.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "the more knowledge you get the better, and, by knowledge, I mean not just the biological consequences but more insight into relationships, the give and take between people. My impression of the few articles I have read is that they wouldn't appeal to young people, especially not the ones who should be reached, but then I don't think I could do any better.

"Parents are hung up about the matter of the changing attitudes. I, myself, am, but I don't think you can condemn a more open approach to the matter ... provided it is not erotically focussed and does not make sexual intercourse the be-all and end-all."

HEALTHY APPROACH

One mother read a few of the articles, then suggested that her 13-year-old daughter might be interested. The daughter's reaction:

"I can't be bothered to read it. It was all in those books."

This mother disagreed with those who found the series offensive. "I think it's a far healthier approach than in our day when it wasn't even ladylike to mention pregnancy."

Typical of those mothers who have protested the running of the series is Mrs. T. who phoned on Wednesday to register her protest. Mother of six, four of whom are teen-agers, she described the articles as "way out of line."

Mrs. T. felt that the reports encouraged permissiveness and said they were "downright obscene" in some parts. She also labelled some of the material in Dear Abby's columns in the same category.

The mother said that she had to hide the paper so that the teen-agers couldn't read it while the series was being run.

TEENS' COMMENTS

Eight of the many teen-agers interviewed this week, unlike those of Mrs. T., say that they never read a newspaper. Others asked that their names not be given because they didn't want their parents to know they'd been interested, or were shy of being kidded by their friends.

One 13-year-old girl said, "I wouldn't let my mother know that I thought of these things. She still feels that I'm hardly out of the doll set yet. But, my friends and I discuss sex at school. It's only natural."

Another said that when the series started she was curious. "But it wasn't as exciting as I though it would be. The doctor just repeated what Mom said, 'Be careful, you've got a lot to lose.'"

One teen-ager, when told that some mothers had been against running the series, retorted, "I don't see why. Parents never tell you anything these days. You have to learn somewhere."

At least half of those teen-agers asked admitted that sex education was a subject never discussed between them and their parents.

One of these said that she'd like to be able to talk frankly with her mother but felt she'd embarass her "if I asked her the things that were on my mind."

Another felt that adult values were unbalanced. "They don't mind telling dirty stories at parties, even when they know you're there. Yet, you're supposed to be stupid and not wonder what they mean."

A 15-year-old said she'd wished she'd read articles like the Times' series before now. "All I ever learned about boys and dating was from my friends at the beach or at school. I think it's kind of silly to make such a fuss. They (parents) expect us to know about politics and other stuff. Yet we're supposed to be babies when it comes to the most important things."

Two other teen-agers felt that some parents were responsible for the number of illegitimate children being born to teen-agers.

"It's their fault. Lots of parents don't have time for their kids. They're too busy making money or going to parties. So, what happens? Girls get lonely, and if a boy offers them happiness, why not? If they go too far, it's usually because they're looking for something."

Not one of the teen-agers interviewed felt the articles were out of line ... one reported that she'd read each one "but they were awful long."

The consensus of opinion could well be summarized in a 16-year-old's statement. "Adults admit that the world is changing and moving faster. Why can't they admit that we are too?"

FASHIONS FROM THE PHILIPPINES

These five young women will be among those modelling Philippine fashions as a feature of the Aloha Bazaar, to be held in the auditorium and lounge of the nurses' residence by the Ladies' Auxiliary to St. Joseph's Hospital. Left to right, the models are Susan Arroyo, Eliza Castillo, Mildred Pojol, Mercedes Velasco and Sheila Munieza. The bazaar will be held Wednesday from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. A turkey lunch will be served at 11:30 and tea will be available at 2 p.m. Stalls will feature Christmas items, home baking, Lucky Seven, aprons, a post office, novelties and other attractions. Mrs. Norman Ware is convener, assisted by Mrs. Arthur Cownden. The affair will be officially opened by the consul-general of the Philippines.

Paul Bunyan Gets Healthy Competition From Modern Feminine Counterparts

Paul Bunyan's domain is being invaded by women.

For the first time in the history of the British Columbia Forest Service, crews of women are being employed to plant tree seedlings.

David Wallinger, of the reforestation division, reports that last spring crews of women planted approximately 145,000 two-year-old spruce seedlings over 220 acres in the Prince Rupert Forest District.

At the present time another group of "Pauline Bunyans" from Houston is busy planting hundreds of seedlings in the McBride Lake area, approximately 40 miles west of Houston.

The women range in age from 19 to 43, and are paid the same rates as men, Mr. Wallinger said. "And they ask for no special consideration on the job."

In past years, the reforestation officer said, seasonal planting labor had been recruited from logging crews laid off during spring break-up periods, and from transient sources. But the turn-over rate among such workers developed into "an alarming state."

Last spring Forest Ranger Carl Simmons, attached to the station at Telkwa, near Smithers, made some inquiries; learned that a number of women in the area were interested in such work; and soon organized two crews. The ladies were given several days of special training.

"The women were quick to learn," Mr. Wallinger continued, "and within a very short time were planting almost as many seedlings per day as any man.

"And all reports indicate the quality of planting was excellent."

Forest Service officials are delighted with the new development. If the program continues to prove successful, and there's every indication it will, a greater degree of stability will be provided the planting program in many areas of the forest district.

For a number of years women have been employed in seedling nurseries throughout the province, but never as planting crews in the field.

Whether or not women will be employed as reforestation seedling planters in other parts of the province, Mr. Wallinger explained, depends largely on a variety of circumstances and general labor market conditions.

COOKING CAN BE FUN

Eggplant Is Easily Cooked This Way

QUESTION: You once gave us a recipe in your column (which I love) for breaded eggplant. It was parboiled a little before crumbing and good. But my mother never precooked hers. She crumbed it raw and fried it. It was just a little bit leathery. Could you tell me how to do it her way? or are you that psychic?—Olive T.

Moore

ANSWER: As a matter of fact I am. You have to be in this job—but not for your request.

CRUMBED EGGPLANT
No. 2 (serves 4)

One medium eggplant; 1 beaten egg; ¼ cup flour; ¼ teaspoon salt; about 1 cup soft fine breadcrumbs; about 2½ tablespoons melted butter (or olive oil if you like the Greek way).

Wash eggplant and cut it into ½" slices and pare them. Add the salt to the flour and immediately coat each slice in it. Dip in egg, coating both sides, then in the crumbs which should be spread out on large plate. Turn over to coat both sides and edges.

Let dry (if time permits) for 10 or 15 minutes.

In large shallow frying pan heat butter or oil until bubbly. Add eggplant slices in one layer. Reduce heat. Cover.

Cook about five minutes or until bottom is golden. Turn over and cook uncovered over medium-low heat until tender enough for your liking and golden on bottom.

QUESTION: I have a frozen cooked duck carcass with some meat left on it. Will you please tell me how to make duck soup.—Iris G.

ANSWER: I'd love to and will.

HOMEMADE DUCK SOUP

In soup kettle cover duck carcass with cold water—about six cups—and simmer covered until meat will fall from bones. Strain through large seive or colander catching liquid in large pan. Pick all meat from bones. Discard bones. Chop meat and return to broth. Add two chicken oxo cubes, two large tomatoes, peeled and chopped, three tablespoons raw rice, ½ cup macaroni alphabets or elbows or broken spaghetti or noodles, one large potato washed and pared and chopped into cubes, one tablespoon chopped onion (or bottled flakes), one teaspoon salt, two teaspoons sugar.

Simmer until rice is tender. It's duck soup.

DEAR ABBY . . .

Matron of Honor Lady in Waiting

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Three months ago, I was the maid of honor at my best friend's wedding. Shortly afterwards she announced she was expecting. (In fact she hurried the wedding a little because of her condition.)

Well, now I am getting married and I promised this friend that she could be my matron of honor. But Abby, she's in her ninth month! How will that look? She'll be terribly hurt if I don't ask her as we've been best friends since first grade and I'd rather die than hurt her feelings. Should I ask her and hope she refuses? What if she accepts? Please help me as I am running out of time.

DESPERATE.

DEAR DESPERATE: If you don't want her because of her obvious condition, don't ask her. (She might accept.) But if you'd rather "die" than hurt her feelings, how about postponing your wedding until after she delivers? (I assume you're not in the same kind of rush?)

DEAR ABBY: Years ago, when my widowed mother came to live with me and my husband, she made our lives so miserable that I determined that I would never bring such misery to my children if I ever had to live with them. One day I sat down and wrote myself a letter. In it were some pertinent rules, and on the outside of the envelope I wrote, "To be opened on the day I go to live with my daughter, heaven forbid." I tucked it away in an old book and forgot about it. I've been widowed and self-sufficient for six years, but now I was recently forced to give up my job and go to live with my oldest daughter. I've opened that letter and I think your older readers might benefit from it, as I intend to. Here are the rules:

1. Give what you can toward your keep. Any budget will stretch just so far.
2. Keep yourself clean and neat.
3. Remember, it is their home. Be especially considerate of him. He allowed her to bring you here.
4. Give them privacy at every opportunity.
5. If they want to go away on a vacation, but are hesitant because of you, offer to visit another relative or friend so they will be free to go.
6. Don't offer any advice or express any opinions unless asked.

An Idea for Christmas

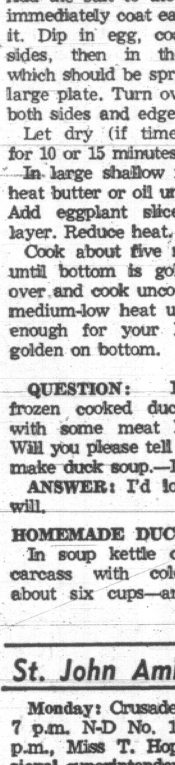

Royal Worcester Egg Coddlers

Remember egg-shell? Hailed in its time as perfect package. Air-tight. Water-tight. Classic design. Unsuitable for boiling eggs in. Couldn't season. Couldn't peek, check progress. Enter Royal Worcester of England, Egg Coddlers. Theory simple. Break egg in cup. Add salt. Pepper. Butter. Whatever. Screw on cap. Plunge in boiling water. Open cap, see what's what. Underdone? Replace, cook more. Done? Eat from cup. Convenient. Lovely.

UFO Inquiries Said Hushed Up

WINNIPEG (CP) — Stephen Michalak has suggested that government fears of causing "national panic" are behind refusals to release official findings on his 1967 claim of seeing and touching an Unidentified Flying Object.

In an illustrated, 40-page pamphlet he had published after what he called his "ordeal," Mr. Michalak said he believed results of the inquiries would "never be made public."

"As for the government, it is possible that they are afraid that they will cause national panic if they disclose all they know, but it seems to me that they should say something definite," he wrote.

Barry Mather, NDP MP for Surrey, asked Wednesday in the Commons for the tabling of reports on the incident by RCMP, air force, welfare department, geological survey and national research council.

GAVE NO REASONS

Donald S. Macdonald, government House leader, refused the request but gave no reasons for doing so. There was a similar refusal in November, 1967.

In his pamphlet, the 52-year-old Mr. Michalak gives an account of what members of various teams told him when they accompanied him to where he said a strange craft landed May 20, 1967, in the Falcon Lake area 80 miles east of Winnipeg.

Mr. Michalak said Stewart Hunt of the federal health and welfare department took samples from the landing area and reported later there was radiation, but not enough to be harmful.

Mr. Michalak said during the months of investigation he was able to piece together what members of various official teams said had caused his burns and ill health following the incident.

"One official said my shirt and body was burned by ultrasonic waves, while another feels that it was a thermal reaction caused by a blast of hot air under pressure," he says in his pamphlet.

"Radiologists have said that radiation found at the scene was a product of nuclear fission, like that emitted from an atomic reactor."

FLASHING LIGHTS

Mr. Michalak, an amateur prospector, said it was shortly after noon while he was working a bush area near the resort centre that he spotted two cigar-shaped objects above. One hovered, the other landed, the airborne object flying away a few seconds later.

After he overcame his initial fear, he said, he thought he heard sounds similar to someone speaking English and concluded the craft was a United States vehicle. He said he called out but received no reply.

Mr. Michalak says he touched the craft, which he describes as about 40 feet in diameter, and burned his glove, stuck his head inside a hatch and saw a profusion of flashing lights.

The hatch closed and he was burned as the craft took off.

Investigators later found a circular area, he said, where the craft landed. Vegetation in the immediate vicinity had died. His burned shirt and glove also were found.

Mr. Michalak was treated at hospital for burns to his chest, severe head pains, loss of weight and vomiting. He was sent by his doctor to the atomic research establishment at Pinawa, Man., for tests on his burns. The findings were not made known.

Mr. Michalak says he had no interest in such tales prior to his experience and had dismissed similar stories as fiction.

MISS WORLD winner, 18-year-old Penelope Plummer, Miss Australia, fainted Thursday in London when the title was announced. After being revived, the 35-24-35 blonde phoned her mother in Sydney and said: "I've got a cold. My nose is running, but I still did it." Nancy Wilson, 19, Miss Dominion of Canada, who didn't reach the finals, was named Miss North America. (AP Wirephoto.)

QC Sound To Remain Canadian

OTTAWA (CP) — Fisheries Minister Jack Davis told the Commons fisheries committee Friday that as long as he is minister, Canada will not publish a map giving up Queen Charlotte Sound as Canadian territorial waters.

Canada is attempting to chart the waters off British Columbia with a 12-mile international limit measured from baselines drawn from headland to headland.

Such a line drawn from the northern tip of Vancouver Island to the southern tip of Queen Charlotte Island would measure approximately 100 miles — a distance which the minister has said would probably encounter international opposition.

Defence Body Urged

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — The North Atlantic Assembly Friday proposed the creation of a "defence agency" composed of European members of the 15-nation North Atlantic Treaty Organization to co-ordinate its conventional arms development.

A resolution passed by the 200-member assembly linking NATO parliamentarians calls for a NATO heads-of-government conference by all interested countries to set up the agency.

The call was made as NATO foreign ministers continued talks in Brussels on the situation following the Soviet-led invasion of Czechoslovakia, Aug. 20.

Recover Bodies Of B.C. Couple

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont. (CP)—Provincial police Friday identified two bodies washed up on the Lake Superior shore as Dr. and Mrs. Paul Plummer of Prince George.

The couple and their two children were reported missing Monday while flying a light aircraft from the Lakehead to Sault Ste. Marie. The children —Laurie, 3, and Mark, 4—have not been found.

The bodies were found—with wreckage from the aircraft near Batchawana Bay, a summer resort area 35 miles north of here.

Police search parties are looking for the children and search boats are combing the shoreline. An impending snow storm grounded armed forces search and rescue aircraft.

Police Sgt. Peter MacIntyre said it is still possible the children would be found, but held out little hope for their survival.

Poverty Brings More Tension

BY JEAN WHITE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The poor may suffer more from nervous tensions than the affluent who complain about the pressures of demanding jobs and the pace of high living.

This is one finding in a nation-wide survey of health concerns and needs released Thursday by the Blue Cross Association.

Nearly half—49 per cent—of the poor interviewed said they suffer nervous tension in lives plagued by worries over money, insecurity, and health problems. In comparison, one-third of the affluent (with incomes over 10,000 dollars and some college education) reported unusual nervous tension.

The survey, conducted for Blue Cross by Louis Harris and Associates, shows sharp differences in health concerns and outlook of poor people compared with the public in general.

HEALTH CARE

The poor were found to have three times as much serious illness as the population as a whole. What both the bottom and top-income groups did share was a concern over how they would pay the rising cost of health care.

One finding was that poor whites in Appalachia have a gloomier outlook about their health than Negro ghetto dwellers. One explanation given is that poor whites feel more alienated from the mainstream of American society than Negroes, by-passed in a time of national concern over the problems of blacks.

In releasing the study, Walter J. McNerney, president of Blue Cross, stressed that good health is fundamental to all other needs of the poor, including jobs.

"Clearly, it makes no sense to train people and find jobs for them, if they are unable to accept employment because of physical disability or poor health," he said.

Other findings of the survey:

● One in four Americans feels too exhausted to get up in the morning in a bad case of the morning "blahs." For the poor, often undernourished and rundown, the figure is two in five.

● In one of every ten homes, someone has an uncared-for medical problem, most likely tooth decay, failing eyesight or poor hearing. Among ghetto blacks and Mexican-Americans, the figure more than doubles 24 per cent. For poor whites, it triples.

● Amid worries over disease and disability, Americans also are feeling pain in the pocketbook over health costs. Three of every four American families are concerned over the cost of health care.

The Blue Cross Association pointed to estimates from the health, education, and welfare department that some form of public-private partnership can supply adequate health and dental care at the annual cost of $200 per capita.

The private, non-profit association has been talking about participating in some of the "model cities" programs with the federal government.

Court Frees Jew-Baiting Protestor

ROME (AP) — A Roman Catholic lawyer who called a priest a fool for preaching that persecution of Jews was desired by God was cleared by a court here Thursday of any wrongdoing.

Lawyer Fabrizio Fabrini had been charged with interfering with a religious function. On April 7, he rose in church and challenged the Sunday sermon of Rev. Alberto Gregorio.

The priest told the congregation that all the Jewish people were to blame for the crucifixion of Christ and that their long history of persecution, from the destruction of the Temple by the Romans to the mass killings under Hitler, was "a manifestation of divine will."

At this, Fabrini shouted that the priest was preaching Nazi doctrine and said: "You are a fool."

A court, in clearing 30-year-old Fabrini, ruled that what he did was not criminal.

B.C. May Ban Diesel Fumes

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark Friday said he may order diesel buses and trucks to switch to another fuel as a pollution control if it doesn't create economic hardship.

He told reporters health department engineers now are studying a device which can be attached to an existing engine using heavy diesel fuel to enable it to use a substitute fuel—probably bottled gas—which would burn more efficiently.

He said this would eliminate the clouds of exhaust fumes from diesel buses and trucks which particularly aggravate the air pollution caused by motor traffic.

Mr. Loffmark said the device was being studied by his department and tests would be made to determine whether the claim that the modification would save fuel costs was true.

"If that is established as true, then it would be very easy for the department to implement (the change-over)," he said.

Broad Street Section Closed To Help Rush

Broad Street between View and Fort will be closed to all automobile traffic Nov. 18 to mid-January.

And it could stay closed permanently.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay told city council Thursday the closure was essential during the Christmas traffic rush period to prevent left-turn congestion at Fort.

Since the city's first one-way streets—Yates and Fort—were introduced there has been increasing confusion at the Fort-Broad intersection.

"The best solution appears to be to cut traffic off entirely, except for commercial vehicles needing to load and unload at the stores in the block," said Ald. Ramsay.

Oil Tank Expansion Frozen Pending Study

Expansion of oil and gasoline storage facilities in the Inner Harbor will be banned until city fire fighters are sure they can control possible fire hazards.

Mayor Hugh Stephen and Fire Chief Eric Simmons said Friday they were well aware of the fire hazards reported Thursday to the Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

"The situation has been there for a number of years," said Chief Simmons. "It is unfortunate that the tanks were allowed to g there, but all we can do at present is make sure they are as safe as possible.

"We are well aware of the problems and have a steady committee working to review constantly the situation and come up with recommendations. As a matter of fact we are meeting with oil company representatives on Nov. 27 to complete some of those recommendations.

"I think what we have to do now is be practical about an existing situation rather than create alarm."

Chairman A. G. Coning of the chamber retired senior executives group said a report compiled by two members with co-operation of the fire chief and harbor master is a model of its kind.

The report was "not intended as a shell fired at the heads of city council," Mr. Coning said.

He felt the report should be considered as a responsible work of qualified men, W. M. Oakley, retired oil company executive, and R. G. Griffiths, former chief engineer and vice-president of a telecommunications network.

They noted among their recommendations that marine and air traffic, including helicopters, hydrofoil and possibly hovercraft, is on the increase in the limited confines of the harbor.

The gaoline and petroleum products are stored vulnerably close by, a 7 million-gallon threat to harbor contamination through spillage or to the safety of the whole area through fire and explosion;

Greater population will require increasingly larger storage facilities, which the harbor area can provide only by encroachment;

Removal of the facilities from harbor, homes and industry is desirable, and the sooner the seed is planted, the better, said the report.

Teacher Pay Ruling In December

Most teachers in the Capital region will have to wait about a month to hear what salary raise an arbitration board awards them.

In three of the four area school districts binding arbitration will settle the pay issue as the Thursday midnight deadline passed without negotiated settlements.

In the Saanich Peninsula school district bargaining produced an 11th-hour settlement which will give 197 teachers an across-the board salary increase of 5.8 per cent.

Fringe benefits will bring the value of the increase to just under seven per cent.

Legislation requires contracts to be signed by Dec. 31 but E. E. Pearlman, negotiator for the Greater Victoria, Sooke and Gulf Islands boards, said Friday he was hopeful the arbitrators' decision would be announced by mid-December.

Woman Routs Hold-Up Man By Waving Bottle

A woman waving a pop bottle scared off a youth, believed to be in his early twenties, who attempted to hold up a Central Saanich store Thursday evening.

The youth, described as wearing blue jeans, a black jacket and a nylon stocking with paint on it over his face walked into the Hilltop Grocery, 8597 East Saanich Road, just before 7 p.m., police said.

With his hands in his pockets he demanded money from proprietor Dorothy Anfield, 2002 Brentwood.

Police said she picked up a pop bottle, waved it at the man, and told him he wasn't getting any money. He then ran out of the store and down the street. The woman said she heard the sound of a car driving away a few minutes later.

Sidney police said today there were looking for a car, last seen heading towards Sidney.

PROPOSED ROUTE of a 300-mile Great Divide trail runs from Mount Robson to Palisser Pass along the B.C.-Alberta border. Conceived by 27-year-old Jim Thorsell, the trail would connect with the 3,000-mile trail which runs through the U.S. to the Mexican border.

'Walden Pond' Idea Pushed For Great Divide Trail

By PETE KIERNAN

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Great Divide, from Palliser Pass to Whistling Valley, through alpine meadows and on to Mount Robson, is a sort of Walden Pond.

Walden Pond was the physical and philosophical retreat of American philosopher Henry Thoreau alone. The Great Divide, forming the border between Alberta and British Columbia and backbone of one of the most spectacular mountain areas in the world, could be the physical and psychological retreat of thousands of North Americans.

That is what Jim Thorsell had in mind when the concept of a 300-mile Great Divide trail north from the Palliser to Mount Robson first began to grow on him several years ago.

The slim, 27-year-old academic, now studying toward his doctorate at the University of British columbia, has spent parts of the last six years exploring the route by foot, horseback and helicopter. He believes there are thousands of North Americans who want the "high quality experience" of treading remote areas—areas where the element of danger is present, but where they can follow Thoreau's advice and return to nature.

SHUNNED SOCIETY

Thoreau, the 19th century writer who spent much of his time at Walden Pond near Concord, Mass., where he followed his "individualistic" philosophy and largely shunned organized society, is one of Mr. Thorsell's models.

For the last two summers Mr. Thorsell has explored the proposed route as an employee of the research division of the national parks service. During that time he discovered that most of the people who used the fragments of trails that he would weld into a unit were well educated, appreciative of their environment, and aware of the need to "get away from it all."

And he believes there are enough of them who would welcome the Great Divide trail to warrant the interest of the parks service in creating it.

"After all, wilderness preservation is what national parks are all about," he said in an interview. "And there is enough public interest to convince officials they are no longer fighting the developers by themselves."

It is this growing interest that he hopes to fan into concrete contributions to allow a complete study of the route with recommendations for facilities—including huts, instruction books and alternate routes for more-hearty hikers—to be completed.

Of the proposed 300-mile trail, almost 200 miles wind through Banff and Jasper national parks, and the balance through Alberta and B.C. wilderness.

Eventually, it would connect in the south with the 3,000-mile path that wanders up through the United States from the Mexican border.

The whole Canadian portion could be financed "for the price of paving one mile of road," he said.

TAKES HARD VIEW

Although his interest in the wilderness satisfies a personal need related to his philosophic outlook, he takes a hard-headed view of what he is trying to do.

He wrote his master's thesis on wilderness preservation, and his present intra-disciplinary studies include the fields of geography, ecology, economics and resources. The aim is resource planning.

"After all, there are town planners but no resource planners. And the wilderness has a right to exist alongside urban development."

Already he realizes that he is fighting what is essentially "a delaying action."

He sees the result of industrial expansion and warns that "there is a popular conception that Canada is 90 per cent wilderness, it will always be there."

"That's true to an extent. But only a small percentage of our land has any recreational value, and that is gradually being spoiled."

Thorsell spent two years in Europe, mostly studying the trail systems developed in European countries — where "people crawl all over the mountains"—and came back dedicated to holding back the deterioration of Canada's wilds as long as possible.

What of the physical dangers?

"Well, when a black bear sees you he'll run up the nearest tree. When you see a grizzly bear, you run up the nearest tree."

That's one of the points he would like to see explained in the literature hikers along the Great Divide trail would receive.

Perrault Demands CYC Goals

OTTAWA (CP) — Ray Perrault (L—Burnaby-Seymour) Friday voiced his concern about a "very, very political" report to the Company of Young Canadians by one of its consultants.

The report, one of five dealing with possible development of the CYC programs internationally, was submitted to the company about a year ago by Gerry Hunnius, 41, now doing post-doctoral research at the Institute for Policy Study in Washington.

Speaking at a meeting of the Commons committee examining the 1968-69 CYC budget of $1,900,000, Mr. Perrault demanded to know if any future international projects initiated by the company would have political aims.

Stewart Goodings, acting CYC director, said the report by Mr. Hunnius was an internal position paper, not a statement of company policy.

Since a 20-per-cent cut had been made in the company's budget last fall, it had been decided that no overseas program should be undertaken.

DOING GOOD WORK

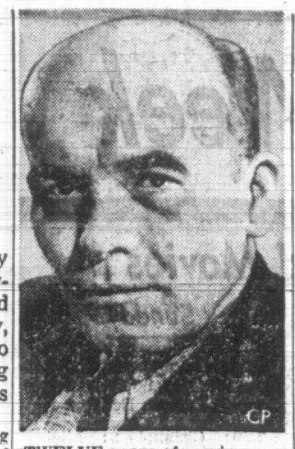

Mr. Perrault said the company is doing good work in many areas of Canada. But if it were ultimately to extend its work overseas, it was important for MPs to know what the goals of such a program would be.

"Is it the kind of program which would result in what Mr. Hunnius describes as 'radical change in society' or are the objectives to be purely economic such as those pursued by some other government agencies?" he asked.

Mr. Perrault also wanted to know if the Hunnius brief "for which he was paid $11,000," was "apart from the norm" of the other consultations that CYC had sought on the development of an international program.

Mr. Goodings emphasized that the company had no present plans for such a program and therefore the aims and objectives for one were "a question for the future."

The CYC believed Mr. Hunnius, who had extensive academic qualifications, was competent to suggest some ideas for consideration. But the company was not committed to accepting all of a consultant's ideas.

TWELVE years of service was rewarded today by the re-election in Warsaw of Wladyslaw Gomulka as leader of the Polish Communist party. Coincident with his re-election, three members of the former politburo were dropped from the 12-man governing body.

Oak Bay CWL Plans Meals For Shut-Ins

The Oak Bay Catholic Women's League is trying to organize a "meals-on-wheels" program to serve lunch to 20 shut-ins in the municipality.

The group plans to start with two drivers using private cars, each distributing 10 meals. But they eventually want 24 drivers who can spare a few hours a month.

"If we could get 24 drivers, this would mean they would only need to drive once a month," said Mrs. Theresa Green, of 950 Joan Crescent, one of the organizers.

The meals, consisting of meat, vegetables and dessert, will be prepared in Goodwill kitchens and packed in styrofoam boxes for 60 cents.

Honorary Aide-de-Camp

A retired air force officer has been appointed honorary aide-de-camp to the Governor-General of Canada.

Colonel Eric L. Kenny, CD, of Gabriola Island, served in several senior staff appointments in the armed forces prior to his retirement in March, 1968.

Colonel Kenny joined the air force in 1944 and flew with the India squadron until the end of the war.

Draft Kennedy for '72 Started, Students Told

A movement to get Senator Edward Kennedy into the White House by 1972 has already begun, a Seattle lawyer told University of Victoria students Friday.

Frederic Tausend, former assistant attorney-general in the state of Washington, said an organization to promote Senator Kennedy is already being formed.

He believed a Kennedy candidate in the 1972 election would have considerable appeal, but it is too early yet for official moves in that direction.

"Part of the Kennedy advantage," Mr. Tausend said, "lies in the fact they have always been able to attract and skillfully use excellent staff."

READY FOR CHANGE

He said the United States is ready for a change from Lyndon Johnson because his style of conducting the presidency is "out of tune with the times."

As a Democrat, Mr. Tausend said he was "not particularly delighted" with the election of Richard Nixon. But, if Nixon continued the course of flexibility and moderation he adopted during his election campaign, the country would move ahead in the next four years with more problems being solved than created.

"The mood of the country as expressed in the election was constructive and moderate and a rejection of bigotry and repression."

Mr. Tausend was issues coordinator for John O'Connell, Democratic candidate for Washington governor, who lost to Republican Dan Evans in the last election.

Alert Husky Saves Guests From Blaze

ATLIN, B.C. (CP) — Twelve persons, alerted by a one-year-old husky pup, escaped uninjured Friday when the only hotel in this community 800 miles northwest of Vancouver was destroyed by fire.

The last guests left the 64-year-old Kootenay Hotel as Atlin's 15-man volunteer fire brigade, with a truck purchased from British Columbia Telephone Co. for $1, arrived to fight the blaze.

The hotel owner, Diane Smith, said of the dog: "If it hadn't been for Rowdy, they might never have got out."

Damage was estimated at $50,000. The fire is believed to have started near a basement furnace.

Retreat Ideas To Be Presented To Chamber

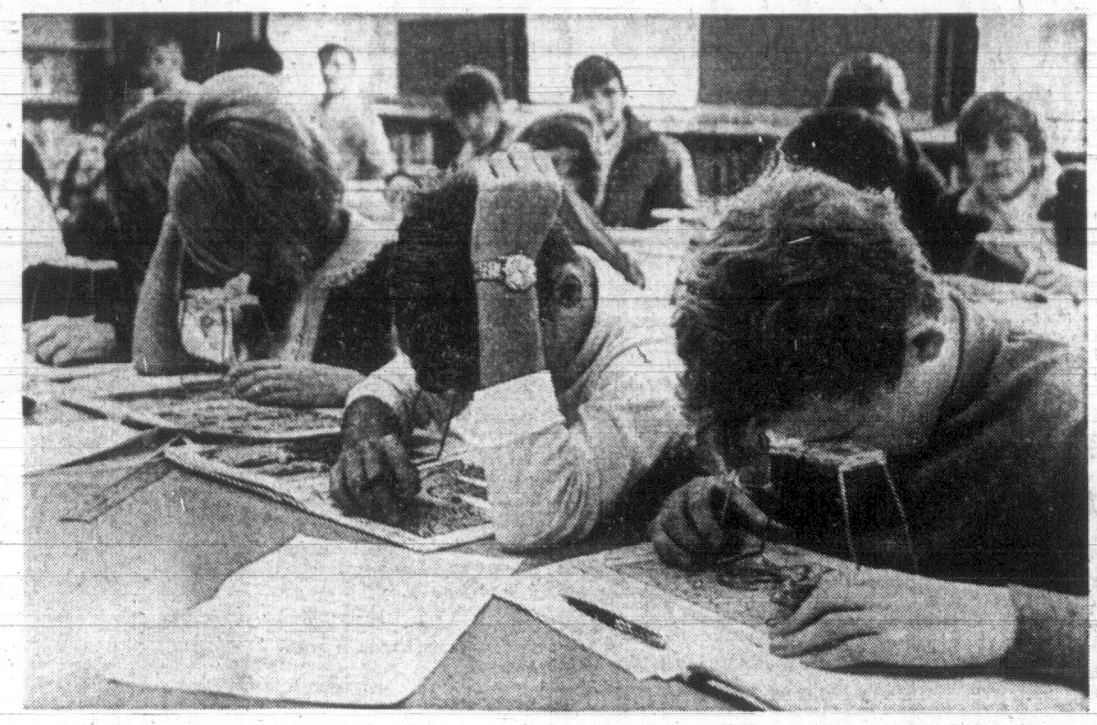

Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce executive committee is studying results of a think-tank session of directors held in a weekend retreat up-island.

A long list of suggestions and ideas for policies relating to the future development of Victoria will eventually be digested for submission to formal consideration by the chamber.

Retired senior executives group chairman A. G. Coning said Thursday the result would be aimed at every facet of life in the capital, excluding political subjects.

LOOK AND LISTEN SESSION conducted by librarian Charles Bardsley at Richmond Elementary School illustrates the increasing array of teaching tools school libraries are stocking. While books are still the core wealth, banks of films, charts, picture series, magazines, newspapers, slides, records and tapes are appearing to add sound and color. Mr. Bardsley took slides and produced a matching tape to tell a story of animals for these pupils. Earphones enable youngsters to listen undisturbed and without disturbing others using library. Tape is versatile, can be stopped anytime for discussion. The library at Reynolds Secondary School (right) provides stereoscopes, used here to produce three-dimensional view from overlapping aerial photographs for study of land features. Students Jackie Lawrence, Bob Corder and David Baier, in the Grade 9 geography class of Don Wood, look for such things as glacial plains and mountain ranges. Contour maps and books from the library, operated by Ken Leighton, support the study which will culminate with charter air flight over Victoria area in the spring. Library encourages use by eliminating due dates and fines. Policy has cut books lost.

Libraries: Centre Stage After Years in the Wings

By DON VIPOND

They've taken the "shhhhh" out of school libraries.

In fact that dreary corner where yesterday's pupils tiptoed reluctantly through the dust of the past is itself no more.

In its place is a bright room with a bustle, with more books and better ones, as well as a battery of intriguing devices which can tell a story too.

A look at school libraries during Young Canada's Book Week (Nov. 14 to 23) shows the biggest and best change is they are now places for the living rather than shelves to stack the sacred dead.

Not every school has a library. And not every library is a good one. But the best are showing the way and many others want to follow.

★

In top school libraries students are welcomed with open arms, their interests are tempted, their curiosity encouraged. For a good reason too, which lies close to the heart of education philosophy today.

Man's knowledge is doubling with each passing decade. No school, teacher or student can absorb that sort of information explosion.

Many teachers are devoting more and more time to instructing their pupils on how to learn for themselves—arming them with a skill useful in any field and for a lifetime.

When students set out to discover, their first stop is usually the library.

Just how far the library has been emancipated shows in new school design. It has been moved from the forgotten corner to the centre of the building, handy and beckoning.

And when it includes a variety of allied aids—films, slides, newspapers, magazines, records, tape recordings, pictures—it gets a new name too—resource centre.

Some examples of the diversity in Greater Victoria school libraries:

At Richmond Elementary School, librarian Charles Bardsley with tape recorder and camera has made his library a showplace locally for audio-visual aids.

★

There are taped stories for the primary grades. The library has a Grade 7 mathematics lesson on tape and soon will have illustrations on slides to go with it. Mr. Bardsley has produced a synchronized tape and slide show on animals for Grade 4. There are other tapes telling about Japan, about trees and plants.

Mr. Bardsley admits novelty accounts for some of the popularity. But pupils like tapes for the opportunity to take part they provide too.

Teachers don't get all a lesson's points over the first or even the second time, he adds. The tape lets pupils review as often as they want, without feeling undue pressure.

Libraries in elementary schools were all but unheard of a generation ago. At Richmond the library has 3,200 books with 600 to 800 of them out on loan all the time.

The bright carpeted library room at Blanshard is a giant jump forward.

The trend is to variety and levels in reading, says librarian Mrs. Grace Hamlyn. Traditional stories with simplified vocabularies for reluctant readers, for example.

★

How do you instil a love of books in youngsters?

Read to them and read early and often, long before they get to school, she says.

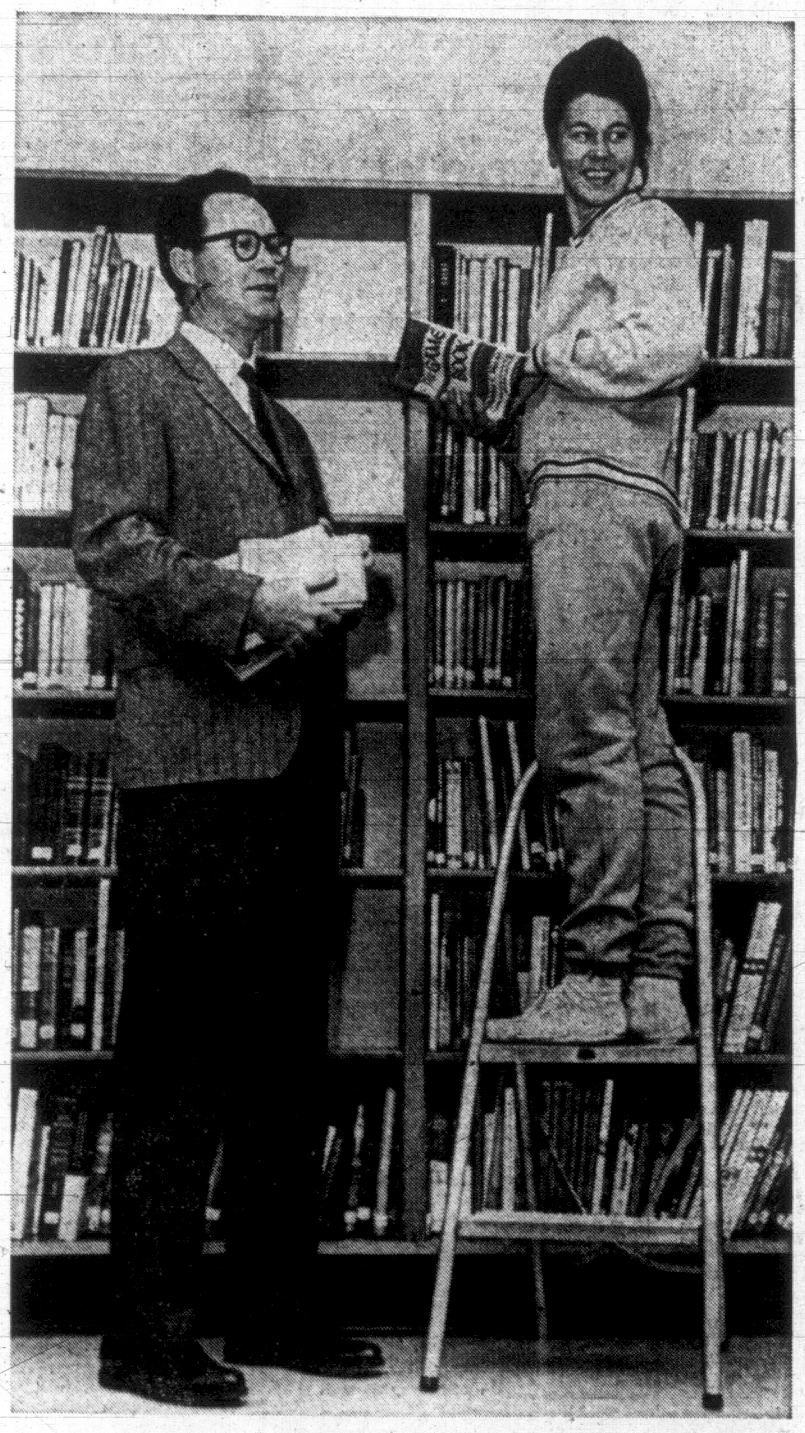

With older grades she will read a chapter from a book which leaves her listeners hanging in suspense. Then she stands back and waits for the rush to the library.

Blanshard's collection of 3,600 books is particularly critical to that school's operation. An open area-team teaching project leaves youngsters time to research independently. This makes a good library a must.

Wide use of magazines and newspapers in secondary school libraries illustrates how they are working to keep in touch with today.

At Central Junior volunteer students assemble reference lists which will guide social studies students to relevant magazine articles for study projects, like an in-depth look at the United Nations. The school subscribes to 27 magazines.

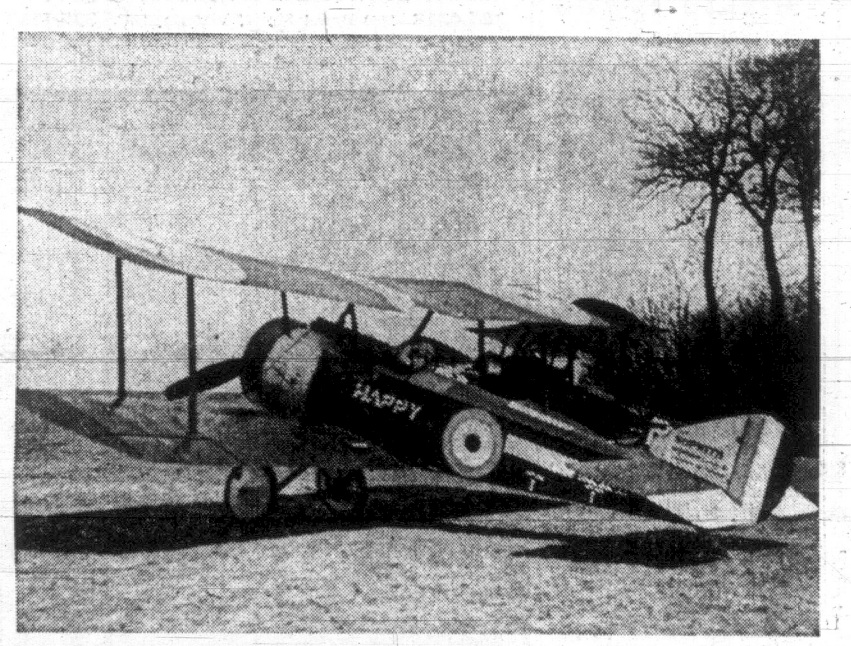

And at Oak Bay junior, where crowding sometimes keeps the library busy as a classroom, book carts roll down the corridors to take the library to the students.

TEACHER TEAMWORK is a must if the school library is to do its job. At Esquimalt Junior Secondary, librarian Gordon Willits lends Barbara Knight, girls' physical education instructor, a hand in digging out books on sports. Teachers are encouraged to suggest books for purchase in their subject areas. The librarian in turn must keep teachers informed.

UP-TO-THE-MINUTE information from newspapers supplied by Reynolds school library provides material for social studies projects. Students Lillian Stoyles, Larry Neill and Valerie Ross, from the Grade 10 class of Mrs. Kathleen Salmond, comb news columns in Times for articles on such topics as student unrest, Nigeria and Biafra, the population explosion, organized crime, the UN, Trudeau or the race for space. Students work in small groups and also use magazines to prepare reports, some of which will be debated.

A GENUINE Sopwith Camel and one of Joe Fall's own planes. Pilots often named their "kites" after girls or whatever struck their fancy. This one was tabbed "Happy". No, Peanuts fans, that's not Snoopy in the cockpit.

Joe Fall Fell But Refused to Die

By ED GOULD

The Victoria doctor who operated on young Joe Fall was surprised his patient survived the crucial brain operation and eventually grew up to become one of Canada's First World War flying aces.

Dr. O. M. Jones, a world-famous surgeon, removed nearly one-half of one lobe after the 14-year-old farm boy fell on to a disc harrow at his father's Duncan-area farm.

But Joe's father said: "You don't know Joe. He just won't die."

●

The Germans must have though so too. Joe Fall went on to collect 36 of their aircraft and two balloons on his way to a Distinguished Service Cross and two bars, plus the Air Force Cross.

For the DSC, he shot down three aircraft in one operation while piloting a Sopwith Pup—forerunner to the Camel. In another three-victim dogfight, he collected the two bars. The AFC he got, in his third trip to Buckingham Palace, for aerial fighting instruction.

He needn't have gone to war at all. In 1915 he tried to join the army but they wouldn't take him because of his skull operation.

●

But he was determined and after taking a preliminary flight training course at Dayton, Ohio—"in the old Wilbur Wright box kites"—he got a commission in the Royal Naval Air Service.

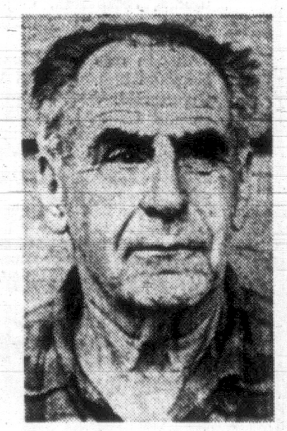

He fooled the naval medical branch by growing his hair long and telling the doctors the "literal" truth:

"When they asked me if I had any bodily injuries, I said no. They didn't say anything about head injuries, and neither did I."

Group Capt. Fall (who retired after 30 years in the RNAS and RAF) lived up to his father's prophesy of his indestructibility and determination to survive.

Once, during the First World War, his tiny aircraft was shot through with 50 holes and the control panel was a shattered wreck where it had taken a direct hit.

"When I landed, the wings dropped down to the ground like a hen over a brood of chicks," he said.

GROUP CAPT. FALL
. . . "old indestructible"

He ended up with a tiny scar on one hip. His only other mishap came after the war. After touring French bases in Syria and Lebanon he contracted polio which left him with a weak leg.

●

Between the two world wars, the group captain kept busy. He commanded stations, set up air force installations abroad, helped "keep the peace," and flew autogyros, preliminary helicopters and "lots of weird contraptions" at the experimental station at Farnborough.

He also took part in the first aerial display ever held before the public at Hendon, Middlesex on July 3, 1920.

In another demonstration of flying skill, he flew upside down cross-country from Uphavon to Netheravon, a distance of five or six miles, at an altitude of 4,000 feet

Group Capt. Fall also loaded HMS Argus, Britain's first naval carrier, with aircraft by flying them out from Gosport and returning by navy launch.

●

His luck held again when he was inadvertently given the wrong wind speed over the ship's tossing deck, struck the stern about two feet short, and swam for his life while the plane was demolished by the ship's propellers.

"In those days there was nothing to stop an aircraft once it landed on the deck except the pilot's own plane controls," he said.

Prior to the Second World War, Group Capt. Fall saw service with the RAF in England, France, Egypt, Suez, Iraq and Malta.

The Second World War found him in many hot spots but none more so than when he was in temporary command of a group at Abukir repair depot near Alexandria when Rommel was nearby.

●

"It was touch and go whether to pick up and go," he said, but the unit remained and Joe Fall's luck held again.

At the end of the war he was commanding a training station back in his native land—at North Battleford, Sask.—and later moved to a similar post at Carberry, Manitoba.

After such a long and distinguished career, Group Capt. Fall, now 73, is finally starting to take life a little easier. He and his wife, whom he met while in England after the first war, recently moved into their new home just outside Duncan.

West Indies Dishes Part of Tour Delight

PORT OF SPAIN — Tropical food isn't all coconuts and papaya! In Trinidad and Tobago the local dishes are spicy, colorful, full of exotic flavor. This, of course, is as it should be. The two islands are the southernmost of the Caribbean chain — so the cooking is West Indian. Yet, because Trinidad (Tobago is 20 miles to the northeast) lies only seven miles off the coast of Venezuela, this island has inherited many dishes from South America. Trinidad also has a cosmopolitan population, and dishes from all over the world have crept into the local menu.

PIGEON PEA

The Negroes, for instance, are fond of peppery dishes and vegetables such as the breadfruit and pigeon pea. The East Indians still make their hot curries, their roti and dalpurries besides all the chutneys and lime pickles The Chinese cook superlative national dishes using local fish and meat as well as imported Chinese foods. The French have added wine to their dishes and the English, of course, brought in roast meats.

When you escape to your island paradise — and in this case the island is Trinidad — try the local dishes.

The Trinidad and Tobago Tourist Board or your hotel or taxi driver will advise you on what restaurants specialize in different dishes. For Creole food, you might try a Trinidad hotpot.

SPICY STEW

This is a spicy stew made up of pork or beef, sometimes both, and vegetables like onions and garlic. The whole is spiced and enough hot peppers are added to suit the demanding West Indian palate.

Another Creole dish not to be missed is chicken pelau, a tasty dish of rice and chicken with pigeon peas added. The rice and chicken are first fried and then stewed with a very little water.

Pastels are a must. These spicy snacks are envelopes of ground corn filled with a savory mixture of minced meat, spices, capers, olives, raisins. A banana leaf used as a wrapping keeps the pastel watertight when it is boiled and imparts a piquant flavor of its own.

WEST INDIES

Crab callaloo is a distinctive West Indian dish. A local plant, similar in flavor to spinach, is stewed together with onions, pumpkin and local blue crab. The resulting soup is thick, smooth and delicious.

Red crabs are used for "Crab Backs". This dish originated in Guyana. The crab meat is spiced and stuffed into the back shell of the crab. Hot pepper is added to give an exciting dash of flavor.

All kinds of tropical vegetables are served with Creole dishes — the purple-tinged root vegetable called dasheen, yams, breadfruit, plantain (a large cooking banana which can be boiled or fried), pumpkin, rice, bodie (a foot-long bean), dried beans and many others.

HOT PEPPER

Indian food is always a delight of spicy flavor, more often than not with the addition of hot pepper, and Chinese food in Trinidad is rather different to the food in Chinese restaurants abroad. It is more authentically Chinese.

Various hotels and restaurants in the island serve international menus.

English fare includes such favorites as roast beef and Yorkshire pudding, pork pies and lamb chops, served with potatoes and green vegetables.

French dishes include duckling and orange sauce, chicken en cocotte, onion soup, escargot — in fact all the popular French dishes cooked with or without wine. A good French wine will be available to go with the meal.

When in Denmark Carry Notebook

When in Denmark, carry a notebook and collect the phone numbers of any people you might want to call. People are listed by their job titles in the phone directory, even down to an unskilled worker.

When in Chile, remember to keep a bowl of pesos near the front door because the mailman is tipped every time he brings a letter.

When in South Africa, your apartment rent includes the daily services of a boy to clean your floors.

These are random tips from the new revised edition of "All You Need to Know About Living Abroad," formerly "New Horizons Living Abroad," published by Pan American World Airways. The current issue provides detailed information and expert advice on living in 93 countries, each with its own way of doing things.

Author Eleanor Beers Pierce draws upon her own experience in world travel with her engineer husband, and on up-to-date information collected from hundreds of North American women now living abroad.

Regardless of whether you will be staying for months or years, the book provides a handy reference on what to take with you, and how to cope with what you find when you get there. The book is organized by country, and offers detailed advice on entry regulations, clothing, currency, child life, medical care, servants, social life and other basic aspects of living abroad.

An extensive introductory section not only supplies information about documents required for extended stays abroad but is also packed with tips on how to survive comfortably regardless of climate, altitude or a total lack of supermarkets.

WIRE-TAPPING IN TORONTO

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto police have been using electronic listening devices and telephone wiretaps against suspected wrongdoers for the last two years, Police Chief James Mackey said Thursday.

His disclosure at a panel discussion before University of Toronto law students was the first official confirmation that his department had been using eavesdropping devices long before last summer's judicial inquiry that led to the dismissal of Magistrate Frederick Bannon.

Family Has Midas Touch But Who Can Eat Oil?

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Imagine the delight of Bernard Weinsieder and his family when oil bubbled up through a crack in their backyard patio a few weeks ago.

Weinsieder's son Jules, 22, said: "We thought we had it made."

But so far it has cost more than $3,000, wrecked the family patio, driven some neighbors away, and landed them in court.

The family followed the seepage to a storage cellar where they found a pool of crude oil. It turned out this came from a well drilled in 1911 and abandoned in 1924.

The first sign of disaster came when they called refineries to find out how much the oil was worth.

"They all said they were committed to certain companies, that we were independent operators and they couldn't buy from us," said Richard Weinsieder, a 17-year-old son.

DOUBTS WILL PAY

A petroleum geologist checked the well and said he doubted whether it would ever pay for attempts to make it productive again.

Weinsieder, the elder, a bread salesman, had to pay $2 a barrel to have the cellar pumped out and 150 barrels of oil trucked away.

Then as the oil kept coming, the family paid $2,500 to a drilling company to dig a hole in the yard and find the well, a tenant moved out because of oil odors and gurgling sounds, a neighbor filed suit because her tenant also moved out, chunks of the patio broke loose because of underground pressures and the Weinsieders learned it would cost them $20,000 to cap the well properly.

The family also found out that the well was drilled and deserted by Associated Oil Co., which later became part of the Getty Oil Co. They hired a lawyer who filed a $575,000 negligence suit against the company.

"The oil company reaped the benefits from the oil well years ago," said Jerome Beznik, the lawyer. "Why should the Weinsieder family, who purchased the home only two years ago, now have to suffer from the oil company's negligence?"

A Getty oil spokesman said: "We were the corporate predecessor involved in that portion of the old Salt Lake Oil Field, but we've no interest in the field for 44 years."

CITY TO SEE FIERY COMET

The Leonid meteor shower—caused by the earth's collision with debris from the comet Temple-Tuttle—may be seen just after midnight Sunday if skies are clear.

The place to look for it, experts say, is the east near the constellation Leo from which the shower takes its name.

Dr. Harvey Richardson, research scientist at the Dominion Astrophysical Observatory, said meteors were seen just after sunset Friday but the main shower began just after midnight this morning.

The shower expected Sunday may not be quite as spectacular but, if seen, it will be impressive.

●

Some meteors leave trails of yellow sparks hanging behind them while others burn in long trails, then vanish in blue flame. A particularly impressive shower is forecast for Dec. 10 when some 50 meteors an hour are expected to hurtle across the sky.

One of Leonid's most colorful displays occurred in 1966 when watchers saw streaks in every direction—upward, downward and sideways.

Astronomers say the comet Temple-Tuttle, from which the shower emanates, was first identified in 1889.

QLB Under Probe In Bootlegging

QUEBEC (CP)—Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand said Friday the finance department is trying to determine whether the Quebec Liquor Board could have tolerated or organized "clandestine commerce" in alcohol.

Meanwhile, representatives of 3,000 striking liquor board workers and the QLB adjourned negotiations for the weekend with the major issue of wages still unsolved. The workers have been on strike since June 26.

Premier Bertrand told the legislature that acting finance minister Armand Russell and the justice department are looking into allegations by the Liberal opposition that a clandestine commerce in liquor has been carried on in Quebec since the strike began.

BIG SEIZURE

The investigation follows the seizure last weekend in suburban Vanier of more than 9,500 bottles of liquor worth about $100,000. Five persons have been arraigned in court on charges of conspiracy in the illicit transport of liquor.

Summons have also been issued against Transport D'Anjou Inc. whose president is Adelard D'Anjou, a Union Nationale member of the legislative assembly, and Guy Marinier, secretary-treasurer of Melchers Distilleries Ltd.

Transport D'Anjou and Mr. Marinier will appear in court Nov. 21 on charges of violating the Quebec Liquor Board Act.

The five already arraigned, including four employees of Melchers Distilleries of Berthierville, Que., face preliminary hearing Nov. 21.

Uvic French Language Journal Makes Debut

By ALAN WHITE

Uvic-Libre is a journal with an office, a press and for the past few days, a reading public.

Of 250 copies in the first issue, one was sent to the office of Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau. Another went to David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich.

The remaining copies were distributed to local high schools, and within the department of French at the University of Victoria.

"Some of the professors are quite enthusiastic about the paper," co-editor Ralph Sarkonak, 19, said this week. "A couple wanted copies for their entire classes."

POETRY AND COMMENT

Uvic-Libre is a French journal — a newspaper of poetry and comment — printed from a small office on the fourth floor of the McLaurin Building on campus.

Inspired by a short-lived journal printed by a member of the French department last year, Mr. Sarkonak and co-editor John Adams, also 19, wrote an editorial and collected several articles of opinion for the publication.

Facilities and paper were supplied by the department.

"We were short of articles to begin with," Mr. Adams said. "But now we will print anything."

All articles submitted are checked by members of the department for grammar — the publication is all translated into French — and the editors check the contents.

WANT PERFECTION

The grammar isn't always perfect, and Mr. Adams said a few members of the department insist on perfection in the language. "'Otherwise you shouldn't publish,' they've said."

But that has not deterred them, and Mr. Adams said the paper is trying "to make French a living language."

The first editorial called for an end to the compulsory second language requirement for students of the university And the second, being written this week, will suggest the abolition of final examinations as they are now run.

Other articles and poetry were submitted by students and translated from English by the staff.

On the wall of the newspaper's office are a picture of Prime Minister Trudeau and reprints of historical front pages of Paris newspapers. One of them, the French Communist Party paper L'Humanite, bears a headline that Lenin is dead.

$112,529 Damages

TORONTO (CP) — Danny Wong, 33, of Toronto, who lost the use of his legs three years ago after he was hit by a car, Friday won $112,529 damages in an Ontario Supreme Court suit against Catherine McCann, a Toronto housewife. Wong has been in hospital since Sept. 14, 1965.

STRAPPING carried out in Canadian prisons is described as a "barely disguised homosexual assault" by the Canadian Welfare Council magazine's latest edition. Above is the type of strap used by prison officials. (CP Wirephoto)

Group Lashes Whip Sadism

OTTAWA (CP) — Use of the strap in Canadian prisons is described in the current issue of CW, the Canadian Welfare Council magazine, as "a barely-disguised homosexual assault."

It is the only legitimate outlet "to a massively forbidden pleasure" rather than a deterrent, says John R. Seeley, former chairman of sociology at York University, Toronto.

Another writer in the November-December issue of the magazine also castigates the use of the strap and the cat-o'-nine-tails. Dr. John R. Griffin of Toronto, executive director of the Canadian Mental Health Association, says the damage done prisoners by flogging "is often severe and irreversible."

"On top of that the damage to the administrators of such punishment is often very real albeit somewhat more subtle."

Both Dr. Griffin and Dr. Seeley, now with the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions, Santa Barbara, Calif., write in support of an earlier article that says corporal punishment should be removed from the Criminal Code.

At present, the code allows judges to prescribe the cat-o'-nine-tails in cases of rape, sexual intercourse with girls under 14, indecent assault on a female or male, incest, use of drugs on someone who tries to resist the commission of a crime, and robbery and armed burglary.

FLOG PRISONER'S BACK

The cat-o'-nine-tails is used across the back of a prisoner. A federal penitentiaries service spokesman said judges have prescribed it as a punishment three or four times this year.

Penitentiaries Act regulations allow the commissioner of penitentiaries to authorize use of the strap for prison mutiny or assault on guards. The spokesman said it has been used once this year.

When a prisoner is strapped, his pants are taken down and the heavy leather is administered across his bare backside.

"The strap is perforated, so that the soft flesh of a man's buttocks is drawn up and torn with each stroke," an article by A. M. Kirkpatrick, executive director of the John Howard Society of Ontario, says. "He usually can't take more than a few strokes at a time."

The Kirkpatrick article, accompanied by photos of a strap and a cat-o'-nine-tails, appeared in the July-August issue of CW and inspired the Seeley-Griffin letters.

The strap also is used in most provincial prisons although Ontario banned corporal punishment in 1960.

Mr. Kirkpatrick says it is "manifestly unsound" to order a man to be whipped by officers who are supposed to be his examples and guides to social rehabilitation.

"Corporal punishment debases the recipient and those who administer it," he says. It should be replaced by individual and group therapy or by medical sedation.

Dr. Griffin says a complete change in social attitudes toward correction and reform is needed if education, training, treatment and rehabilitation are to be substituted for the strap.

"However, such changes will be very difficult because of the very deep-seated and unwitting fears and hates existing in society itself which are so readily mobilized and expressed against any logical scapegoat."

Professionals had to lead and help society, "a slow learner in these things," move towards a more rational attitude.

NOTES SIGNIFICANCE

Dr. Seeley says the "ugly truths" of corporal punishment go much deeper. The ceremonial whipping of the helplessly confined is "a choice preserved and cherished because . . . it is a reward of devastatingly deep significance for all who promote or protect it, many who inflict it, and most actual or virtual witnesses, which means most of the consenting general population."

"What we are talking about is a barely disguised sexual assault . . . a barely disguised homosexual assault," Dr. Seeley says.

The choice of instruments, the forcible undressing, the timed strokes and the privacy made it clear "what is really going on." A person needed "little understanding of sado-masochism" to understand.

Even "public officials as stupid as censors" who allowed scenes of slow torture or mass murder or the kind of savored killing of the film Bonnie and Clyde stopped short of showing "corporal punishment of the kind practised in Canadian prisons."

It was never shown, "not even in the underworld of stag films," because censors knew any audience would be degraded or suffer dangerous anxiety at the spectacle.

Before Magistrate

A man with what Magistrate William Ostler termed an "appalling" criminal record was sentenced Friday to eight months in jail on a charge of uttering.

John Brenton, no address available, pleaded guilty to causing a $78 cheque to which he forged his signature, court was told.

His previous history, read by prosecutor Cory Stolte, included convictions for armed robbery, theft with violence, breaking and entering, going back to 1946.

"One seldom hears a worse record for crimes of violence," said the magistrate.

Harry Mills, 1303 Fernwood, was given a suspended sentence and placed on a $100 six-month good behavior bond after he pleaded guilty to obtaining lodgings by false pretenses.

Court was told he left a downtown hotel Oct. 5 without paying a bill owing of $13.50.

Robert Esplen, 791 Revilo, was fined $350 after he pleaded guilty to impaired driving. Court was told he drove on Sooke Road Aug. 22.

Edward Courtepatte, 11A Eaton, was fined $350 after he was convicted for impaired driving. Court was told he was involved in an accident on Burnside Sept. 29.

After hearing what appeared to be conflicting evidence from the accused and another witness Magistrate Ostler said Courtepatte had deliberately lied under oath.

"The crown might well consider and I suggest a charge of perjury," he told Mr. Stolte.

Victor Nolan, no address available, was placed on a six-month $250 good behavior bond on a charge of threatening. Court was told he threatened another woman and Saanich police officers Thursday.

Frederick W. McLean, Malahat, was sentenced to six months in jail on 12 counts of theft and false pretences.

At an earlier hearing court was told he cashed worthless cheques totalling $223.64 and obtained lodgings by fraud at a local motel. He also pleaded guilty to taking two citizen's band radios worth $600 and pawned them for $35 police said.

Lorne Switzer, of Vancouver, was fined $300 for impaired driving and $100 for leaving the scene of an accident. Court was told he was involved in an accident at Tillicum and Carey No. 6.

Winnipegers Pay Homage To Teacher

More than 100 natives of Winnipeg gathered Friday at the James Bay athletic centre to greet a former teacher on her 80th birthday.

Most of them were Victoria area residents but others came from their prairie homes to honor Mrs. Maie Doig, of 2255 Allenby.

Another 276 former pupils in the Winnipeg area, where she taught Grade 9 from the early 1920s until after the Second World War, sent a telegram.

The graduates from Cecil Rhodes school watched Mrs. Doig slice a cake adorned with the words "Happy Birthday Mrs. Doig on your 80th."

CPO Bill Shaw, who organized the party, said the pupils were not the only ones to remember the former school teacher. She is the only woman to hold the freedom of the city award, presented by Mayor Steven Juba of Winnipeg.

This Spring see the whole bloomin' world.

This March take a First Class look on P&O's Arcadia. Or see the same world on the same ship on a budget. As little as $22 a day!

Only P&O gives you a world to see and a choice of ways to see it. Either way, First or Tourist, you'll sail east around the world and into spring on graceful Arcadia. 100-plus sun-warmed days. 25 sea-washed ports. More than two weeks ashore sampling Europe in bloom. And experienced escorts to smooth every step.

On P&O's Springtime Adventure, you choose the Europe you want to see. P&O's Grand Tour is 20 days of top-class fun in England, Belgium, Switzerland, France, Italy, and Portugal. The 20-day Budget Tour gives you lots of Spain with London, Paris, Bordeaux and Lisbon added. The 16-day tour gives you Ireland with Dublin, Connemara, Killarney. A feast in the medieval halls of a castle in Limerick. Plus Stratford and swinging London at Britain's bright time of the year.

You sail 35,000 sea-going miles. Through the Panama Canal to the gentle Caribbean. Across the mighty Atlantic. Down the coast of Africa and around to the Indian Ocean. To the vast Pacific where Australia, the Orient, and Hawaii beckon. All along the way, Arcadia is your hotel in port and your home at sea. She has verandahs, cool and quiet. Sunny open decks. Pools with cozy cafes alongside. Room to party and dance the night away with all the friends you meet. An excellent restaurant. And service so superb it can only be British!

The price? Amazingly little when you sail with the world's oldest and largest steamship line.

Including escorts, shore excursions, and depending on which European tour you choose, First Class starts at $2758. Tourist, $2220 (U.S. dollars). Sailing from Vancouver on March 6.

Plan now to sail to places other people dream about. Mail the coupon for more information. Or see your travel agent. (He can arrange everything!) Then come aboard and let P&O show you that . . . Life at sea is like nothing on earth.

Barber of Seville December Treat

Packed with more familiar music than almost any other opera, based on a gaily romantic libretto that gives rise to bubbling comedy, Rossini's The Barber of Seville is probably the most famous of all opera buffs.

Many people consider Figaro's virtuoso aria, Largo al factotum which occurs early in the first act, the piece de resistance of the opera.

But that is hardly fair to such delights as the brilliant and charming Una voce poca fa, sung by the coloratura heroine, Rosina; to La Calumnia, in which Don Basilio, the comic-eccentric music teacher describes the spread of scandal as an antidote to Rosina's infatuation with Count Almaviva; to the irresistible music lesson scene and numerous other vivid moments.

Victoria opera fans have been on a starvation diet for some time now and the visit of the Canadian Opera Company, performing Barber of Seville Dec. 1 and 2 at the Royal Theatre, should therefore be doubly welcome.

One of the extra attractions in the Victoria Symphony season, Barber comes to the city supported by its own orchestra and with a double cast of fully experienced singers.

A number of these artists have appeared here with the company on previous visits and have left extremely favorable impressions behind — Sheila Piercey, Dodi Protero, Jan Rubes, Cornelis Opthof, John Arab, Phil Stark, Richard Braun and Alexander Gray, are names to arouse pleasant recollections.

TRANSLATION

The opera is sung in an English translation by Boris Goldovsky and Sarah Caldwell.

Clever and attractive sets and costumes have been a hallmark of previous Canadian Opera productions seen here.

Again this season, settings specially constructed to be transported in a 41-passenger bus and to be quickly erected and broken down, will be a feature.

Victoria Symphony box office at Eaton's reports a steady demand and opera lovers who desire a choice of seats for either of the two performances should make reservations soon.

CELLIST MAKES DEBUT

The Canadian debut of striking young Soviet Armenian cellist Karine Georgian occurred last month at the Place des Arts in Montreal.

That she electrified her audience, and particularly the critics, is a matter of record.

Critics who, in the last few months, had heard some remarkable cello playing by youthful artists—including the astonishing British teen-ager, Jacqueline du Pre, describe her as one of the most impressive artists of our time.

The New York Times declared that "she plays in the great tradition of Pablo Casals."

A favorite pupil of Rostropovich, Miss Georgian, in 1966—10 years after Van Cliburn took the award—won the Tchaikowsky competition, considered one of the most important of the great international contests.

Following this weekend's appearance with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra, Miss Georgian will be presented in recital at McPherson Playhouse on Wednesday at 8:30 p.m.

With Robin Wood at the piano, she will perform the Brahms Sonata in F, Sonata in D by Locatelli, two numbers from ballets by Prokofieff and Suite Italienne by Stravinsky.

Tickets are available at the symphony box office.

Shady Corner Challenge for Gardener

By JACK BEASTALL

Shade is defined as partial or relative darkness caused by cutting off rays of light, while shadow is fainter light due to interception of the sun's rays. As soon as we build a structure, or grow a plant, we create shade.

Jack

In the garden we sometimes create shade (or a shadow) to provide protection for plants. On the other hand, we are often faced with shaded areas that pose problems in plant growing.

Therefore, shade in a garden may be beneficial or detrimental.

Permanent shade is cast by buildings, fences, contour of the ground (hills and valleys), and dense stands of vegetation (trees and tall shrubs).

This leads to the question: Is shade an insurmountable problem? In fact, is it even a problem?

It could well be that our real problem in the garden is our inability to measure shade; that is, to determine accurately the degree of shade that exists.

PIECE OF LAND

Just a cursory examination of a piece of wild land will reveal that plants have adapted to all degrees of shade.

We have so many cultivated plants thriving in shade that no problem exists in finding suitable subjects for a shaded area.

Yet, we have constant appeals from gardeners for "something to grow in the shade."

Analyzing these appeals we find two factors that stand out; (1) the majority of gardeners desire to grow sun loving plants in shaded areas, and (2) no two people have the same idea of what constitutes shade in terms of light intensity.

SATISFACTION

The first of these is a problem most difficult to overcome. The owner of a shaded garden often buys such a property for the amenities afforded by shade, but desires to grow plants that produce a mass of color to enliven the surroundings.

This is plain incompatibility, and the problem will never be overcome to his complete satisfaction.

The second factor would be less of a problem if we could get away from the word "shade" and substitute definite values of light intensity.

Amateur photographers know that the clarity of a picture depends on intensity of light that strikes the sensitized film. For successful photos they use a light meter to determine light intensity and they adjust the aperture of the camera accordingly.

Plants are comparable to sensitized film. They manufacture the complex foods needed for their existence from simple chemicals obtained from air and soil with the aid of chlorophyl (green coloring matter in leaves) and light.

Whether a plant manages to manufacture sufficient food for a healthy existence depends on its being in the intensity of light best suited to its manufacturing abilities.

To know the degree of shade in any given spot we need a light meter such as used by photographers, and to determine the plants most suited we need extensive investigation into the reaction of cultivated plants to various degrees of light.

There is no reason why a suitable light meter for gardeners could not be produced for a dollar or so, and no doubt such meters would soon be available if a demand existed.

RELIABLE LISTING

A reliable listing of plants and their response to varying degrees of light would entail several years of carefully recorded investigations, and considerable research into existing records.

This is work that could, and should, be carried out by home gardeners, either as individual investigators, or in groups with an aim at collecting and correlating all relevant findings and guiding the members in their research.

Until we have such information in a usable form for the home gardener, our ability to guess at plants likely to succeed in a shaded area will remain a hit-and-miss proposition.

SIMPLE MATTER

While it is a simple matter to list plants that prefer shade to sun, we cannot solve the problem of what plant will do best in a given spot by writing a book on shade loving plants.

It all boils down to the fact that it is impossible for me, or any other gardening consultant, to advise by mail or over the telephone, a suitable plant for a given shady location.

The home gardener must either learn the different plants and their light preferences by study or from years of experimenting, or enlist the services of a professional who will view the area and weigh the conditions.

And that brings in another factor to be considered. Many plants will thrive in light that is not of optimum intensity providing other conditions approximate the ideal.

This is why a plant will succeed in one garden and languish in another although light intensity appears equal.

Tips for Home Garden

WEEK'S WORK

Outdoor planters and tubs now emptied of summer plants, should be filled with miniature ivies, variegated euonymus, winter heathers, and winter blooming bulbs.

If soil not too wet and sticky, plant new hedges of berberis, lonicera, privet and laurel.

Lily bulbs usually available in November. Must be planted at once to prevent drying of scales. If outdoor soil is too sticky, plant bulbs in large pots, or large tin containers, and keep in cold, light place until possible to transfer to garden.

Gather fallen leaves, put into chicken wire enclosure with soil scattered through, and tramp down.

Any half hardy plants still outdoors should be given shelter, or have it immediately available if needed.

In well drained soil, chrysanthemums can be cut down, divided and replanted. Special varieties will need usual method of lifting and wintering in coldframe.

QUIZZING THE GARDENER

By JACK BEASTALL

Q. Can you tell me name of shrub with thick leaves, green and gold markings? I see them in many public gardens, in winter as well as summer and would like to grow them in my garden if they are suitable for an amateur. Thanks for help to newcomer, Victoria.

A. Several green and gold variegated shrubs grow easily here and certainly are lovely during winter.

Thick leaved ones are Aucuba japonica variegata, with leaves up to six inches long, smooth edges, gold markings are usually dotted on green as well as patches.

This shrub will grow in full shade as well as sun. Ultimate height to around six feet and as much across.

Another with thick leaves is Elaeagnus pungens aurea, leaves up to three inches long, wavy edges, gold markings irregular splashes, does well in sun or partial sun. Ultimate height, slowly to six feet and more across.

This is better of the two, for cutting as indoor decoration as well as general usefulness in garden. Both are easily grown and readily obtainable under the names given.

Unitarians Set Up Alcorn Fund

Victoria Unitarian Church has set up a building fund in the name of Dr. Douglas E. Alcorn, well-known city psychiatrist and surgeon who died in the Veterans' Hospital last Saturday.

Donations to the fund will go to the construction of a Unitarian Church building in which there will be a memorial library and meditation room named after Dr. Alcorn.

Dr. Alcorn was co-founder of the Unitarian Church with Magistrate John Hall of Victoria. Pending construction of a church building, the congregation meets in the Servetus Hall, 106 Superior Street.

WILMOT

'FITTING MEMORIAL'

The minister, Arthur D. Wilmot, said Dr. Alcorn often expressed the hope that the church should have a building of its own—preferably in the vicinity of the University of Victoria.

"We feel therefore that this would be a fitting memorial to him," Mr. Wilmot said.

Mr. Wilmot conducted funeral services for Dr. Alcorn in Metropolitan United Church Thursday afternoon. More than 450 men and women from various church denominations attended.

"Besides being an internationally-known psychiatrist, Dr. Alcorn was a deeply religious and scholarly man and he befriended a great many people."

The minister recalled that in 1950 Dr. Alcorn founded the Liberal Religious Fellowship in Victoria. This was the forerunner of the present Unitarian Church.

"Those who knew Dr. Alcorn would agree, I'm sure, that a flourishing, meaningful Unitarian Church in Victoria would be the greatest honor we could give him."

Donations to the Alcorn Building Fund should be sent to P.O. Box 43, Victoria.

Special Mass Set For Saanich RCs

A mass for all Roman Catholics living in the Saanich Peninsula will be held in Saanichton Agricultural Hall Sunday at 11 a.m.

It will be celebrated by Rev. William Mudge, pastor of Saanich Peninsula parish, and Rev. John Zuyderwijk of St. Andrew's Cathedral.

Father Zuyderwijk is a leading member of the liturgical committee of the diocese of Greater Victoria. Since June 1967, he has visited all parishes and missions of Vancouver Island answering questions and encouraging implementation of the new liturgy.

MODERN MUSIC

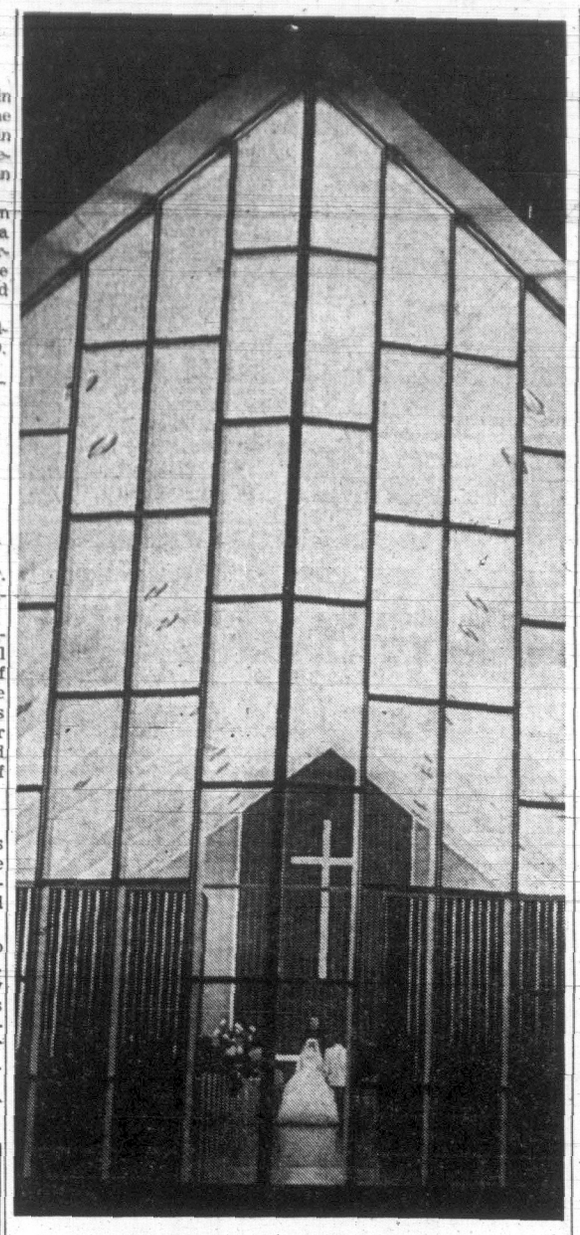

Among the subjects he has discussed with parishioners are mass in the vernacular, participation by the congregation and modern music in church.

Father Zuyderwijk came to Canada from Holland in 1920. He completed courses in liturgy and music at St. Michael's College, Toronto, and the University of Windsor, and later conducted the choir at St. Joseph's Seminary, Edmonton.

He has resided on Vancouver Island since 1967.

Church Union Talk

Anglican and United Church members will discuss the proposed union between the two churches at a public meeting in Centennial United Church Wednesday at 8 p.m. The discussion will be led by Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley of Fairfield United and Canon Charles Bishop of St. George's Anglican Church, Cadboro Bay.

The Modern St. Aidan's Church

Old but New Church Marks Anniversary

From a mere handful of people in 1873, St. Aidan's Church at the corner of Richmond and Cedar Hill Cross Road has grown to a congregation of some 650 families.

Now housed in an ultra-modern building, the church will celebrate its 95th anniversary Sunday.

St. Aidan's began as an outreach of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church into the Saanich Peninsula in 1873 when Rev. James MacGregor, the St. Andrew's minister, began conducting Sunday school in the Cedar Hill schoolhouse.

This witness continued for 21 years.

In 1894, the congregation achieved separate status when Rev. R. J. Murison was inducted as first minister of the newly-designated St. Aidan's Presbyterian Church.

The first church building was dedicated on Nov. 18, 1894, and with a succession of ministers and laymen the congregation has served the community ever since.

In 1925, the congregation voted to unite with the Congregational and Methodist churches and became St. Aidan's United.

The church building underwent a major renovation in 1934 during the ministry of Rev. H. J. Armitage, who now lives in retirement in Victoria.

ROUND CAPE HORN

At that time, the Sir Richard McBride stained glass windows—brought from England many years before in a sailing ship round Cape Horn—were installed and dedicated.

With the rapid growth in population, the sanctuary became inadequate and, for some years, the congregation met in the church hall which offered greater seating accommodation.

The rate of growth continued and, in 1960, during the ministry of Rev. A. E. Avery, the present church building, seating 500, was erected and dedicated.

Guest speaker at the 11 a.m. anniversary service will be Rev. Bruce Molloy, associate minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian. His subject will be With Fife and Drum.

Marion Campbell and Marjorie Sturgeon will sing the duet O Love Divine.

At 7:30 p.m. the minister, Rev. A. G. MacLeod, will speak on What Is Freedom?

Church Youth Plan Walk

PORT ALBERNI — A walkathon to raise funds for Biafran relief will start from MacMillan Park Sunday at 10 a.m.

More than 100 young people from many Alberni Valley churches are planning to walk over the high hump and down again into the valley, ending at city hall — a distance of more than 12 miles.

Local businessmen have agreed to pay $10 if their walker completes the tough mileage, or 80 cents a mile for every mile completed.

Walkers who can find sponsors may register by telephoning 724-4392.

Film to Depict Israel's Birth

Let My People Go—a documentary film depicting the birth of the state of Israel—will be shown in the Sanscha Hall, Sidney, Tuesday at 8 p.m.

The free public showing is sponsored by Victoria Christadelphian Church, 901 Kings Road, as a follow-up to the church's recent campaign for Advancement of Scriptural Knowledge.

NEWS FROM CITY CHURCHES

Anglican Friar To Speak Here

An Anglican Franciscan friar from Australia will preach in Christ Church Anglican Cathedral Sunday at 9:30 and 11 a.m.

Brother Geoffrey of the Order of St. Francis went to New Guinea from England in 1959 and started the Franciscan life among primitive peoples.

He established a friary for both white and dark brothers, a training college, two churches, a primary school and a hotel.

This past week he has conducted a diocesan retreat for priests and clergy at St. Mary's Priory, Colwood.

Brother Geoffrey will speak in St. Matthias Church, Richmond and Richardson, Sunday at 7:30 p.m., and at All Saints, View Royal, Monday at the same time.

Wednesday at 2 p.m. he'll speak at the Ganges Anglican rectory.

He will be at Port Alberni Friday, and will then visit Campbell River, Courtenay, Comox and Nanaimo.

Why do most ministers stay with the church? Why do so many leave it?

These questions will be discussed by a panel of four ministers in Metropolitan United Church Sunday evening. The ministers are Rev. H. Irving Hare, base chaplain at HMCS Naden; Rev. Albert King, Rev. Laura Butler and Rev. Robert Moses.

Byron Hoskings, tenor, will give the solo, O Lord Most Holy, and the Sanctuary Choir, directed by Frank Tupman, will lead the singing.

At the morning worship, Mr. King will speak on Watchtowers and Telstars and the choir will present the anthem, The Lord's My Shepherd (arr. Mueller).

★ ★ ★

Who believes today in the divinity of Jesus?

Very Rev. J. Lewis McLean will deal with the question in his sermon at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church Sunday at 11 a.m.

At the 7 p.m. evensong, Rev. Bruce Molloy will conduct the service and speak on The Responsibility of Privilege.

The choir, directed by Cecil Warren, will sing A Morning Prayer and Beloved Now Are We. Georgina Harper will be soloist.

★ ★ ★

Continuing his series of sermons on Great Themes from the Bible, Rev. Robert Morris will speak on Jacob's Struggle in the Dark.

Elizabeth Riddell will share in the conduct of the service, and the choir will present the anthem, How Excellent (Handel), with Paul Wharf as soloist.

In the chapel at 7:30 p.m., there will be a panel discussion on Freedom and Authority in Education.

★ ★ ★

Man's Thoughts Are His Only Salvation.

The subject will be discussed by Rev. Emma Smiley in Victoria Truth Centre Sunday at 11 a.m.

In the evening, her subject will be Life with a New Meaning.

There will be a healing ministry in the church on Tuesday at 3 p.m.

Eskimos Get Crash Course

INUVIK, N.W.T. (CP) — The federal medical services division is training Eskimos and Indians to act as emergency "doctors" in their remote settlements.

Called lay dispensers, they take a five-week "crash course" in the hospital at this settlement 1,200 miles northwest of Edmonton.

When they're finished, the natives are ready to give pills, injections and emergency treatments, and perform basic medical examinations. Thus far it has proven "very satisfactory."

"A few of the settlements are 300 miles from the nearest nurse—let alone a doctor," said Dr. H. B. Brett, director of the Mackenzie area of federal medical services.

RADIO FOR HELP

A few have telephone contact with populated areas. Others are in touch with the outside world only by radio and occasional bush planes.

The lay dispensers are given a supply of drugs, replenished annually, and a basic medical manual.

When a native comes for help, they check the symptoms in the manual. For minor illnesses, they may prescribe treatment. But many times they radio for advice.

"Instead of trying to radio out all the symptoms, they just look them up in the manual and radio the chapter number and verse," Dr. Brett said.

"Then the nurse or doctor at the other end of the line radios back the treatment.

"It saves a lot of garbling of long messages back and forth."

The first course was offered to about eight Eskimos at Inuvik. The next class, which will include Indians as well as Eskimos, will be held this winter or early next spring.

Rev. Hill and the Flying Angel

For the Sailor, A Little Warmth

By ED GOULD

CHEMAINUS — Aside from a small amount of money and a great deal of enthusiasm, the only tangible asset the new Missions to Seamen branch here has right now is its Flying Angel.

The Flying Angel is the attractive blue and white flag which flies over every boat, institute or activity connected with the Anglican Church's Missions to Seamen.

The Flying Angel flag has become so well known it is almost synonymous with the work of the ministry which includes visiting ships, hospital-visiting of sick and injured seamen and entertainment in clubs near the docks.

It seeks to meet all the needs of the seamen by providing recreational facilities for him in port, reading material for him at sea and—if necessary—even providing textbooks for him to continue his education.

SHOPPING TRIPS

Tours and shopping trips are arranged and conducted by volunteer workers from local parishes; spiritual counselling through chaplains and lay readers is available.

All seamen, regardless of faith, receive the benefits of the work.

The Flying Angel operates in some 200 points around the world with 90 of them having full-time chaplains or other workers.

In Canada, they're located in Halifax, Toronto, Hamilton, the Lakehead, Vancouver, North Vancouver and New Westminster.

To start with, the Chemainus Flying Angel will be located in only a small part of the recreation hall planned by the Anglican church.

There'll be a seamen's lounge, a mini-kitchen and a washroom. Recreation facilities in the main hall will be available to the seamen whenever these are not in use by members of the congregation.

A catalogue listing various ethnic groups will be compiled so sailors can meet and speak to people in the area in their own language, says Rev. W. J. Hill.

Another innovation will be the establishment of a shuttle bus service to get sailors from their ships at Crofton to the seamen's lounge in Chemainus and back again.

"We'll also have copies of their own magazines and newspapers and a radio and television set for their use."

The Chemainus undertaking has been endorsed by Archbishop Harold Sexton and the secretary of the diocese who granted $2,000 to the building fund project. Another $800 was raised by the church's own youth group.

Canon Stanley Smith, senior chaplain of Missions to Seamen, has also lent assistance and advice, Rev. Hill said.

Reverend Hill says the Flying Angel will offer seamen who come to this area from all parts of the world an alternative to just staying on board their ships or going to the beer parlor.

"There isn't much else to do," he said. But the religious aspects will be underplayed.

"Most of all, our objective is to be of service to these boys away from home."

Yule Bonus, Elections, Youths Hold Spotlight

By JIM HUME
City Hall Reporter

Let's hope Victoria city council can find some way to raise the cash to increase the $10 per family Christmas bonus for welfare recipients.

Hume

It won't be easy. With the year fast running out, and the budget committed, extra funds are hard to find.

But if there ever was a case for scraping hard to find a bundle of dollar bills, surely this is it.

Ald. Hugh Ramsay, who retires from council at the end of the year, made a good point in council Thursday when he suggested that a $10 bonus for a family of six was pretty insignificant.

On the other hand the total contribution at $10 per family and $4 for the individual on welfare comes high at $14,000.

Of that total the provincial government pays 80 per cent, the municipality 20 per cent. Unfortunately there is no provision for the provincial authorities to share any portion of the cost if the city boosts the $10 and $4 basic bonus.

And that, of course, is where the rub comes in.

Assistant-to-the-city-manager Bill Hooson has been charged with the duty of finding exactly how much an extra payment of $4 per person to replace the $10 per family would cost.

Livelier Election

With four council seats vacant and five contestants to date we could be in for one of our more lively non-mayoralty elections.

Two incumbents, Ald. Cecil Parrott and Ald. Percy Frampton, are being challenged by three rookies in the form of Ove Witt, Joe Richards and Harold Olafson.

Of Mr. Richards we know little as yet. Of Mr. Witt and Mr. Olafson we know enough to believe that both or either one would fill their aldermanic chairs well.

The Olafson announcement came as no surprise. Readers will recall the forecast was made in the Times some weeks ago that the bluff ex-RCAF flyer would emerge as one of the contestants.

His announcement did achieve one thing. It laid to rest, for this year at least, an 11-month-old prophecy that Michael J. Griffin would seek re-election to council this year and take a run at the vacant mayor's chair a year from now.

Mike, still remembered as one of the city's better aldermen, will not run against Harold Olafson, a friend of long standing. And that isn't a forecast, just a statement of fact.

That still leaves Eric Charman as a possible late entry. Mr. Charman has told close friends that (a) he's thinking of running, (b) he definitely will not be running, and (c) he and a few friends may have a surprise for Victoria some time next week.

All of which is about par for the Charman course.

We'll just wait and see, but perhaps not as breathlessly as Mr. Charman might think.

Civic Bouquets

Bouquets this week are due Mayor Hugh Stephen, Ald. Clyde Savage, youth workers John Durkin and Chuck Tyler and the city bobbies working on the youth squad.

They still have a long way to go before they even approach a solution to the problems of youth, but they have made a fine start and deserve all the support the community can give them.

The first signs of open progress were noticed two or three weeks ago in Centennial Square.

Not too many months back a collection of long-haired lads and bead-decked girls was enough to draw suspicious looks from policemen and a gruff "don't loiter" warning.

Today it isn't at all unusual to see a young policeman standing chatting with the youngsters on a friendly basis. As a matter of fact, some of the kids have stated quite openly that they look forward to their visits from and talks with the once-despised "fuzz."

Police Chief Jack Gregory chose his men well.

The ball game hasn't been won yet, unless some of the youngsters start interpreting the desire to communicate as a sign of permissive weakness, Victoria could be well on the way to setting an example to the rest of Canada.

ALD. RAMSAY
... plays Santa

Not that it is the only municipality in the country, or even on Vancouver Island, to take a stab at getting to know the kids better.

Saanich took the spotlight some time ago when its policemen decided that if cops and kids got to know each other better there might be a breakthrough to a sounder relationship and more mutual understanding.

The Saanich Police Organization for Teens—SPOT as it is more familiarly known—has proved a fantastic success.

Now if Esquimalt and Oak Bay will just shake off their complacency and join the group we might just be well on the way to building a sounder over-all community.

Or would the noise of a teenage dance be too loud for dear old Oak Bay council?

Mennonite Husband, Wife Promote Home Bible Studies

There is a great need for men and women to investigate the Bible and learn what it has to teach, says John Baerg of Victoria.

Mr. Baerg and his wife, Evelyn, are part of a mission by the Mennonite Brethren Church to promote neighborhood home Bible studies and action (discussion) groups.

"Many people are unwilling to enter a church because of previous experiences," said Mr. Baerg. "But they have a desire to inquire about God and Jesus and to learn of His teachings.

"Our purpose, in the action groups, is to expose people to what the Bible teaches and the daily effect it has on our lives."

Mr. Baerg was trained at the Mennonite Bible College in Winnipeg and then became an active layman in the Vancouver area.

Recently, he took additional training in evangelism among lay people at Campus Crusade for Christ, Calif.

Mr. Baerg is now serving as a special representative of that organization on Vancouver Island. He is particularly interested in a Crusade for Christ Club on the campus of the University of Victoria.

He recalls that Arnold Toynbee once said:

"Man has not rejected Christ, but a caricature of Him.

"Our purpose," Mr. Baerg says, "is to present Christ in the quiet and comfort of the home atmosphere and permit people to make their own value judgments about what they hear and learn.

"People who do not know Christ in a personal way have a sense of being defrauded."

Tender Selected On Fraser Bridge

A bid of $2.711 million, by Northern Construction Co. and J. W. Stewart, Ltd., was the lowest of seven submitted Thursday on a contract for construction of the substructure of the proposed Fraser River bridge at Mission, B.C., in the Fraser Valley.

Other bids ranged close to $7 million said highways department officials, who indicated construction will likely begin before the end of the year.

Total cost of the span has been estimated at $15 million.

Priest Drops Collar For Broker's Life

VANCOUVER (CP) — His preaching had stressed the dictum "know thyself."

And Rev. George Stegan decided at the age of 39 to practise what he preached.

He left his upper-income-bracket congregation at Winnipeg's St. George's Anglican Church in September and moved to Vancouver where he now is a trainee in a brokerage house.

Searching for the words to express his reasons for leaving the church, Mr. Stegan said that within the church he was "a lot better off" than most clergy he knew.

But during the last four years his thoughts on leaving the church grew.

"In that time I became increasingly aware of the limitations imposed on me in my role as a cleric," he said. "It seemed to stand in the way of my communicating with people."

Finally he made his decision. In a letter of resignation to his parishioners he said his preaching had emphasized the importance of self-knowledge — and the importance of acting on that knowledge.

"I would be less than honest if I continued to operate within the restrictions I feel in my job as priest," the letter said.

He had been a minister for 14 years, and he admitted that "it is not easy for a man in his forties to make a fresh start. . . ."

Without renouncing his priesthood, he renounced his old way of life.

"Leaders in the church seem convinced that the church is like an old car that can be souped up and made to run like a new model.

"But the church has gone beyond the souping-up stage. What we need is a new vehicle."

He said he still considers himself a priest, but would like to exercise his ministry in a non-parochial way.

Mr. Stegan said he considers himself fortunate to have found the brokerage position, and admits that money fascinates him—not so much the making of it, but the manipulating of it.

"In all my 15 years in the ministry I was constantly exposed to money," he said, "but I never really understood its principle."

Hunger Strike Ended

BERKELEY, Calif (AP)—Two University of California student leaders have ended an 18-day diet of fruit juices and water—a hunger strike they hoped would dramatize their demand for greater student voice in school policy.

Cardinal Bea Dies at 87

ROME (UPI) — Cardinal Augustin Bea, the Roman Catholic church's chief spokesman for Christian unity and a world renowned Bible scholar, died Friday. He was 87.

Bea was considered one of the major figures of modern Roman Catholicism. He was one of the late Pope John XXIII's closest collaborators in planning the Vatican's Ecumenical Council and in getting Protestant Orthodox and other non-Catholic churches to send observers to the historic gathering.

UNIVERSITY CONCERT TO FEATURE ORGAN

An organ recital by Dr. Gerald Hendrie, head of University of Victoria School of Fine Arts music division, will be presented Tuesday evening at St. John's Anglican Church.

This is the third in the series of evening concerts arranged by the music division.

Dr. Hendrie's program includes a work of his own entitled Statements 1968.

Concerning it, he comments: "I wrote Statements 1968 this summer and dedicated it to my wife Dinah and son, Piers. The work was, in fact, a kind of Siegfried Idyll written for my wife to celebrate the birth of our first child."

Other works on his program include two Fantasias and two Preludes by Orlando Gibbons, the C minor Passacaglia and Fugue by Bach and two pieces by the 20th century French composer, Olivier Messiaen.

Teachers to Probe Student Freedom

Student freedom in the modern school will be discussed by a panel of teachers at First United Church Sunday at 8 p.m.

Under the chairmanship of Gertrude Patmore, the teachers will consider such questions as:

- How much student freedom is compatible with the efficient running of a modern complex school?
- To what extent can "doing their own thing" contribute to student learning?
- What is the relationship between academic freedom and social freedom in education?
- What kinds of discipline are appropriate in the school setting?

STUDENTS INVITED

Contributing to the discussion will be Don Smith, principal of Esquimalt Junior Secondary School; Robert Hunter, principal, Reynolds Road Junior Secondary; Mrs. Ann Spicer, Norfolk House School for Girls, and Sam Le Baron, Craigdarroch Free School.

A group of school students have been invited to hear the panel and then give their reactions.

"An open discussion will follow," says Len Lythgoe, education director at First United Church. "We hope as many people as possible will participate and make this a very worthwhile discussion."

Stamp News On Hawaii

By ROBERT G. OLIPHANT

Last week I presented a brief philatelic and historical outline of the Hawaiian Islands from 1778 to 1874. Today, I conclude this outline with Hawaii 1874 to 1959: the downfall of the monarchy to the formation of the U.S. state.

In review here are the dates of rule of the monarchs of Hawaii to 1874: Kamehameha I (1795-1819), Kamehameha II (1819-23), Kamehameha III (1825-54), Kamehameha IV (1855-63), Kamehameha V (1863-72), and William Lunalilo (1873-74).

In February, 1874, David Kalakaua was elected king of Hawaii. He strove for a Hawaii for Hawaiians, but it was in fact for a backward Hawaii. This is illustrated by his influence over the organization of the Hale Naua Society in 1886 for the spread of idolatry and king-worship. Six Hawaiian stamps bear his portrait; the first one appeared in 1875.

●

In 1882, three postal cards, each bearing a different printed stamp design, were issued; 1c, the king's sister; 2c, view of Diamond Head, and 3c, royal emblems. In 1889, the one-cent value was re-issued.

In 1883, two different paid reply postal cards came out. They were printed with the same designs as the stamps on the one-cent and two-cent postal cards of 1882. In 1889, these two value were re-issued in other colors.

In 1884, nine pre-stamped envelopes of one design were issued. This stamp depicts a vew of Honolulu Harbor.

On Jan. 20, 1891, King Kalakaua died, and on Jan. 29 his sister, Mrs. John Dominis (1838-1917) became ruler as Queen Lydia Liliuokalani. (She was the author of the famous song Aloha Oe.) In 1890, a two-cent violet stamp had been issued to honor her, and in 1891, a five-cent indigo stamp of the same design was released.

●

Queen Liliuokalani attempted to abolish certain reforms which her brother had been forced to make, and in 1893 she was deposed. A provisional government was formed, and Sanford Ballard Dole (1844-1926) was chosen as president.

In 1893, 23 Hawaiian stamps were overprinted "Provisional Govt. 1893." Five of the envelopes of 1884, and the three postal cards of 1882 were similarly overprinted.

On July 4, 1894, the Republic of Hawaii was proclaimed with Dole as president. The same year, the republic issued six stamps and two postal cards. The stamps feature: 1c, the Hawaiian coat of arms; 2c, view of Honolulu; 5c, Kamehameha's statue; 10c, star and palms; 12c, the Ss. Arawa; and 25c, portrait of President Sanford B. Dole.

●

The printed stamp on the one-cent postal card features Iolani Palace and the Hawaiian flag and coat of arms. The stamp on the two-cent postal card features a map of the Pacific Ocean.

In 1896, six official stamps all featuring a portrait of Lorrin Andrews Thurston were issued. Meanwhile, on Aug. 12, 1898, the United States under President William McKinley annexed Hawaii. Sanford B. Dole became the first governor. In 1899, the one-cent and two-cent stamps of 1894 were issued in new colors. The five-cent value of the 1894 series was also reissued (1899) in another color, but in a slightly different design. In 1900, Hawaii was formally constituted as a U.S. territory.

President Eisenhower proclaimed Hawaii to be the 50th state of the United States of America on Aug. 21, 1959. On this same day, a U.S. seven-cent airmail was issued to commemorate this occasion.

●

Canada released on Nov. 1 a six-cent pictorial in an extension of the 1967 Centennial one-cent to five-cent definitives. This stamp is of the same size as the latter, and the common features are similar, but it was perforated 10. A slightly retouched portrait of the Queen, and several modes of transportation are featured. This engraved stamp was printed in panes of 100 in a golden-orange color.

On Nov. 12, Canada issued a black and brown six-cent Christmas stamp. The design is similar to the five-cent Christmas stamp which was issued Nov. 1. The black carving on this adhesive is of an Eskimo woman stirring in a bowl, a baby on her back. This issue was designed and printed by the Canadian Bank Note Co., Ottawa, by two-color photogravure, in panes of 100. Some of these stamps were tagged.

The Bhutan Stamp Agency Ltd. issued on Nov. 12 three circular gold foil stamps to honor International Human Rights Year. The values are: 15 ch, 33 ch and 9 nu.

Not Flying Nun, It's Peter Pan

You have to be able to fly as well as act . . . at least this applies to some of the cast of Peter Pan, Bastion Theatre's next major production, opening Dec. 26 at the McPherson Playhouse.

Heading the large cast in the Mary Martin musical version of Peter Pan are Margaret Martin in the title role, Bill Hosie as the arch-villain Captain Hook, and Rosalind Scott as Wendy.

Hugh Henderson will play Mr. Darling, and Doreen Crook will be Mrs. Darling.

SHEEPDOG

Although Mr. Henderson's old English sheepdog, Ramona, with whom he appeared in Camelot last Christmas, wanted to audition for Nana, the part went to Anne Crawford, currently the Fairy Godmother in Cinderella at McPherson Playhouse.

John and Michael Darling are played by Martin Screech and Martin Richards respectively, and Robin Porteous has the role of the little maid, Liza.

Popular comedian Ian McIntyre, also currently appearing in Cinderella as one of the Ugly Sisters, plays Captain Hook's right-hand pirate, Smee. Madeline Ponich is cast as Indian Princess Tiger Lily, with other dancers of the Wynn Shaw Dance Studio as Indians.

With pirates, lost boys, trees and, of course, a crocodile, Peter Pan's large cast will total about 42.

Director is Peter Mannering, with Marge Adelberg as musical-director and Howard Denike as conductor.

Sale of gift certificates is expected to be brisk, and these are available now in every price range from Bastion Theatre, 1840 Blanshard Street, telephone 382-4112.

Turtles Earn Hero Medals

By AL FORREST

The biggest show business celebrities of the week are the Russian turtles who became the first earthlings to get a close-up look at the moon.

They returned safely, and while there are no ticker tape parades planned or even a round of TV interviews, the four-legged cosmonauts are certainly in line for hero medals.

One can picture them as they stood on the launching pad all smiles, a credit to their race, waiting for the final countdown that boosted them into history.

"10 . . . 9 . . . 8 . . . 7 . . . 6."

Standing nearby is the cafe owner Ivan who gallantly donated the creatures to a higher purpose than turtle soup.

". . . 5 . . . 4 . . . 3 . . . 2 . . ."

"Okay!" shouts Ivan, "two turtles to go!"

". . . 1 . . . zero! Blastoff!"

And up, up, away they go to their rendezvous with history, leaving the Americans far behind.

If the U.S. had known, they could have launched a couple of rabbits in hopes of overtaking them . . . or at least outnumbering them.

But alas! The turtles slipped away without fanfare and coasted around the moon.

One hopes no moon-men spotted them and catalogued the turtles as earth's brightest creatures, although at that moment the turtles were in fact earth's highest form of life.

No one in the Western world is certain why the Russians selected turtles for the historic trip but one theory goes that a Russian commandant walked into the animal compound and asked for volunteers—and everybody scattered.

The only creatures he could catch were our heroic friends Muttski and Jeffski.

And thus, upon such minor happenstance are events of great magnitude launched.

The North American man-in-the-street was quick to grasp the significance of the moon mission.

"Say," a reporter shouted, "did you hear that the Russians sent two turtles around the moon."

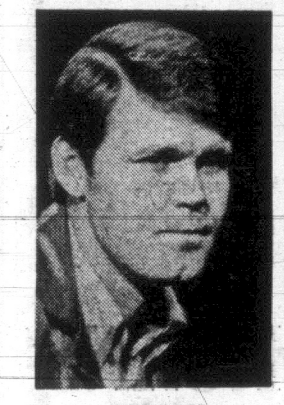

"Oh," said a woman preoccupied with her shopping list, "was there anybody in them?"

Another man commented: "Turtles, aye? And the Americans had us believing that the moon trip was duck soup."

And so the excitement spread from street to street.

And passers-by on the street scanned the heavens nervously wondering what else the Russians had up in space . . . pigeons, maybe, or perhaps even an elephant.

The last word came from a citizen who thoughtfully rubbed the shoulder of his suit jacket and said: "The Russians have done it again!"

The list is growing of TV shows that won't survive the January cancellations.

Peyton Place cuts back to one episode per week in January and could go off the air entirely in April.

Phyllis Diller is finished, to be replaced in January by My Friend Tony, a police series with James Whitmore and Rose Marie.

Daktari is kaput in January and talented western singer Glen Campbell takes over the time slot.

Another mid-season arrival is singer Tom Jones. The exit sign is flashing for the Don Rickles Show, Peter Kastner's The Ugliest Girl in the World—that show's a real drag—and Felony Squad.

Meanwhile George Schlatter and Ed Friendly who put together the Rowan and Martin show will add a Negro laugh-in called Soul plus another sock-it-to-me program called Cockamamie.

Saul Ilson, a Canadian making it big in Hollywood, is putting together a satirical variety show called What's It All About, World?

It will replace Journey to the Unknown.

Negro stars will get many featured roles on TV in January thanks in part to the phenomenal success of Diahann Carroll in Julia.

Members of Parliament who kick up a storm every time a naughty word is spoken on CBC will be in a bit of a quandary with the next Quentin Durgens program Tuesday night.

A farmer will tell Quentin that he saw a flying saucer "as clear as the tits on a Jersey 20 feet away"

That's everyday talk for a farmer but not for city folks and it will be interesting to see if TV can say it with impunity . . . or if I can, for that matter.

THIS IS MY BAG says Jack Benny, who hosts a special at 10 p.m. tonight on Channel 5. Jack plays The Graduate in a satire on the swinging 1967 movie. The satire features a revamped version of the movie's hit song Mrs. Robinson.

FOLKLORE OF HIS HOMELAND

In addition to the Baroque beauty of the Haydn C major Cello Concerto (discovered in 1961), this Sunday and Monday's Victoria Symphony guest artist, Karine Georgian, will play a composition by her great compatriot, Khatchaturian.

Music of the Armenian composer who himself studied the cello early in his musical career, strongly reflects the folklore of his native area.

The Concerto for Cello and Orchestra was composed in 1950.

Laszlo Gati will conduct and will open the concert with a Passacaglia on a Bach Chorale by Canadian composer, Oscar Morawetz.

Diamond In the Groove

By BERYL PROUDMAN

Songs of Leonard Cohen; Columbia CS 9533.

According to an explanatory note on this record, these arrangements and Leonard Cohen's songs were prevented from marrying by a blood feud.

To me, it seems as though the songs and musical arrangements were made for one another, and the problems arise when one tries to separate and evaluate the poems divorced from their musical consorts.

Most of the lyrics are fitted into their frameworks in such a way that words are drawn out or bunched up to suit the melody line, so that they lack the swing and poetic flow of verse rhythms when read unaccompanied.

Valid in their poetic contents, these songs have a far better chance of being heard by the multitude in this guise than they would have done had they been recorded as poetry readings.

SUGGESTIONS

Few of them offer positive suggestions for fuller understanding or enjoyment of life. Most are concerned with the dilemma of a generation, seeking, questioning, unsure.

"With one hand on a suicide
And one hand on the rose."

With bull's-eye aim, the young poet-iconoclast breaks down false idols and jolts us into an analytical awareness, but offers no cure for the world's sickness.

Tendrils of transitory love encounters, flowers and children offer temporary refuges but most of the songs have a mouth-drooping negative air, well-supported by the nerve-pounding thrumming of the music and accentuated by the intoning chant of his singing style.

SOME THOUGHT

Religious allusions and shockingly exciting juxtaposition of images compel the listener to give some thought to each poem's meaning.

References to "Jesus", "wine and bread" — (emphasized by a syncopating pause in the melody), — "a collar of leather and nails", "a Joseph looking for a manger;" all reach for associated connotations in the listener.

Descriptions like "An ape with angel glands Erased the final wisps of pain With the music of — rubber bands." gives pause for thought.

Desparingly cynical is the doctor who "Locked himself in a library shelf With the detailes of our honeymoon." and the hopelessness of the student in "Teachers" is perfectly echoed by the falling cadences and pessimistic tone of the singer.

The "Sisters of Mercy" offer only temporary comfort and the beautifully set "Stranger Song" peoples the world with shelter-seeking strangers.

Leonard Cohen is not a gifted singer but his understanding of his own poems and his sense of rhythmic values, (only occasionally does a hesitation cause him to falter,) makes his performance interesting and authentic.

RARE OCCASIONS

On the rare occasions on which he imitates the shouted yodelling trill of the "pops" singer, he fails to impress.

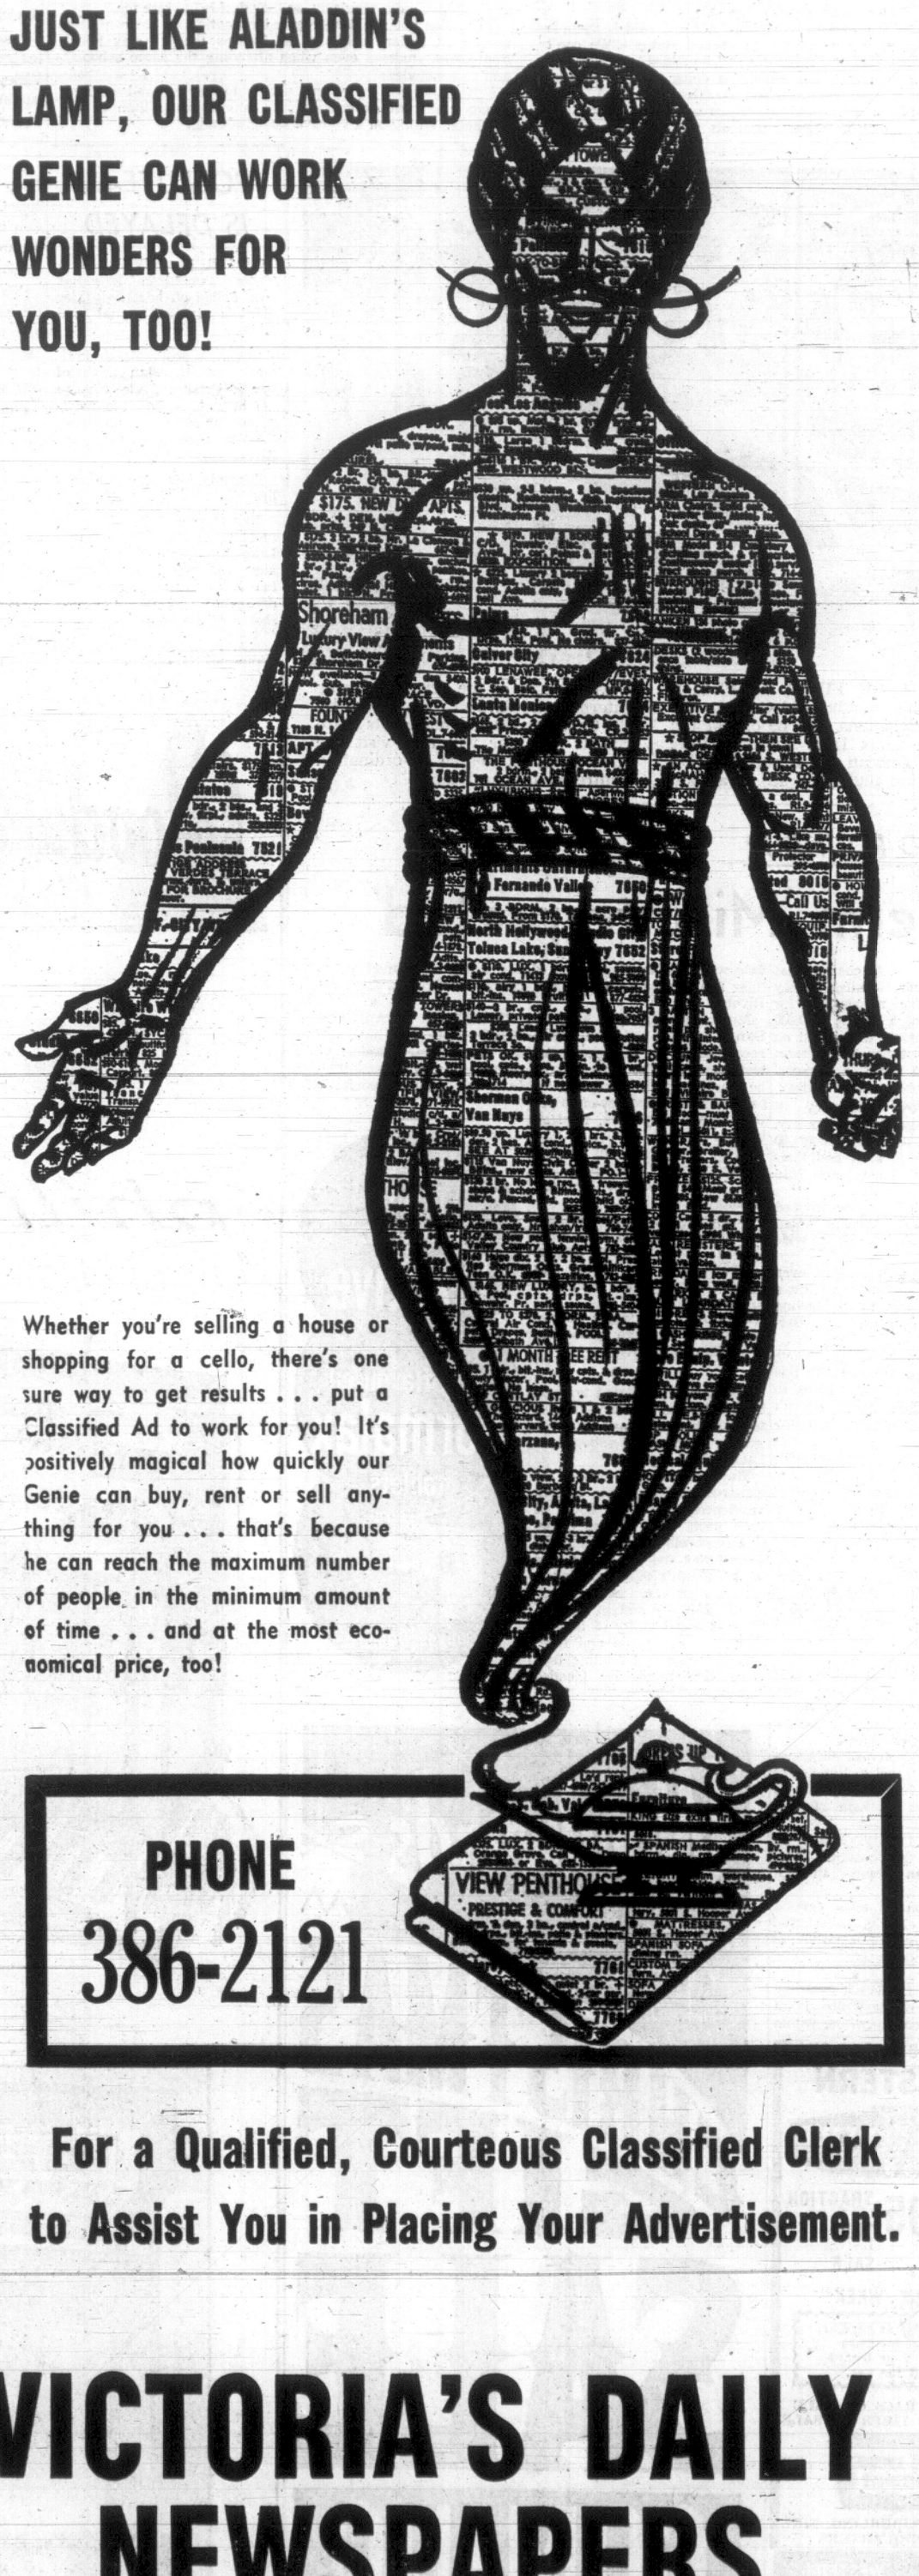

"So Long, Marianne", particularly in the choir-punctuated chorus, comes very near to a modern "pop" song; "Winter Lady" would be far less effective without the drawling western pace at which it is sung, and "Hey, that's no way to say goodbye" depends on the tune to fill out the short lines.

Mr. Cohen's diction is good and even his replacement of "prescription" with the more colloquial "preseription" seems apt.

Record-cutting has left Leonard Cohen unwilling to tape more songs at this time but, fortunately, when this recording was made, more than enough songs were taped and so a second disc of Songs of Leonard Cohen is to be released in the near future.

'Creating Business . . . for Others'

DUNCAN—The Indian affairs department and its $120,000,000 budget should be abolished, and Indians should be granted independence, says Duncan's community development worker, George Manuel.

"We are aliens in our own country, a state within a state," he told his audience during a series of discussions entitled The Contemporary Indian.

"The Indians create a $120,000,000 business in the Indian affairs department and it employs 3,300 people, of whom only about 300 are Indians," he said.

"We are creating pretty nice business for other people."

Mr. Manuel criticized the Indian Act and said his people were the only ones to have such special status—"We don't have a Chinese Act or Japanese Act," he added.

The Indian affairs department is doing what it can, he said, but Indians want controls and shackles to be lifted.

Mr. Manuel advocated the reserve system should be preserved, if only because it protects the older generation, who have neither the income nor the educational qualifications to cope without it.

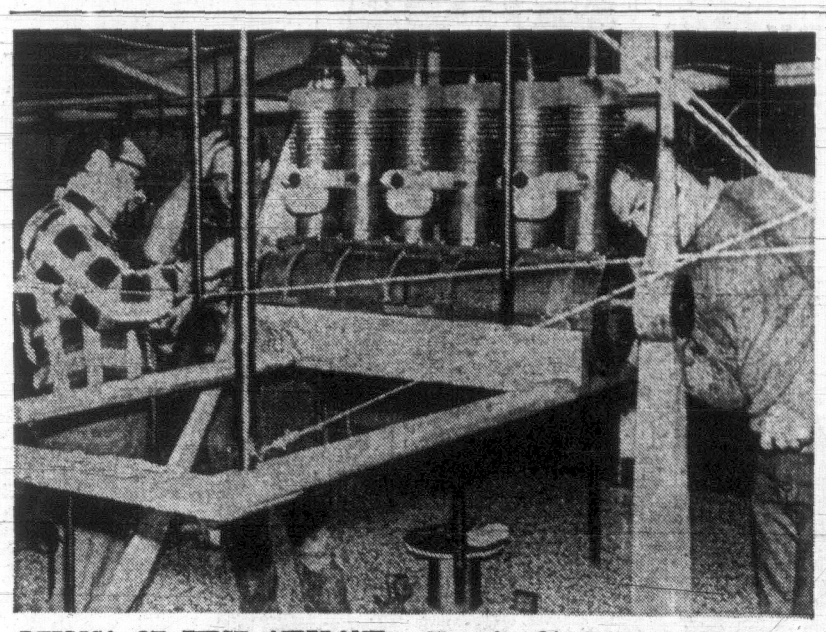

Another aspect he took issue with concerned provincial legislation, which enabled an Indian to be punished for breaking provincial laws yet at the same time prevented him from being eligible to receive provincial services such as social welfare.

Mr. Manuel, an eloquent speaker, explained he had only had two years of formal education himself, at a residential school, where he was forbidden to speak his native tongue.

"At one time," he said, "I used to storm the Indian affairs office quite regularly, so they decided to hire me."

He does not see desegregated education as the complete answer to Indian problems, as Indians tend to stay apart from white students even when attending the same schools, and he concludes:

"It is better for young people to be involved in Red Power and gain experience in a small group than to be apathetic, sitting on a reserve doing nothing."

POLLUTE-IN IS DELAYED

CAMPBELL RIVER — A planned "pollute-in" here has been called off because major officials invited could not attend.

Health Minister Ralph Loffmark and Dr. Allan Austin of the University of Victoria are too busy to attend the meeting, organized by the Pollution Solution Society of Campbell River.

December is now the earliest date it can be held.

Members of the society recently took a trip to Buttle Lake to collect water samples. They said the level was too high to photograph evidence of sludge found on the shores of the lake.

BETTER WARNING SYSTEM

DUNCAN — With a better warning system, more homes could be saved from flood damage from waters of Cowichan Lake and Cowichan River, Alderman John Cannon told the Cowichan Valley regional board.

"Last year we saved about 50 homes in the lower Cowichan Valley by getting sandbaggers out in time," Mr. Cannon said, "but we could do even better with more advance warning."

Lake Cowichan Alderman Herb Halliday assured the board that tide readers at Lake Cowichan would be asked to communicate faster information about water levels.

Fisheries department employees, B.C. Forest Products and forestry officials would be asked to co-ordinate their information for our own public works people, Mr. Halliday said.

Chairman George Whittaker said this would be a good time to find out whether the area is affected by tides and winds as has been suggested in the past, but denied by provincial officials.

Gold River Pact Signed

GOLD RIVER — The Tahsis Co. has agreed to provide credit at a local garage for car owners who use the road to the mill at "a reasonable rate."

The offer came as a result of a dispute on fringe benefits settled Friday.

Members of the Pulp and Paper Workers of Canada ratified the agreement which calls in part for the blacktopping of the road in question. The work is expected to be completed by the highways department early next year.

Negotiations for the Tahsis Co. were carried out by the Pulp and Paper Industrial Relations Bureau.

Credit at the station will cover service and maintenance until the road work is finished.

ISLAND ROUNDUP

Term 'Misinterpreted'

DUNCAN — A charge that Cowichan and Koksilah Valley farmers were responsible for the defeat of a recent $850,000 recreation bylaw was based on a misinterpretation of the term "unorganized area," a farmers' society spokesman said today.

Bill Barker, secretary of Cowichan Agricultural Society, said "there are only about 50 farmers in this area and their voting would have very little influence anyway."

Residents of the unorganized area south of Duncan voted against the bylaw by a wide margin.

"Since this rumor began, even the merchants in town have begun accusing us of having defeated the bylaw," Mr. Barker said.

"The opposite is true. We've been assisting recreation in this area for many years. Being in an unorganized area doesn't necessarily mean you're a farmer."

Pat Rogers, recreation commission chairman, said the commission has held two recent meetings to discuss the cause of the defeat of the bylaw.

"At no time was there any mention of farmers causing the defeat," he said. "We appreciate all the farmers' society has done for the valley and regret that anyone should infer that they were responsible."

In addition to tests carried out on the elderly, widespread testing of school children is currently under way.

CAMPBELL RIVER — Property owners of the Willow Point area near here may vote within four weeks on amalgamation of their fire service with Campbell River.

Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell said he would recommend to the provincial water comptroller that a vote be held after accepting a petition bearing names of 80 per cent of the taxpayers, requesting the merger.

"This is a significant body of public opinion," he said, "and this matter cannot be left unresolved."

The fire service controversy has stood since last year when Willow Point water district trustees, who are inside this municipality, formed their own fire department.

Previously the water district contracted for fire protection from Campbell River.

Pupils Up in Air Over Geography

RED LAKE, Ont. (CP) — For 32 Grade 11 Red Lake students, geography lessons become real when their teacher takes them on flights over the remote Northern Ontario countryside.

Teacher Jerry Rogan, who conceived the idea, said the object of lessons-in-the-air is to help students become acquainted with their environment. He said too often they are more aware of geography in distant places and "lack a background of their own local geography."

PLOT OWN COURSE

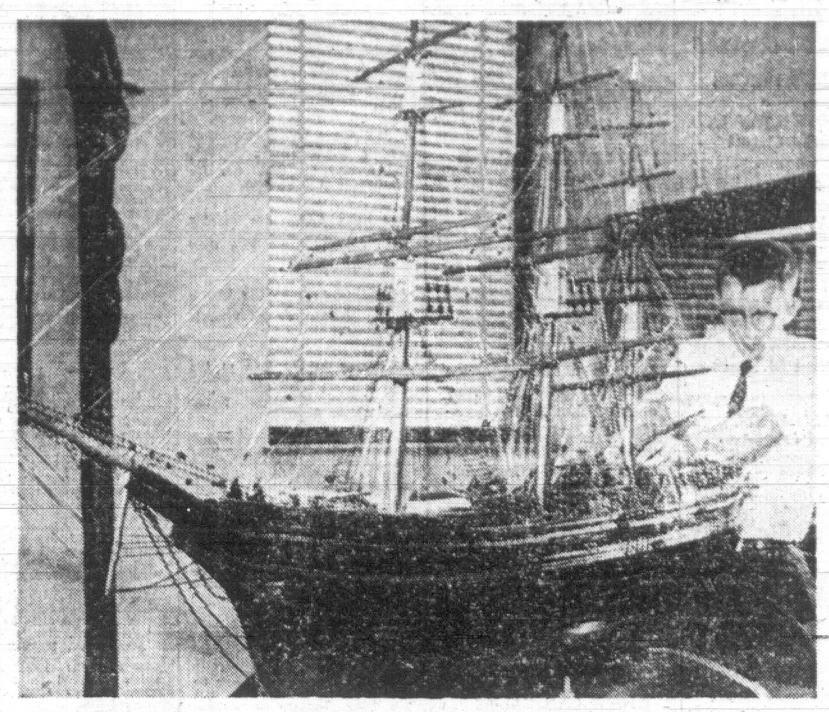

Mr. Rogan has been taking the students, usually seven to nine at a time, on 30 minute flights over the rocky lake country around Red Lake, about 300 miles northwest of Port Arthur.

The students, crowded in the twin-engine Beechcraft airplane, plot their course on a topographical map and answer questions on an assignment sheet.

Half the cost of the flights is paid by the board of education, the other half—about $2.50 each—by the students.

Balanced Budget Aim

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Premier Walter Weir said Friday his administration will aim for a balanced budget next year with no increase in taxes.

Backbenchers Seek Grants for Research

OTTAWA (CP) — The government held out a helping hand to leaders of opposition parties Friday and promptly had its fingers chewed down to the knuckles by back-bench MPs.

The help came in the form of grants to provide research staffs for the leaders of the three opposition parties. The gnashing was over the government's failure to provide all MPs with such assistance and general criticism of government legislative behavior.

Under debate were supplementary estimates of the Commons itself. Under the leaders' research grants, the Conservatives will receive $125,000 a year and the NDP and Creditistes $35,000 apiece.

Prime Minister Trudeau, in announcing the grants, said the money would be earmarked for parliamentary work and non-partisan purposes. The additional staff would be engaged by the Commons Speaker.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said the research staff would have to serve caucus committees as well as leaders. Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre) said the grants are just a beginning.

WILL BOLSTER STAFF

The NDP's $35,000 would hardly allow bolstering of the underpaid staff already working in the office of David Lewis, the party's parliamentary leader.

Creditiste Leader Caouette welcomed the funds but said they would have to be increased. He also wanted a government-paid Air Canada pass as has Mr. Stanfield. Mr. Trudeau had a government aircraft at his disposal and "I have my pass to go to Rouyn once a week."

Debate then swung to broad items of Commons expense, opening the door for wider opposition fire.

Conservative House Leader Gerald W. Baldwin said the government should stop stripping away Commons powers and allow Liberal back-benchers to speak out when they disagree with government decisions.

The debate again touched on the prickly issue of ministerial attendance during the daily question period. A new system calls for limited attendance by ministers on a roster basis.

CRITICIZES SYSTEM

Mr. Baldwin said the scheme has resulted in the opposition being "stonewalled" when it seeks information. Only in the broad light of publicity "are the processes of democracy made useful and effective."

Mr. Baldwin introduced the issue of television coverage of Commons debates. He had opposed such a move in the past but now felt it was time to face the issue.

John Diefenbaker, former prime minister, once again gave solid endorsation to TV coverage of the Commons. If nothing else, the cameras would improve attendance by MPs.

New MPs were discouraged to find their speeches often didn't draw a line of print in the press, he said.

J.-A Mongrain (L—Trois-Rivieres) did not agree. He was concerned that TV coverage of the House might result in all the exposure going to Mr. Diefenbaker and Mr. Caouette.

PRESSES FOR FUNDS

Mr. Mongrain pressed for funds to allow all MPs to engage secretaries to handle their constituency business. Another Liberal, Grant Deachman (Vancouver Quadra) agreed. Research assistants would be particularly helpful on House committee work.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) noted the "doubling" of the prime minister's staff. He did not criticize this but said opposition MPs also need assistance.

Andre Ouellet (L—Montreal Papineau) sought secretarial help for the constituency work of MPs and also reimbursement for phone calls made within ridings.

The Commons rose without completing study of the legislature estimates. It was to turn Monday to treasury board estimates, giving the opposition the widest range in questioning of government spending.

Young SC Member Fights Cabinet for Leadership

By ELINOR READING

EDMONTON (CP) — Twenty-five years ago, Social Credit MLAs met in caucus to choose a premier of Alberta. Their choice, Ernest Manning, was a foregone conclusion.

In three weeks, Dec. 4, 1,700 members of the same party will meet to undertake the same job. About the only feature the two events have in common is the absence of public fanfare.

When the durable Mr. Manning announced his intention to retire Sept. 29, he added:

"Until the convention elects a new leader, my present cabinet will continue to conduct the affairs of government under my direction, without disruption or interruption of any kind."

The four candidates from his cabinet have done just that, in a decorous campaign that up to now has looked less like a power struggle than a rehearsal for one.

In contrast is backbencher Walter Buck who took a leave of absence from his dental practice to conduct a campaign based largely on his relative youth. Elected for the first time last year from the Edmonton suburb of Clover Bar, the 37-year-old Dr. Buck is bound by no ties to previous cabinet decisions or even to the government's long-term legislative record.

HAVE LESS TIME

His opponents, however, have had to sandwich campaign trips between committee and executive council meetings.

They are:

—Attorney-General Edgar Gerhart, 44, with 15 years' experience in the legislature and another 18 months in the cabinet;

—Education and Labor Minister Raymond Reierson, 49, with 16 years in the legislature, including 13 in the cabinet;

—Municipal Affairs Minister Harry Strom, 54, an MLA for 13 years and a cabinet minister since 1962;

—Highways Minister Gordon Taylor, 58, a 28-year veteran of the legislature and a cabinet member for 18.

Mr. Strom appears to have an edge in campaign organization and cabinet support. He was the only one to announce his candidacy with a fully-staffed campaign office, complete with printed brochures and letterheads for "the Strom team." Five ministers have said they support him and one, Youth Minister Robert Clark, is his campaign director.

SOFTENS CONTENTION

Public contention among the candidates has been softened by at least two other factors besides their cabinet commitments.

The Manning brand of businesslike administration has tended to advance men able to work out quiet compromises. Mr. Reierson and Mr. Taylor relish scrappy debates in the legislature but the cabinet has no record of public disagreement.

More important, as Mr. Gerhart noted in a recent interview, the contest depends not on a public campaign but on the 1,700 delegates to the Dec. 4-6 convention.

Mr. Taylor is the only candidate seeking public support through mass advertising.

Trudeau: A Big Reply To the Big Question

By KEN CLARK

OTTAWA (CP)—Since Parliament reopened Sept. 12 Prime Minister Trudeau has proven himself an adept and resourceful operator in the daily Commons question period.

The Liberal leader fields questions neatly as opposition MPs attempt to embarrass the government with searching queries.

Mr. Trudeau seldom comes off second best in the verbal jousting, which frequently boils down to a spirited game of one-upmanship.

It is important for Mr. Trudeau to be a consistent winner if he is to maintain the respect and admiration of his own members, on whom his tenure ultimately depends. No prime minister can afford to be put down daily by opposition ripostes.

Each day, almost, Mr. Trudeau must come up with the Big Reply to the Big Question, in order to give his supporters the opportunity to bang their desks in applause, thereby assisting in the process of discomfiting the opposition parties.

If Mr. Trudeau is up to form, the opposition attempts to put him in a bad light amounting to a bootless game. Mr. Trudeau is as good in debate as he is mediocre in set-piece speeches.

HARD TO SCORE

Although finding it difficult to score cute debating points at the expense of Mr. Trudeau, the opposition is considerably more successful in putting him on the defensive on policy matters.

This is done by questions designed to show weakness in government policy of its administration. Careful, probing questions or a sequence of them go hand in hand with the one-upmanship game.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield uses this method, asking a single question, then following it with three, four or even five supplementaries to drive home a crack in the government armor.

The Stanfield series method is frequently directed at the prime minister, who by the unwritten rules of the game is obliged to answer each question. He would lose ground by not answering, a right of cabinet ministers.

Opposition question-period fire is largely directed at the prime minister because he is the chief government spokesman. The buck stops with him.

But Mr. Trudeau is getting more than his share because of the rotation system he introduced which keeps half the cabinet away from most question periods tending their departments.

GETS MOST QUERIES

When a particular minister is not present to answer a particular question, the opposition members direct it instead to the prime minister, who tries to be there every day.

It puts the pressure on Mr. Trudeau. Last Tuesday he was on his feet 34 times in the 40-minute question period with brief and long replies to questions. That is an inordinately high figure compared with the experience of previous administrations.

However, even this question-period workload rebounds a little to the advantage of Mr. Trudeau, since it leaves the impression with the spectators in the gallery that here is a man who has his finger on everything.

Because the heavy action inside permits him to make newsworthy comments, Mr. Trudeau gets a lot of television time. For the cameras outside the Commons, he repeats and elaborates what he said inside.

His dominance of question period is further carried to the public through newspaper stories. The net effect is an impression of one-man government, whether it be accurate or not.

8 CARD OF THANKS

The gratitude in my heart can never be fully expressed, but I want my friends and neighbours to know how much their kind acts and expressions of sympathy have meant to me during my recent time of trial and sorrow in the sudden loss of my dear husband, Tony Sorensen. Sincere appreciation to Mr. A. V. Barr and fellow workers, and to Rev. F. W. Hayes and McCall Bros. — Mrs. Else Sorensen.

Miss Anna Ewart, Glenwarren Private Hospital, 1230 Balmoral Road wishes to thank all the kind friends for their birthday greetings received on her hundredth birthday.

The family of the late Mrs. R. H. French wish to thank all those who were so kind to Mum during her long illness and those who were so thoughtful to us when the end came. Special thanks to Clovelly Terrace nursing home and Dr. Shorting. Nobody could have done more for her than you did and we are deeply grateful. Thank you one and all.

9 IN MEMORIAM

BILLINGS — In memory of my dear wife, Gladys, who passed away last year on November 17th, 1967.

I miss you terribly honey, but I thank God for the years we had together.

—Bert.

DAY — In loving memory of Leonard R. Day who passed away on November 18th, 1956.

The depths of sorrow we cannot tell,
Of the loss of one we loved so well,
And while he sleeps a peaceful sleep,
His memory we shall always keep.

—Ever remembered by Harvey and Mary.

DAY — In loving memory of Leonard R. Day who passed away Nov. 16th, 1953.

His memory is as dear today,
As in the hour he passed away.

—Sadly missed by his loving wife Jeanie, sons, Tom and Don; daughter, Mary, mother, brother and sister.

GRAY — In loving memory of my wife Helen Esther, who left suddenly on 17th November, 1967.

God saw she was getting weary,
He did what he thought best;
He put his arms around her
He put his arms around her
And whispered, come and rest.
The golden gates stood open,
One year ago tonight,
And with goodbyes left unspoken
She gently slipped away.

—Sadly missed by her loving husband Alex.

This is better than new. The grounds are like a park and the lot is so long you can even offer some of your land for sale to adjacent property owners. Close-in, just by a small park, near schools and shops this is a fine family home. The living room is so restful with W-W and the kitchen is most modern bright and large. Even the big double-sized range goes with it. Two lovely bedrooms with one leading out a sliding glass door to a wonderful sundeck, all surrounded by a glass wind-break. In the basement is a finished bedroom, plus another improvised sleeping room, making up to 4 bedrooms. But if you wish, one bedroom upstairs is now used as a lovely TV den, and suits a retired couple. Really Del and I would encourage you to see this. Young couples, let us explain how Crown can take your house in trade on this lovely home. Reduced to $19,900.

The beautiful lawn, the 20 ft. wide driveway leading to the double carport, the painted cedar siding and the cedar shingle roof (looks like a shake roof) make this home most attractive.
The extra wide cathedral entrance leads to the living and dining rooms panelled in light mahogany. The fireplace with its heatilator is the focal point. A 20x20 sundeck, over the carport, is off the dining room. The kitchen is large and modern. Double stainless steel sinks, plastic-finished birch cabinets and a lazy susan. The 4-piece coloured bathroom is large, efficient and attractive.
The bedrooms are large and all closets are louvered mahogany double-size folding doors.
All windows are baked-enamel aluminum with special screens. The home is fully insulated with no space wasted. The lovely garden is backed by towering trees. Low cost heating and perfect condition of this home are long-range assets.

Forged Cards Compel Replacement by UBC

VANCOUVER (CP) — New student identification cards have been issued by the University of B.C. following reports of mass forgery of cards issued earlier.

Arnie Myers, UBC information director, said Friday that police have been asked to investigate at the request of the attorney - general's department. He said the department was notified by UBC president Dr. Kenneth Hare.

Among uses to which forged cards are said by campus sources to have been put are:

- Border identification for U.S. draft dodgers entering Canada.
- Stealing books from UBC libraries.
- Convincing police the holder is a legitimate student and not a vagrant.
- Cashing forged cheques.

One campus source estimated there are about 1,200 forged cards in circulation.

Cost of issuing 20,000 new cards of a different style and color, which are effective Monday, is estimated at $5,000.

The student newspaper, the Ubyssey, says in an editorial "the card caper is a good idea botched."

It suggests it started as an assist to U.S. draft dodgers trying to cross into Canada—"a humane and worthwhile service to American youths.

"Some will inevitably cry about the morality of abusing trust, stealing cards, etc., but . . . we see nothing wrong in our helping American youth, by any means necessary, to escape their oppression."

Confession Too Late, Innocent Man Broke

VANCOUVER (CP) — A former Vancouver resident who was accused of murdering a Canadian woman in California has learned a California postman has confessed to the crime.

William Blakeman, 25, now living in Edmonton, said, "I used to think that justice was justice and nothing could go wrong. Now I know how much can go wrong."

Mr. Blakeman was accused March 6, 1967 of the murder of secretary Gloria Dawn Collins, 27, of Port Moody.

He stood trial in Santa Ana, Calif., for the murder of Miss Collins at a party in Fullerton, Calif.

After spending 5½ months in jail and $30,000 to defend himself, he was acquitted on Aug. 26, 1967.

The Santa Ana Register said California postman Levester Arnold Coley, 29, confessed to Mr. Blakeman's lawyer and John Bond of the Orange county public defender's office that he had killed Miss Collins.

Coley has been in jail since another murder.

'HIGH SOURCE'

The Register said the confession was verified by what it called a "high source" in the public defender's office.

Mr. Blakeman was also mentioned in connection with the Feb. 10, 1967 stabbings of 12-year-old Cecilia Wood and 26-year-old Carole Frank Gornell in Seattle.

On June 18, James Thompson, 28, turned himself in to authorities. He was later acquitted by reason of insanity of charges of first degree burglary and first degree assault.

Mr. Blakeman said he was happy with the developments in Santa Ana and in Seattle but that his happiness was tinged with some bitterness.

"There's a certain amount of bitterness but who do you blame? Do you blame society? It's just stupid to get mad at society," he said.

He said that as a result of the cost of his fight in the courts, he and his family are in debt. Part of the $30,000 was obtained by selling his mother's house in Vancouver.

Universities To Be Toured By Uvic Duo

Two officials of the University of Victoria are touring major physical education complexes this week.

Arthur Webb, campus planner, and Fred Martens, of the education faculty, will visit four university campuses to inspect athletic facilities.

They are planning a physical education complex for Uvic, let out for architectural designs two weeks ago.

With them on the tour is architect Alan Scott, of the Vancouver firm of Rhone and Iredale, designer for the complex.

The three will stop at Alma College in Alma, Michigan, McMaster University in Hamilton, the University of Waterloo (Ontario) and the University of Saskatchewan at Regina.

They will return Monday to report on their findings.

Athletic facilities at Uvic have been strained to capacity and enrolment in that section of the education faculty has been limited by the lack of space.

The university has mentioned no dates for construction of the complex, but hopes to have it under way as soon as capital grants are forthcoming.

'Reminder Of Hopes' For Uvic

Walter Koerner, Vancouver timber industrialist and chairman of the University of B.C. board of governors, said Friday he had presented a statue to the University of Victoria as "a reminder of my hopes for this university."

In a brief ceremony in front of the McPherson library, Mr. Koerner honored sculptor Mrs. Elza Mayhew as a native daughter of Victoria and "an outstanding artist."

He had donated a bronze work by Mrs. Mayhew, entitled Coast Spirit, to the University of Victoria a month ago.

Richard B. Wilson, chancellor of Uvic, told Mr. Koerner his "generosity is deeply appreciated by this university."

Also at the ceremony were Mrs. Koerner, Dean Robert Wallace, acting president of Uvic, Dean Jean-Paul Vinay, the Hon. Robert Mayhew, father-in-law of the sculptor, and other university officials.

Machines To Translate Languages?

The age of computers has created a question in the study of languages: Can a machine take a language apart and turn it into another tongue?

A linguist from the University of Texas will discuss the possibility Nov. 29 in a public lecture at the University of Victoria.

Prof. Wayn Tosh will speak on machine translation and linguistic theory in Room 101 of the MacLaurin Building (education-arts) at 2:30 p.m.

He will also conduct a seminar on models in machine translation during the morning for members of the linguistics department at Uvic.

His visit was announced by Dean Jean-Paul Vinay of the department of linguistics and the faculty of arts and science.

Answers to Previous Puzzle

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have a lovely outdoor aviary in which our two parakeets have been since early summer. At one end they do have a snug, draft-free shelter, but there is no heat out there.

We have had some cold nights already but we have left the birds out because they now just hate to be cooped up in a small indoor cage. So far the cold hasn't affected them a bit. Except maybe they are peppier than usual.

Having known a friend's budgie who died when the room temperature dropped to 55 one night, I wonder if our birds are just terrifically tough, or what?—L.B.

DEAR L.B.: Your birds are well acclimated. And that's at least half the battle when it comes to survival in adverse weather. The metabolism of a bird used to outdoor living is geared to handle fluctuating temperatures. They are less likely to develop serious respiratory infections than most pampered cage birds.

Frosty weather is of less concern than damp, windy weather. If your birds are basically healthy, free from parasites, and properly fed, they may make it through the winter right where they are.

However, it would be well to provide a small amount of heat (such as a covered light bulb) in one end of their shelter. This will fight dampness and help prevent frosty feet should the temperature drop too far.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: Just yesterday we discovered the first grey hair on our dog's muzzle. Jollie is just six and still acts puppish. This has made us wonder, though, doctor. How do you really tell when a dog is getting old? —W.F.

DEAR W.F.: Jollie just can't be considered ancient on the basis of one grey hair—nor on a muzzle-full for that matter. But greying is a clue she's well past puppyhood. Her chronological age would put her comfortably into the early middle years.

The most obvious signs of aging are those related to skin and coat changes. Worn teeth and-or cloudy eyes may be apparent. Vision or hearing may not be as sharp. Increasingly less exercise may be an indication of aging or simple laziness. (The two are often related.)

Jollie's doctor is not only the best one to spot early signs of aging, he is the logical one to suggest measures to postpone effects of this process for as long as possible.

★ ★ ★

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have heard that oleander can be dangerous to a dog. Is this true? If so, why?—I.I.

DEAR I.I.: Yes, but only if he eats it. The plant contains glycosides which may cause heart failure.

DEAR DR. MILLER. What does it mean when a female, spayed cat gets bald? Not on her head, mind you, but, of all places, on the back of her back legs! The skin looks just like all the rest of her skin and she doesn't fuss at it any. But Scoce is beginning to look slightly ridiculous when viewed from her back end. —L.L

DEAR L.L.: Speculations on the causes of a skin problem needn't be too dull; primarily because there usually is a wide choice of possibilities. For example: Scoces' balding behind could be due to a variety of causes. One of the most promising would be a sex hormone deficiency.

Or, it could be the result of a contact allergy, particularly if this pussy is prone to park her posterior on a potentially irritating compound such as floor wax, a detergent residue, or the like. (Of course many allergies do result in sufficient skin irritation to cause redness and scratching.)

Other considerations for the examining doctor would range from organic disease to anal gland infection.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Riel Hanged When Escape Failed

By BOB BOWMAN

Louis Riel first appeared in the limelight of Canadian history on October 11, 1869, when he stepped on a surveying chain and said "you go no farther." The limelight went out abruptly on November 16, 1885, when a chain of rope was placed around his neck in Regina prison and he was hanged for leading the North West rebellion. Perhaps lawyers sent from the east should have saved him. The charge was treason. They do not seem to have asked how he could have been guilty of treason when he had become a citizen of the U.S.A.? He had gone to Montana after leading the Red River uprising in 1869.

Bowman

An effort was made to save Louis Riel. Royal Canadian Mounted Police are apt to deny the following story because they have nothing on file to confirm it, but it is said that an arrangement was made to have Riel's North West Mounted Police guard turn their backs for a few minutes so he could be taken from the prison and rushed to the U.S. border by a relay of fast horses.

Who was behind the plan? Was it Prime Minister Macdonald who in 1874 was saying "Where is Riel? I wish I could lay my hands on him." Yet Macdonald was sending Riel money and urging him to go to the U.S.A.!

Was it Riel's great military leader in the rebellion, Gabriel Dumont? After the defeat of the rebels Dumont escaped to the U.S.A. but offered to return to Regina and stand trial in Riel's place. His offer was refused.

In any event, the escape plan was made impossible when an enemy of Riel heard about it and notified the authorities. They could not have closed their eyes even if they had wanted to do so.

The hangman was another enemy. When he put the noose around Riel's neck, he whispered, "Do you know me, Louis Riel? It is my turn today."

Other events on November 16:

1686—Quebec merchants began building ships to carry timber to France.

1814—Pierre Joubert, said to be 113 years 124 days old, died at Quebec.

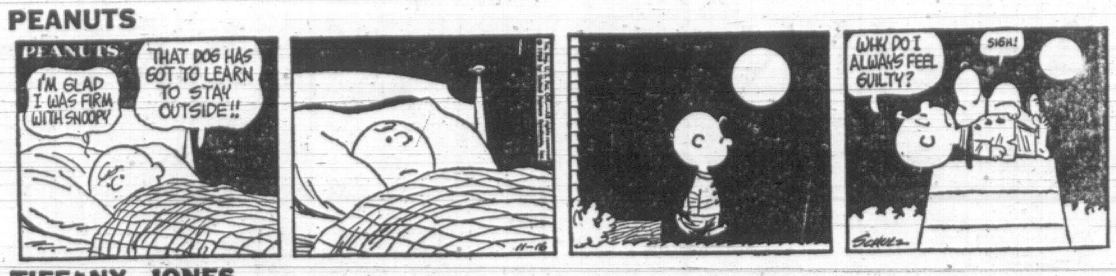

1837—Warrants were issued for arrest of Lower Canada rebellion leaders including Papineau.

1858—Famous "hanging judge" Begbie arrived in British Columbia.

1869—Red River "rebels" formed provisional government under Louis Riel.

United Appealers seem likely to push Canada's total well over the top this year despite lagging campaigns in some cities and ever-extending deadlines in others.

By Nov. 12, campaign chairman Herbert Balls reported 12 cities or areas had completed their drives and $43,672,536 of a record national objective of $49,370,000 had already been collected.

But in some centres campaigners for the combined charity drive were worried that their communities had not done enough to raise the national total. Finance Minister Benson's federal budget in late October, with its two-per-cent tax increase to take effect next year, also was blamed in part for a tightening of purse strings. One United appeal spokesman said timing of the budget, at the peak of the campaign, "couldn't have been worse."

In St. Catharines, Ont., the campaign was extended after the official drive ended with only $350,000 of a target $510,000 collected. Chairman John Bullivant aimed to challenge people "to pay their fair share" by a "get-tough" approach with housewives who claim their husbands give for both.

HIPPIES DRAW PROTEST

Many townspeople were reluctant to give, he figured, because they disliked one of the agencies sharing in the appeal. The St. Catharines branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association had been criticized for its support last year of a "digger" house for hippies and one woman protested giving money "to those lazy shiftless people."

For St. Catharines and other Ontario towns such as Kingston and Sarnia where campaigns appeared lagging, failure to meet targets means compromises in welfare goals already described as minimums.

On the West Coast, Victoria had only reached about 50 per cent of its goal of $655,000 by the early November deadline and extended the campaign period indefinitely. Spokesmen said they didn't know why the campaign was lagging behind last year's.

Vancouver extended its deadline after reaching about 80 per cent of its $3,650,000 objective at the end of the official campaign.

Deadlines also stretched out in the Maritimes and in Winnipeg, but Winnipeg's chairman D. S. Rogers was still confident the 1968 target would be reached.

"The dollar amount still required is represented by pledges from companies and individuals still to be collected," he said as the official campaign ended in early November, $434,000 short of the city's $2,993,000 objective.

Of the 12 communities that finished their drives, most were well over their targets and the key seemed to be imaginative campaigning or civic competition to beat other communities.

Brantford, Ont., had already gone $306 over its goal of $302,861 by Oct. 22 as Appealers rushed to fulfil their goal of first in Canada for the fifth year in a row.

WEYBURN WINS

But despite Brantford's enthusiasm, Weyburn, Sask., a town of 10,800 became the first in Canada to reach its goal by announcing five days earlier that it had achieved its target $19,550.

Toronto raised $11,401,827 to top its aimed-at $11,300,000 with a whole bustle of campaign gimmicks.

Students at Downsview high school may have had the most bizarre idea. They set up a kissing booth with three windows, allowing brave buyers of a 25-cent ticket to take their chances on getting to kiss a pretty girl, a scruffy boy or a dewey-eyed cocker spaniel.

Other areas completing their drives by early November were: Saint John, N.B., $341,904; Peel County, Ont., $242,000; Norfolk County, Ont., $43,200; Belleville, Ont., $120,463; Regina $77,591; Estevan, Sask., $25,693; Edmonton $1,639,572; Calgary $1,499,843.

Only Montreal, whose 120 federated agencies hold their appeal in the spring, fell short of its target with the campaign wound up.

Strikes Protest Pro-Soviet Stand

Tension Mounts In Czech Crisis

PRAGUE (AP)—Protest strikes were reported in suburban Prague and in Olomouc, central Moravia, as Czechoslovakia's Communist leaders waged a power struggle with pro-Soviet hardliners behind closed doors.

It was not immediately learned what action, if any, authorities planned to take. The government has banned demonstrations to try to maintain calm during a crucial party central committee meeting, now in its second day.

Czechoslovak military policemen with sub-machine-guns patrolled Prague streets and informants said the Czechoslovak army's 6,000-man Prague garrison was placed on the alert and all leaves cancelled.

Armored personnel carriers were noticed at one of the small Soviet military command posts in the city, but there was no confirmation of rumors that some Soviet units had returned to Prague from permanent camps in outlying areas.

Student leaders said the reports of army and police alerts made them realize that demonstrations would be suicidal. They announced plans for peaceful sit-ins, starting Sunday—one for a day to protest the ban on demonstrations, and another for up to three days if the central committee decisions are unfavorable.

ADOPT RESOLUTION

Numerous departments of Charles University in Prague also adopted a resolution to join factory workers immediately if the workers decide to demonstrate for political reasons.

Snatches of arguments in the 190-member central committee, released by radio and television, indicated Dubcek's supporters were fighting to defend his reform policies against attacks by hard-liners. Some members angrily demanded to know what leaders had invited the Soviets to invade their country for the purpose of quelling "counter-revolution." Many Czechoslovaks feared they were the dying gasps of free discussion.

Dubcek was reported to have announced new allegiance to "democratic centralism," the orthodox Communist principle that debate stops once the decision is made.

The decision in this case, the final resolution of the central committee, is due Sunday at the earliest.

More than 100 of the 140 members who had asked to speak remained to be heard from in the closed central committee meeting at Prague Castle.

Evzen Erban, head of the National Council, urged Friday "disciplined implementation" of the final central committee decisions.

'MAKES BLOOD BOIL'

Prof. Ivan Malek, director of the Prague Microbiological Institute, said the continued distribution of Soviet propaganda material containing distorted information and lies "makes people's blood boil."

Frantisek Pavlicek, manager of the Vinohrady Theatre in Prague, demanded to know what members of the central committee or government had invited the Soviet Union and other Warsaw pact countries to invade Czechoslovakia in August. The Soviets had said Czechoslovak Communists asked for outside help.

Josef Smrkovsky, National Assembly president, said Czechoslovak reformers had failed to

Press Gag Crucial —Dubcek

By KARL E. MEYER
The Washington Post

PRAGUE — Czechoslovak Communist leader Alexander Dubcek reportedly told the central committee of his party this week that he was to blame for not taking measures against "excesses" in the Czech press before the Soviet invasion of his country last Aug. 21.

At the same time, Dubcek was understood to have held his ground on the crucial question of party organization, saying that he would not favor reducing the size of the Czechoslovakian party despite Russian criticism that it is too big.

According to reliable sources, Dubcek at one point quoted Soviet Communist Party Chief Leonid Brezhnev as bluntly informing Czech leaders last August, "1,200,000 members are too much."

These key points about Dubcek's secret speech were learned Friday as the central committee continued its tense debates in meeting that could determine how much of the Dubcek regime's liberalizing program will survive Russian occupation.

PRESS CONTROL

It appeared that Czech leaders were prepared to make the greatest concessions in the area of press control, while mounting the greatest resistance to demands for reducing liberal-minded representation in the party itself.

This tendency was reflected in the text of a draft resolution which the central committee will vote upon tonight when the meeting ends.

The resolution reportedly repeats that main points of Dubcek's keynote speech with the important difference that seven Czechoslovak publications are explicitly censured for "tolerating" anti-communist articles.

Bankers Face Money Crisis In Gold Rush

LONDON (AP) — Anxiety about the French franc rubbed off on the United States dollar and the British pound today as the world's top bankers assembled in Basel, Switzerland, to discuss a growing monetary crisis.

Speculators rushed to get rid of francs, dollars and pounds, switching to gold, commodities and the West German mark, currently rated the safest of all paper money.

Financial commentators here said the market activity was the most fevered since the pound sterling was devalued exactly a year ago, despite official assurances that the franc will not be devalued.

SUPPORT SOUGHT

The meeting in Basel was to be a routine monthly session of central European bankers. But there have been persistent rumors that the West German mark will be revalued upward from its present level of about 25 American cents. France is expected to seek massive international support for the franc.

Swiss bankers reported they were inundated with orders for the West German marks. The Financial Times reported the French money market was showing signs of panic, with private banks cleared out of marks and Swiss francs.

One factor acting against the franc was fear that France may bring back exchange control, causing the rush to switch to other freely-convertible currencies or commodities. The French finance ministry denied it is even considering exchange control.

Another factor was the rise in the French cost of living, now running at five per cent a year.

France Closes Ranks With NATO Allies

BRUSSELS (CP) — The North Atlantic Treaty Organization today urged Russia, in the interests of world peace, to refrain from using force and interfering in the affairs of other states, a communique announced.

The communique, issued after a two-day meeting of the NATO ministerial council, added: "Determined to safeguard the freedom and independence of their countries, they (the members of NATO) could not remain indifferent to any development which endangers their security.

"Clearly any Soviet intervention directly or indirectly affecting the situation in Europe or in the Mediterranean would create an international crisis with grave consequences."

The warning to Moscow was endorsed by all members of the alliance including France.

The two-day meeting ended with publication of the communique and a NATO spokesman said it had been approved by all delegations.

This was taken as an indication France had closed ranks with its allies following the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia.

SOLIDARITY NEEDED

The communique said: "So long as the Soviet leaders adhere to a policy of force, these new uncertainties will remain. The allies are convinced that their political solidarity remains indispensable to discourage aggression and other forms of oppression.

"Above all, they stand wholly determined to meet their common responsibilities and in accordance with the North Atlantic treaty, to defend the members of the alliance against any armed attack."

The communique said that the use of force and the stationing in Czechoslovakia of Soviet forces not hitherto deployed there aroused grave uncertainty about the calculations and intentions of the Soviet Union and demanded great vigilance on the part of NATO allies.

It said that the new uncertainties resulting from recent Soviet actions also extended to the Mediterranean basin.

"This situation requires that the Allies continue by every available means their efforts to promote stability and a just and equitable peace, as well as mutual co-operation and understandings, in the area.

"The expansion of Soviet activity in the Mediterranean, including the increased presence of Soviet naval units, requires vigilance to safeguard Allied security."

AIMED AT RUSSIA

The statement apparently was aimed at discouraging the Soviets from pursuing their "socialist commonwealth" doctrine.

Under this concept the Soviets could intervene militarily in a Communist country whenever they feel the interests of world communism are in danger, as they did last August in Czechoslovakia.

Informants said Friday there is evidence the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia caused widespread dismay among French officials.

President de Gaulle said two years ago French troops would no longer participate in the peacetime integration of NATO forces although he has repeatedly reaffirmed France's fidelity to the alliance and said French troops would fight alongside the Allies in a war.

Although de Gaulle withdrew two divisions in West Germany from Allied control in 1966, the troops have remained in West Germany under a special agreement with the Bonn government.

Weatherman Snow Job?

Up at the Gonzales weather office they're saying there isn't much chance of snow.

On the other hand, there's been a powder of snow on Salt Spring this week above the 700-foot level, also at Crofton, and Friday there was mixed snow and rain at Cassidy.

Just on a hunch we asked the weatherman whether he'd put anti-freeze in his car yet.

"Yep, yesterday ... snow tires, too."

NEW ALERT LINK ORDERED BY NATO

BRUSSELS (Reuters)—A reserve communications system is being built somewhere in England to back up a communications system linking allied capitals with NATO headquarters in Brussels, informed sources said today.

The sources said it will be 12 to 18 months before the backup system is ready for operation. They declined to name the location for security reasons.

Red Feather Fund Exceeds $500,000

New hope that the United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal's target might still be reached was voiced Friday by campaign chairman Robert Hutchison.

Following his statement Thursday that the appeal will probably fall $40,000 short of its $655,000 goal, B.C. government employees turned in $19,000, cutting the projected deficit by some $2,000.

Mr. Hutchison said he had expected about $17,000 from the government employees and that he was pleasantly surprised by the $2,000 "bonus."

"If more people begin to respond like this, and I think many will, we will come a lot closer to the goal than we thought."

The goal "is not completely out of reach" if the canvassers and the community can get together during the campaign's final surge, he said.

Mayor Hugh Stephen of Victoria emphasized this Friday when he urged Victoria citizens to support the appeal.

"If there exists any one test of a community's true character and conscience it will surely be found in its annual response to the United Appeal," he said.

HUMAN VIRTUES

If we fail to meet this test, he added, we would be branded "as a people lacking in those human virtues which respond impulsively and generously to the needs of our less fortunate fellow men and women."

"God forbid we should be found lacking in answering that simple challenge."

To date $517,755 or 79 per cent of the $655,000 objective has been collected.

Three Teenage Girls Drown as Car Flips

LANGLEY (CP)—Three teen-age girls were killed Friday night when the car they were riding in spun off the Fraser Highway in Langley and landed upside down in a ditch filled with rain water.

Police said the water measured up to four feet deep.

Three other youths who were in the car were taken to hospital with minor injuries.

The victims were Sandra Ellen Jenkins, 16, of Surrey; Jenny Theresa Koopman, 13, of Langley, and Sandra Marie Schmitke, 20, of Calgary.

Miss Schmitke, driver of the car, was visiting her parents in Surrey.

By WILLIAM R. MACKAYE
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Roman Catholic bishops Friday denounced the nuclear arms race as "irrational," and urged the government to abandon "the present international war system."

They urged the substitution of massive support for worldwide economic development.

Development, the prelates wrote in an echo of Pope Paul VI, is "the modern word for peace."

In a dramatic and skeptical critique of the present assumptions of U.S. national defence policy, comprising the second half of their pastoral letter, the bishops:

● Advocated outright abolition of the peacetime draft in favor of a volunteer army.

● Denounced the administration's decision to build an anti-ballistic system and suggested that efforts to maintain nuclear superiority are no longer "meaningful for security."

● Appealed to the United States and other nations to abandon "the present international war system," in both its hot and cold forms.

Addressing themselves specifically to the war in Vietnam, the bishops said they welcomed the bombing halt and prayed for the success of the peace negotiations.

One moral lesson to be drawn from that conflict, they suggested, is that "military power and technology do not suffice, even with the strongest resolve, to restore order or accomplish peace."

Another lesson, they said, might be that "some evils existing in the world ... under-nutrition, economic frustration, social stagnation and political injustices, might be more readily ... corrected through non-military means, rather than by military efforts to counteract the subversive forces bent on their exploitation."

In a second proposal on draft law, the bishops endorsed the principle of selective conscientious objection.

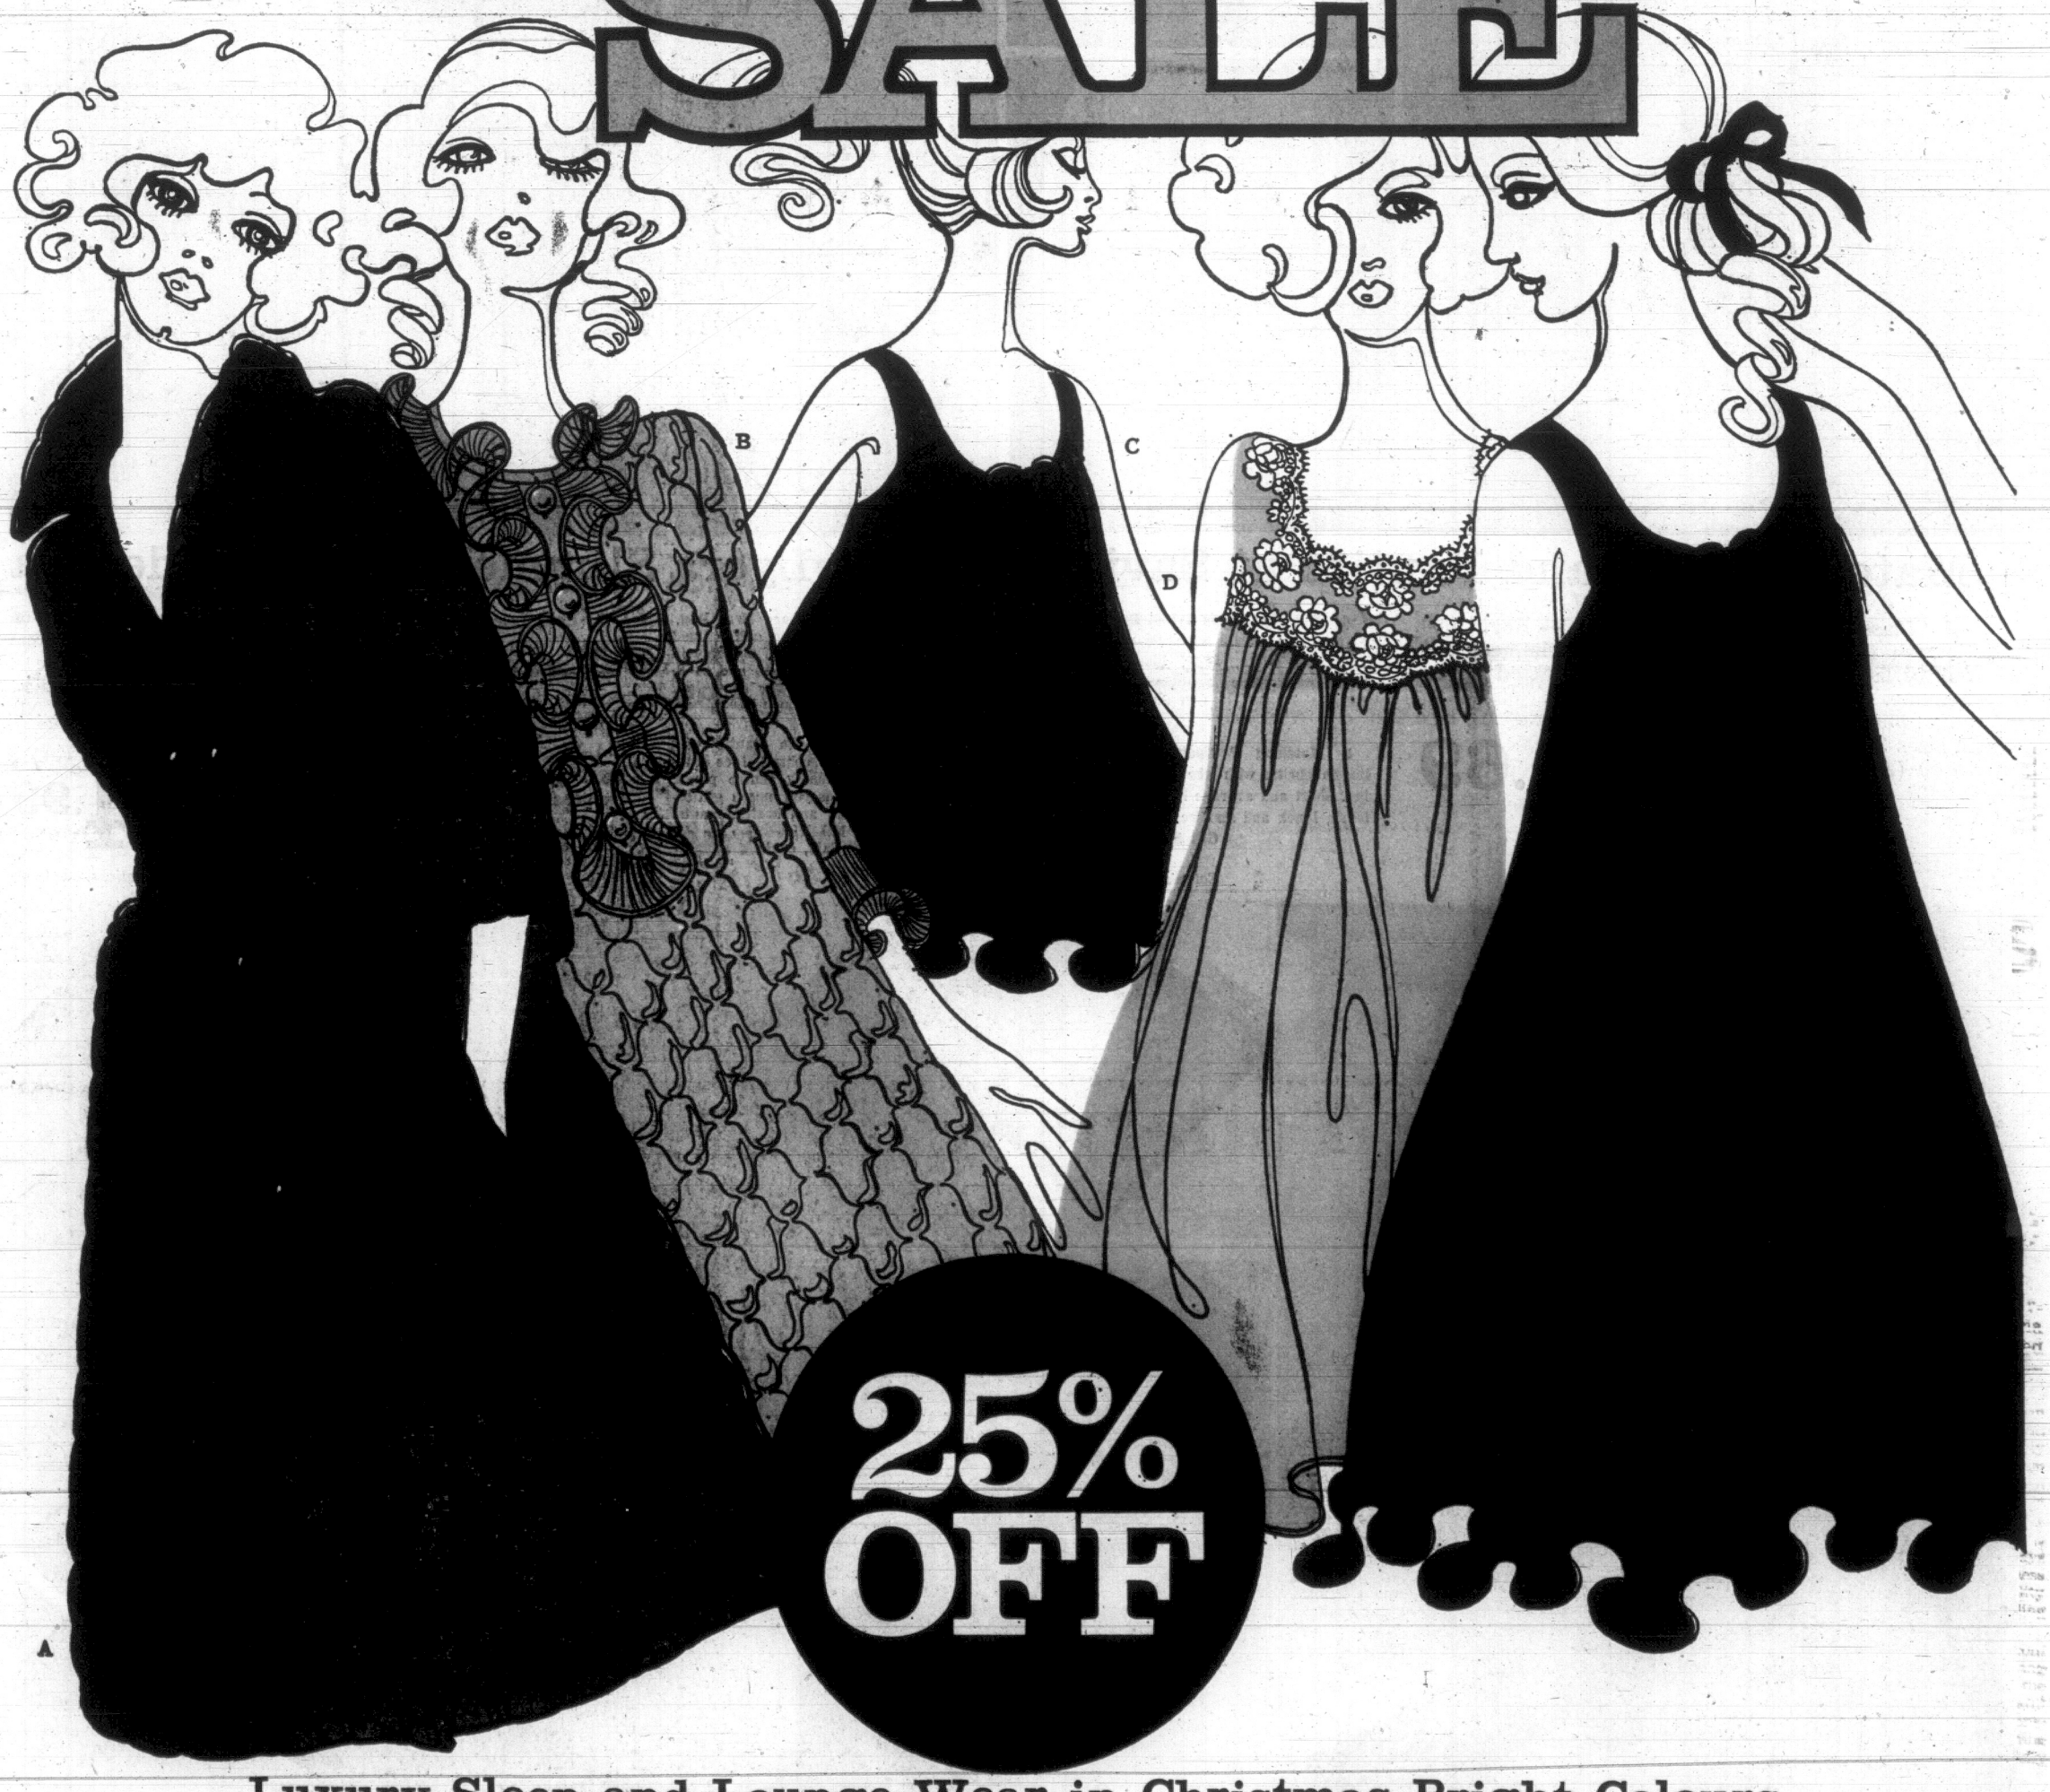

They said U.S. law should permit men "to refuse—without fear of imprisonment or loss of citizenship—to serve in wars which they consider unjust or in branches of service (e.g., the strategic nuclear forces) which would subject them to the performance of actions contrary to deeply held moral convictions about indiscriminate killing."
